A picture in yesterday's paper, showing a Vietnamese nurse attending to the wounds of a small child that had been shot in the stomach by Viet Cong terrorists, was a reminder that there is more to the war in Vietnam than the American "terror" we hear so much about.

A total of 128 South Vietnamese were killed as a result of Viet Cong terrorism during one recent week. The dead included two village chiefs, one village chief's assistant and three policemen; the rest were ordinary villagers.

The same week saw 86 South Vietnamese wounded at the hands of Viet Cong terrorists. The wounded included one hamlet chief, three village officials and two policemen. In addition, 100 people were abducted by the Viet Cong.

So far this year, Viet Cong have been credited with 900 South Vietnamese dead, 1,512 wounded and 1,315 abducted.

Immigrants Total 44,000

Ottawa Citizen

Statistics for the first three months of 1967 show that Immigration to Canada is up almost 50 per cent over last year — nearly 44,000 arrivals, compared with 30,000 in 1966.

There's nothing particularly surprising about immigrants from British leading the list. But otherwise, how things have changed. No longer is there a flood from the Netherlands. Instead, Canada is getting more Greeks than Germans, more Portuguese than Frenchmen, more Italians than Americans.

Even more intriguing are some of the other countries of origin. One immigrant came from what are discreetly called the Lesser British Isles. And one each came from the Society Islands, the Virgin Islands (British) and the Virgin Islands (USA). Presumably they will find company in the single immigrants from Latvia, Malawi, Sierra Leone, Brunei, Papua, Costa Rica, New Caledonia and Loyalty Islands, Surinam, and Ecuador.

Sir Seewoosagur Ramgoolam will be interested to note that immigration from Mauritius has increased this year on less than 13-fold—to a total of 13. But Haile Selassie will find a different story. Last year, there were two immigrants from Ethiopia. This year, there has been none — just state visitors.

A Gem of a Fellow!

Hamilton Spectator

Athletes and actors are normally the most ungrateful of persons. Whenever they are praised to the skies by members of the news media they seldom if ever send along a "thank you" note. But, if they are attacked or even mildly criticized, their screams are enough to turn hardbers green with envy.

With the above background in mind, you can well imagine our surprise when we heard of an athlete being presented with a citation for being "sporting, friendly and co-operative." His name is Martin Gonzales and he's a soccer player. The citation, given to him by Paraguay's sports editors, made envisible reading:

"Never once did he challenge the accuracy of his reported 'quotes'.

"Never once did he complain about adverse comment on his play.

"Never once did he fail to greet even his harshest critics with a beaming smile."

A couple of days ago Gonzales accepted his award with a beaming smile. And in a short speech, he casually let slip the reason for his charming attitude to the Confederation of the Press.

Quebec Premier's Campaign For 'Associate State' Status

OTTAWA (CP) — Quebec's stinging attack on the federal government last week over the signing of a cultural agreement with Belgium is the latest in a series of attempts to assert an independence in international affairs.

Premier Daniel Johnson has been talking in ever - louder terms in his campaign for support for his French-speaking province what he has termed "associate state" status within Canada.

The Belgian agreement was signed during the state visit here of Prince Albert of Liege, brother of King Baudouin.

Mr. Johnson claimed that the pact for the promotion of artistic, technological and scientific exchanges infringed on provincial authority in education. He said Ottawa used the royal visit to crush provincial jurisdiction.

"The federal government cannot expect a province of my delegate to it the powers to engage in fields under our jurisdiction such as a natural resources, education and culture."

He rejected Ottawa's arguments that no provincial fields were involved in the Belgian agreement.

Mr. Johnson also startled the federal government last week by announcing that he intends to exert Quebec control over television, radio and movies within the province. It was the first time federal authority over broadcasting had been challenged.

Alone among the provinces, Quebec has resisted the development of shared-cost programs between Ottawa and the provinces, with Ottawa handling administration. It has forced the federal government to "opt out" clauses in the programs, giving Quebec access to special payments to sponsor the programs within the province.

Premier Johnson has also threatened a boycott of the Supreme Court of Canada on the grounds that its nine judges are federal appointees. When Ottawa referred to the court the question of who should control offshore mineral rights, Quebec refused to present its case. The other provinces were ahead regardless and a decision is being awaited.

Earlier this year Quebec served notice in the legislature that it will take over all corporations, now paid to all at age 68 by the federal welfare department, if the government has not yet made a formal move on this matter.

It does, however, operate its own compulsory contributory pension plan matching one introduced by Ottawa two years ago.

Critics of the Quebec campaign say it is causing unduly duplication of administration.

Canadian Implication

U.S. Dairy Move Could Put Squeeze on Cheddar Imports

WASHINGTON (CP) — Agriculture Secretary Orville Freeman asked the U.S. tariff commission Monday to tighten import quotas on assorted commercial dairy products. He urged speed.

Foreign "evasions" of the import quota system are hurting United States dairy farmers and undermining with the price support program, he testified to the commission.

Chief suppliers are Australia, New Zealand and Europe. But there are implications for Canada as well.

Freeman, backed by dairy-state congressmen and farm groups, asked for a ban on imports of commercial mixes of butterfat and sugar—which he said could total 160,000,000 pounds this year, or the equivalent of 2,000,000,000 pounds of milk.

Canada last year supplied more than 30,000,000 pounds of such mixes, used primarily for ice cream. But it was mixed in bond from foreign butterfat and then transshipped.

Freeman also urged that a type of cheese called Colby be brought into the quota system and added to the quota allotted now to cheddar cheese from other countries.

This could lead to a squeeze on the Canadian cheddar quota of about 613,000 pounds a year, most of it the Canadian specialty, aged cheddar.

In the first four months of this year, the U.S. government had had to spend $169,000,000 purchasing the equivalent of 3,000,000,000 pounds of milk under its price-support program. Without tighter quotas, "we estimate the department will buy 6,000,000,000 pounds at a cost of more than $300,000,000 this year."

Considerable U.S. farm discontent, manifested recently in the dairy sector by programs to dump milk, was cited in testimony by Republican Congressman John Byrnes of Wisconsin.

He called the U.S. dairy program "stupid" and recalled that just a year ago President Johnson, in an effort to halt rising consumer prices, relaxed import quotas for Canadian and other cheddar cheese.

The president also asked the tariff commission to study a more prolonged suspension of the quotas.

The report was never made public after farm criticism appeared in last year's congressional election.

Construction Companies Retaliate With Lockout

TORONTO (CP)— Thirty heavy construction companies told about 500 workers Monday they will be locked out today in retaliation for a strike last week against four subway contractors.

The strike Friday was staged by members of Local 183 of the International Laborers Union in their battle for wage increases.

Sewer, waterworks and road contractors are expected to join in the lockout, bringing the total number of affected employees close to 4,000, including truck drivers and hoisting engineers.

Strike action by structural steel erectors and reinforcing rodmen is still being held off in their demands for wage increases.

The Toronto local of the Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Ironworkers said about 35 independent contractors have agreed to union demands.

The iron workers want a rock-bottom increase of $1.27 an hour over a two-year period to bring their current base rate to $4.90 an hour by 1969.

that domestic industries will face because of lower Canadian tariffs offered at Geneva.

Those will only become public when members of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade now to Geneva themselves for talks that the trade minister claimed made a "constructive contribution to negotiations."

He said tariff cuts have been won from the U.S., the European Common Market, Japan and other countries, conferring benefits on all sectors and regions of Canada.

"The degree to which this applies depends upon our diligence and skill in pursuing the opportunities."

Trade department officials have said that Canada's major goals at Geneva were maximum reductions in U.S. tariffs and a substantially better wheat agreement.

Mr. Winiers told reporters Monday night he is satisfied on both counts.

The average Canadian can hope to benefit from the tariff changes through reduced prices in many of the foreign-made goods he buys.

He said "we need action from the government to stop this situation."

Last week Dominion Textile Co. Ltd. of Montreal cut the price of some of its heavyweight blends of polyester-and-cotton fabrics to its thousands of customers across Canada.

Nickel Increase Forecast

SAN FRANCISCO (CP)—Further increases in the price of nickel would seem likely, Monday by H. J. Fraser of Toronto, president of Falconbridge Nickel Mines Ltd.

In an address to the Financial Analysts' Federation, Mr. Fraser said nickel prices have been held steady by the high price of copper, since most nickel-producing producers also get substantial revenue from a copper byproduct.

"With a declining copper price and climbing costs for materials, equipment and labor, further upward adjustments in the nickel price seem inevitable," he said.

Canadian producers, who supply about 75 per cent of the world's nickel, increased prices about 10 per cent, to 85¼ cents a pound, last autumn, following new wage contracts. Copper prices rose during the last half of 1966 to 96¾ cents a pound from 42 cents a pound.

Expo Reunites Chinese Girl And Canadian Godmother

MONTREAL, May 17 (Expo 67) — Expo has brought together a Canadian godmother and her 21-year-old Chinese goddaughter.

The girl, Cynthia Ho, is one of 12 hostesses at the pavilion of the Republic of China. Her godmother, Mrs. Leslie J. Stuart, who hadn't seen Cynthia since she was a baby, is a confectionor of women's activities for Expo 67.

Cynthia was born in Boston when her father, Tom Ho, an army officer, spent three years in the Chinese and Montreal buying equipment for the Chinese government. . .

When the first arrived in Montreal, he was befriended by Mrs. Stuart. One Sunday, returning from church, she noticed a fellow bus passenger frequently consulting a map. She offered to be of any assistance and learned that he was travelling to Montreal West to see the flowers. It was November and there were few flowers still blooming. "To overcome any disappointment he might have felt, Mrs. Stuart invited Col. Ho to her home for lunch.

A friendship sprang up between the colonel and the Stuarts and when Mrs. Ho came to America she received a warm welcome too. When Cynthia was born, the Stuarts became her godparents.

When the Ho family returned to Chunking, the friendship between the families continued through letters and photographs. The Stuarts watched the growth of their pretty goddaughter and her younger brother over the last 20 years and the Hos have collection of pictures of the three Stuart children.

Cynthia's Chinese name, Hsi-Chun, means America - Canada.

Reunion at Expo

Mrs. Leslie J. Stuart catches up on the news from her godchild, Cynthia Ho, 21, a hostess at the pavilion of the Republic of China. Cynthia was born in Boston but grew up in Formosa. She is one of 12 hostesses chosen from 650 applicants.

Beloved Monarch of Netherlands, Queen Juliana, Visiting Canada

By CAROL KENNEDY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Queen Juliana of The Netherlands, who returns today on a Centennial Year visit to Canada, the country that gave her wartime refuge, is a democratic, motherly monarch who rules almost as much by personal affection as by constitutional right.

She and her breezy, energetic consort Prince Bernhard have felt the Dutch throne has ceremoniously severed itself in recent years over controversies involving the royal family, but Juliana is so widely beloved that it has been said even her republican-minded subjects would want her as president.

Now 57, the bespectacled Juliana has ruled Holland since the 1948 abdication of her mother Queen Wilhelmina, who died in 1962. She's a nonsense sovereign who dislikes excessive formality, and one of the first things she did was abolish curtsies at court.

Wilhelmina used to complain in her youth that she lived in a cage. Juliana has taken care to preserve an informal family life at Soestdijk Palace, a former hunting - lodge in the heart of the Dutch countryside. In adult age, she is still a keen skier and swimmer.

The young Juliana had a wide-ranging education, studying law, literature, philosophy and hydraulic engineering at the University of Leyden, later attended by her daughters Beatrix and Margriet.

Her 1937 marriage to the German princeling Bernhard of Lippe Biesterfeld, whom she met on an Austrian skiing holiday, was initially unpopular because of the Nazi regime, but Bernhard quickly won the trust and affection of the Dutch people.

Echoes of the same situation came last year when Crown Princess Beatrix married West German diplomat Claus von Amsberg.

When Nazi troops invaded Holland in May, 1940, the royal family went into exile — Wilhelmina and Bernhard in England and Juliana and her two small daughters in Canada. The Earl of Athlone, then Governor-General, was a cousin of Wilhelmina.

Juliana settled into a house in Ottawa's Rockcliffe Park where Beatrix later attended primary school, picking up a trace of a Canadian accent, and young Irene, born in 1939, attended nursery school.

Bernhard, heading a the Dutch 'resistance movement from London, made several trips to see his family. In January, 1943, a third daughter, Margriet, was born in Ottawa's Civic Hospital, scene of which was declared extra - territorial by the Canadian government to calm the problem of the baby's nationality.

Juliana and her family returned home after the German surrender in May, 1945. In those five years a special link had been forged between Canada and The Netherlands, still expressed annually in gifts of Dutch tulips to the city of Ottawa.

In the 1950s Juliana made a nostalgic journey back to Canada, during which she toured Ontario's Dutch settlements.

Sadness struck the family in 1947 when Juliana's fourth daughter, Maria Christina, was born almost blind. The tragedy of "Marijke" affected Juliana so much that in 1956 she became deeply involved with a faith-healer named Greet Hofmans, a woman of confidence at court was compared by some Dutch with that of Rasputin over the last czarina of Russia.

The episode nearly caused a constitutional crisis.

Although a shrewd business woman — she is reputed to be the richest woman in the world, with a personal fortune estimated at $500,000,000—Juliana turned somewhat mystical as a result of this experience, becoming fascinated by psychic-scientific lore of all kinds.

Wilhelmina used to say of Bernhard that his special quality was "drive and ingenuity in difficult situations." A onetime public relations man for the German I. G. Farben Chemical Works, and now his country's top salesman, 55-year-old Bernhard lives up to his own dictum: "People have no use for royalty who don't work."

Since 1960 he has made at least one major overseas sales trip each year, pushing Dutch exports with a hard - selling flair far removed from Prince Philip's regal showing - the - flag tours.

His conversation is spattered with such sentences as: "Goodwill visits are impractical, but their value can't be measured percentage-wise."

For all his businesslike manner, he has no liking for Scandinavian - style egalitarianism in the monarchy.

"I don't go in for riding bicycles down the main street."

Advising Dutch Expo on the problems of being a royal consort, he once said: "In this job you need the hide of an elephant." Like Philip he is a skilled pilot — RAF - trained, he flown jets for 26 years — and also takes an active interest in promoting arts and sciences.

He holds honorary law doctorates from two Canadian universities — Montreal and British Columbia.

An enthusiastic backstage worker for European unity, he also runs the Bilderberg conferences, secret international forums at which statesmen and business leaders meet to hammer out world problems.

Study Guild Hears Outline for Expo Trip

Suggestions for a three-day visit to Expo were presented to Mrs. L. W. Lantz and Mrs. G. E. Maybee at the Belleville Women's Study Guild meeting at the home of Mrs. L. P. Reid.

Guild members, using the Expo provided, followed a planned three-day tour of Expo, which suggested visiting four main attractions each day, including two theme buildings. The first day's plan suggested beginning with a tour by Expo Express and Minirail, viewing on the way the Air Canada, Japan, Iran, and U.S.A. pavilions; a visit to Man the Creator to see world art treasures, to Labyrinth, which tells the story of man; to the Israel and Christian pavilions, Man the Provider pavilion, or a walk past the pavilions of the U.S.S.R., Tunisia, Ethopia and Venezuela. After dinner it was suggested the visitor might consider a choice of World Festival Nights.

The plan for the second day suggested a visit to La Ronde, perhaps taking in the Sky Ride, the Dolphin Pool and Aquarium, a brief look at Le Village, a ride in Hovercraft, a visit to Man and the Community, Habitat '67, the Russian and U.S.A. pavilion, a stroll in the rose garden or a special day activity, or a visit to the Telephone pavilion. The evening might be spent profitably at La Ronde Park, enjoying free fireworks on Dolphin Lake, witnessing the bandit jail break, and marvelling at the beauty of the Dancing Waters.

The plan for the third day called for a ride by Expo Express to Ile Sainte Helene for a relaxing visit in Swan Lake, a view Alexander Calder's sculpture; a tour of Man the Explorer and Telephone pavilion, Operations Control Centre, the Boy Scout pavilion; trip at noon by Expo Express to Ile Notre Dame to visit the Czechoslovakian Pavilion, Man the Producer, Australia's pavilion, the British, French, Jamaican, African and Canadian pavilions.

Mrs. H. Seldon conducted the worship service on the theme of the Creator.

Canadian Council of the Blind Provides Opportunity for Sightless

DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: Some of your readers may have blind friends who do not know of the Canadian Council of the Blind and what it might do for them. This is an organization of clubs of blind persons, extending from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Club membership provides an opportunity for sightless Canadians to become actively interested in matters pertaining to their own welfare.

Ten blind persons can form a local club, in most instances financed by the Canadian National Institute for the Blind. Where the number of sightless persons is fewer than ten a Clubette may be formed and, under the wing of a nearby CCB club, enjoy a more satisfying life. Clubs plan programs which will encourage member participation, particularly among the newly blind, and will promote friendly association with sighted people.

This upgrading of life benefits the blind person and his family by making normal contacts for him. It breaks the isolation which too often results from blindness. Members dance, play games, share the fun with both sighted and sightless.

Further information may be obtained by writing to: The Canadian Council of the Blind, Box 2640, London, Ontario.

Life is too short to be spent in heartsease, especially when it can be brighter and happier. I know you are deeply interested in helping people, Doris, so here is another opportunity. — Sadie B. Harding, Editor, CCB Outlook.

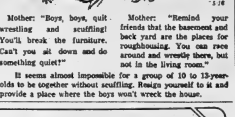
Dear Sadie: Thank you. I'm told that some prize ingenuity goes into adapting sports equipment, playing cards and so on to make them useful to blind people.

Let's hope many friends of sightless persons will read this letter of yours and start something exciting by dropping a note to OCB.

Dear Doris: Why do so many high school girls, often in their early grades, have such a frightful crush on some boys, often resulting in the farmer's becoming pregnant with fatal consequences to their education, and, at times, to their entire future?

For example, I know three sisters who have been through this shocking experience, and all three fathers of their babies refuse to marry them or even admit they are the fathers. — Jimmie the Bachelor.

Dear Jimmie: Are you blaming the girls for the crushes, or the boys for the rejection?



The answer is not in avoiding the topic of sex, but in helping our boys and girls to understand the dynamics they toy with. Which, you must admit, I pig away at.

As for the fathers-turned-chicken, those "shocking experiences" are a sad, and argument for marriage, anyway. Better to use the wise help of our social workers in arriving at the answer to this dilemma — the answer varies with each individual case.

Doris Clark, Master of Social Work, is a graduate of McGill, Toronto and McMaster and has had experience in social work. If you would like help with your problems, write to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Mother: "Boys, boys, quit wrestling and scuffling! You'll break the furniture. Can't you sit down and do something quiet?"

Mother: "Remind your friends that the basement and back yard are the places for roughhousing. You can race around and wrestle there, but not in the living room."

It seems almost impossible for a group of 10 to 13-year-olds to be together without scuffling. Resign yourself to it and provide a place where the boys won't wreck the house.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Smooth Jelly Made From Milk

By MARY MOORE

For months I have been thinking about making a jelly out of milk — smooth as custard, jellied to perfection and easy to prepare. This jelly will serve the purpose of blanc mange pudding, without any stodginess or trace of cornstarch taste. It could be the white layer in a ribbon jelly mould. It will make the perfect base for a fruit topped dessert. We served it under layered fresh frozen raspberries and my sister-in-law Wyn said, "May I have a little more of the white part please?"

After testing it twice and tasting it I am convinced that there are gourmet cooks in our audience who will reach for the scissors, clip this recipe, file it in their "Cold Desserts" file and put it to good use. Obviously it must be made in advance.

TUESDAY

Dinner Menu

Roasted Fresh Shoulder of Pork; Spiced Crab-apples; Pan Roasted Potatoes; Asparagus; Cheese Buns (see Mon.); Fresh Fruit Cup; Tea.

VELVET SMOOTH MILK JELLY

(serves 4 or 5; with suggestions for ribbon jelly)

1 envelope plus 1 tsp. plain gelatine
¾ cup milk
½ cup 18 per cent cream
¾ cup milk (second amount)
1 egg
⅓ cup sugar
½ tsp. almond extract

Soak the gelatine in the ¾ cup milk for 5 min. In a saucepan heat together the cream and ¾ cup milk to just below boiling point, and beat the egg with the sugar. Remove milk from heat. Stir the soaked gelatine mixture into the egg sugar mixture, then return this to the hot milk in saucepan. Stir over low heat for 5 min. Remove from heat, stir in almond extract. Pour into a 2 qt Scrap mould and chill until set.

Variations: 1) I used a fluted 3-cup mould, putting in drained whole maraschino cherries in the 12 little depressions in the bottom and poured ¼ cup of the prepared milk jelly in and chilled until cherries were set in it. Then I added the remaining jelly and chilled all. When this was turned out it was pretty with its crown of cherries.

2) Using a 4-cup mould I did the same as No. 1 Variation above, but when it was all set I added a top layer of Orange Jelly: dissolve thoroughly 1 pkge. orange jello in 1 cup boiling water. Add one 6-oz can fresh frozen orange juice concentrate, mix well and pour over jellied white layer and chill. When I made this variation I unmoulded it on a pure white serving plate and it was attractive and popular.

Ann Landers

Reader Resents Girl Being Called A Dog

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I never expected you, a person concerned with molding values for young people, to use a coarse and vulgar word when describing a girl who was not born with a bountiful measure of nature's blessing . . . namely good looks. You began your advice to a young man who wondered if he was obligated to take out a newcomer to the city, by saying . . . "if the girl is a dog . . ."

The term "Dog" for a plain-looking girl is a cheap and degrading manner of expression which I bitterly resent. I would like to know who sets the standards. By what shallow criterta are they judging? Some of the so-called "dogs" have a fine set of working brains and a sharp sense of humor. Several "dogs" I have known have sparkling personalities and are stimulating company.

How about setting an example for our young people by putting an end to such crass and thoughtless use of the language. — HOMELY HANNAH.

DEAR HANNAH: If a girl has a fine set of working brains, a sharp sense of humor and a sparkling personality, she is no dog.

Moreover, beauty is no guarantee that a girl will be popular. Many a good-looking dame is sitting home nights with her beautiful face and spectacular measurements because she is dumb, and poor company. (P.S. No letters please from you birds at Yale requesting the names and addresses of these dumb girls.)

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband and I both have grown children from previous marriages. We love them all, and they must love us, too, judging from the frequency of their visits. But now I have a problem and I hope your assistance.

Last night we had invited a couple to dinner. Both my husband and I were looking forward to the evening with three new friends whom he had hoped to get to know better. I prepared a beautiful meal. Just as we were enjoying some delightful conversation over our coffee, my husband's daughter and her family barged in.

The children looked like fugitives from a pig pen. They jumped on the furniture and demanded cake and soda pop, which they proceeded to spill on the chairs and sofa. They fought, screamed, pounded on the piano and ordered "Paw Paw" to give them a horsy-back ride on his shoulders.

The guests stuck it out for longer than I would have in someone else's home. I was chagrined, to say the least. Our grandchildren are normal and I am not criticizing them, I am, however, unhappy about not having been able to enjoy the evening with our guests. My husband says we cannot tell the children they are unwelcome at certain times because they would be hurt. Is there a solution, Ann? — MAW MAW.

DEAR MAW: Of course there's a solution, but it means putting your relationship on a mature, civilized basis, which is not easy once you have allowed your children to regard your home as an round-the-clock recreation centre.

Tell them you'd appreciate a telephone call before they come. This means of course that you must show them the same courtesy. Being related does not give people a license to impose on each other, but it's amazing how many folks believe otherwise.

Inquest Is Ordered in Toronto Death Shulman Earlier Ruled Was Accident

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. Fred Cruickshank, acting chief Metropolitan Toronto coroner, today ordered an inquest into a Jan. 15 death which Dr. Morton Shulman, former chief coroner, said required no inquest.

Dr. Cruickshank said he first ordered an inquest on Jan. 16 after he had investigated the death of David Strongman, 21, in his car in the garage of the Strongmans' suburban Etobicoke home.

Dr. Cruickshank said he was told at the time by Dr. Shulman that no inquest was necessary.

Dr. Shulman said Monday "police were satisfied there was no need of an inquest, as was I."

He said Dr. H. B. Cotnam, Ontario supervising coroner, was fully informed of the facts of the death at the time.

"This was a freak accident which would not repeat itself in 100 years. The case is an example when not to hold an inquest—when it can save no future lives and can produce only anguish to the parents and expense to the public."

W. Morley Strongman, the dead man's father, objected to the inquest which Dr. Cruickshank has scheduled for May 26.

"If there were to be an inquest, it should have been held 3½ months ago," Mr. Strongman said. "I see no need of this inquest. I am satisfied that my son's death was accidental."

Cotnam said Monday an inquest should be held.

"Dr. Cruickshank discussed this death with me several times and I fully agree that there should be an inquest. This was a sudden and unexpected death and all factors have not been explained.

"It is the purpose of an inquest to find causes and find out exactly what has occurred."

Dr. Cotnam said that "until just recently" he was unaware that Dr. Shulman had ruled against an inquest. He also disagreed that a coroner's primary function was to prevent deaths . . .

"This death was due to an unnatural cause. No one can be certain how this boy died. Was there foul play? Was there criminal neglect? Just how did this death occur? For what motives this inquest got stopped I don't know."

A royal commission inquiry, headed by Mr. Justice W. D. Parker, resumes hearings May 23 into charges by Dr. Shulman that government officials have interfered in inquests in Ontario.

The commission was appointed in April by Premier John Roberts after Dr. Shulman was fired by Attorney-General Arthur Wishart for making public remarks about government officials.

Labrador Boundary Dispute Deprives 2,000 of Franchise

QUEBEC (CP)—The Labrador boundary dispute between Quebec and Newfoundland has been depriving about 2,000 Quebecers of a provincial franchise.

Involved are whites, Indians and Eskimos of voting age in most of the vast northern territory of New Quebec, formerly known as Ungava.

These people, except for residents of Schefferville and Fort Chimo, cannot vote in provincial elections because their territory is not yet in a provincial electoral riding.

They can vote federally in the riding of Seguenay but although they pay taxes to the province they are not yet represented in the Quebec legislature.

Several have complained to the tax appeal board of taxation without representation while the government works out a solution as sensitive situation.

An official disclosed that if Quebec created a new riding in New Quebec without including Labrador the move would tend to undermine Quebec's claim on the disputed boundary.

Quebec does not accept as valid the British Privy Council decision of 1927, awarding Newfoundland the 110,000 square miles of Labrador wilderness.

Premier Daniel Johnson has established a four-man commission to examine the "territorial integrity" of Quebec, particularly the border with Newfoundland.

Chairman of the commission is Henri Dorion, a geographer from Laval University who argued in a 1963 book that the Privy Council decision is legally invalid.

Burden of his contention is that, contrary to specific requirements of the British North America Act, Quebec was not represented in the case.

Several alternatives are being studied. Among them is the possibility of extending the areas around Schefferville and Fort Chimo, where the right to vote was extended in 1960.

Goodwill Day, an international annual event held alternately in Canada and the United States, will be held at Kingston, Ont. this year on Saturday, May 27th. Its big attraction is the band competitions and the Duke of Edinburgh Unit Pipe Band will again be competing. Last year they won two trophies, the Woodley Jewellers Canada 83 Trophy for band competition for the first time and the Tommy Marshall Memorial Trophy so retain permanent possession of it. The Duke of Edinburgh Unit donated a beautiful trophy to replace the retired trophy. The Unit Pipe Band are going all out to try and have their name inscribed on it in this first year of annual competition and all the best wishes for success go with them from all of the Unit members.

Plans have been fairly well completed for Veterans' Week and it is hoped that all veterans will co-operate in the various activities whether affiliated with a veterans organization or not. On Monday, president George Christopher, Centennial committee chairman, Jack Lundberg, superintendent of parks board and the architects will pick and mark out the site of the proposed band shell, the Unit Centennial project, at Zwick's Island and the final plans for the band shell will be drawn up by the architects.

The executive are concentrating their efforts on Veterans' Week activities as, except for the regular Friday and Saturday social evenings, there will be no special sports or entertainment events until Veterans' Week is over. The next big event will be the annual summer picnic which will be held the same place as last year on Sunday, August 6th.

Comrades, G. Christopher, R. Burns and W. Ford will be delegates to the Provincial convention to be held the second week in June at Hamilton, Ontario.

The following comrades are in the Belleville General Hospital: Cec Chapman (no visitors), Bert Herrington and Hank Boyle while Cde. Ab Newman is ill at his own home.

Provincial Departments Not Well Co-ordinated

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Charges of lack of co-ordination among provincial government departments were laid Monday during opening sessions of the Association of Ontario Mayors and Reeves' annual meeting.

Mayor Lester Cooks of Barrie, president of the association, said it is common for one government department to be unaware of the effect of the action of another department on municipalities, "yet each of them make recommendations contradictory to the total good of the community."

Mr. Cooks suggested that the government end the confusion by appointing one minister to be responsible for all municipal matters.

Mr. Cooks criticized changes in the Child Welfare Act last year which stripped municipal councils of authority to control the budgets of children's aid societies.

A resolution from the City of Barrie, to be considered by the association's 650 municipalities, would urge the provincial government to return control of the CAS budget to municipal control.

SPORTS SLICES

By Geo. H. Calver
Sports Editor

A new question is coming up for the fishing buffs whose favorite dish is trout regardless of sex, type or habitat. What would you rather do on New Year's Day — or go fishing?

A bulletin from the Belleville and District Fish and Game Association calls the attention of trout fishermen to "The Department of Lands and Forests proposes to open the trout season (lakers, brownes and speckles) on the 1st of January every year and leave it open until the 10th of October in south-eastern Ontario. In an area where the existing limit is five, that limit will be reduced to three."

The club has been asked to express an opinion and therefore gets the opportunity to register approval or disapproval of the plan.

The matter will be brought up at the regular monthly meeting of the club at the Club Canara tonight. If members want the executive to make a submission on their behalf they are urged to attend the meeting and voice their opinions.

Talking with Russ Whitfield of the Tweed headquarters Lands and Forests this morning, I was informed that the reduction of limit from five to three applies to lake trout only. Other limits will remain the same.

Opinions of other fish-and-game, conservation and sportsmen's associations will be asked by the department and the decision to extend the dates will rest on the consensus of these organizations.

"Clubs should give the suggestion their fullest consideration," Mr. Whitfield said. "It might even popular in some districts and the opposite in others.It is up to them."

I am of the opinion that the suggestion will get the affirmative nod from the greater majority of the winter-fishing trout fraternity.

After all what difference should a couple of months make to the avid dyed-in-the-wool winter angler who delights in carverting around the ice-shackled lakes and streams starting March 1st. Besides do you know of a better cure for the New Year's Eve hangover than frolicking over snow-swept northland meadows in a skid-oe and hollag up in wood-warmed cabin or shack cuddling the "hair of the dog that bit you?"

Three or four years ago the Department of L. and F. decided to advance the trout-fishing opening dates to March 1st. It met with instant response with a few thousands of hardy Waltons in winter gear taking advantage.

The exodus at that time included anglers from the farsway places, even Montreal and Toronto. According to department officials the invading army has increased annually.

Too, the January 1st opening will reduce the weather hazard that marked last year's March 1st opening. It was anything but conducive to good fishing what with the weather man reducing lakes to slush and a general warning being issued to stay away from the waterways.

Much has been said and written about the hardy winter-time angler Joes, the weather and the trout but there are a few unsung heroes around who contribute no small measure to the success of the arctic safaris.

These are the laddies of the Lands and Forests Department who brave wind, wave, weather and ice to see that the boys keep in line. They have a tough job in patrolling the northern streams and lakes and have as many scrapbooks proven Good Samaritans to anglers in a jam.

They'll have added duties if and when the proposed seasonal advance comes into being. In fact I wouldn't be surprised to see a company of Eskimo conservation officers brought in as reinforcements.

Esposito, Marotte

Six Hawks, Bruins Change Sweaters

BOSTON (CP-AP) — Boston Bruins, weary of seeing small forwards get banged around, boosted added muscle up front today with the acquisition of Phil Esposito, Ken Hodge and Fred Stanfield from Chicago Black Hawks.

The Bruins gave up hard-hitting defencemen Gilles Marotte, centre Pit Martin and minor league goalie Jack Norris to obtain the three forwards in the deal completed shortly before National Hockey League rosters were frozen at midnight in preparation for the expansion draft.

"We gained needed strength up front as well as size," MIke Schmidt said after his first trade as the Bruins' new general manager.

"We hated to give up Marotte, a promising, tough, young defencemen, but we had to give up something to get what we wanted."

Esposito, who packs 197 pounds on a six-foot frame, tied for seventh among the NHL's top scorers last season. The 25-year-old centre scored 35 goals and had 40 assists for 61 points while playing on a line with Bobby Hull and Eino Mahl.

Hodge, 23 next month, is a lively 200 - pound winger who scored 20 goals in his final year of junior hockey at St. Catherine's, Ont. In limited action with Chicago, he had 10 goals and 25 assists last season.

Stanfield, who last turned pro spent most of the last two seasons with St. Louis in the Central League, but is considered by Schmidt as the sleeper in the deal.

The Bruins finished last in the 1966-67 season. Chicago won the NHL championship, but was eliminated by Toronto in the Stanley Cup semi-finals.

Norris has played the last two seasons with Los Angeles Blades of the Western League.

Marotte, a 22-year-old Montreader, turned professional in 1965-66 from Niagara Falls Flyers of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A Series.

But the Bruins are steeped in

young, tough, talented defencemen, including Rookie of the Year Bobby Orr who made the second all-star team in his first season.

From now until the conclusion of the universal draft in Montreal, June 6, all team rosters are frozen.

Americans Cubans May Team Up

NEW YORK (CP)—Cuba and the United States may find their athletes performing as team mates this year.

The Amateur Athletic Union of the U.S., announced Monday the team representing the Americas against Europe's best track and field athletes at Montreal Aug. 9-10 will be chosen on the basis of performance in the Pan - American Games. Cuba has strong representatives, especially in the men's sprints.

The combined American team will be made up of the first two finishers in each event.

Athletes from Trinidad, Jamaica, Canada, Mexico, Colombia, Cuba, Venezuela and the U.S. will compete at Winnipeg.

Sees Trouble In Lack Of Oxygen

SHELTON, Conn. (AP)—Lack of oxygen at the 1968 Mexico City Olympics could cause many athletes to pass out and even kill some, Yale's swimming coach said Monday night.

Coach Phil Moriarty said the choice of the high-altitude city was a "political decision" brought about by pressuring by the Mexican government.

Moriarty, speaking to the Bridgeport Traffic Association's annual sports night, said the men who inspected the city before choosing it for the 1968 games arrived there in pressurized planes, rode in air-conditioned cabs and stayed in air-conditioned hotels.

Under Hockey Conditions

Canada; 'No Chance In Olympics'

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP)—Andy O'Brien, sports editor of Weekend magazine, said Monday that a different approach is needed if Canada's national hockey team is going to have any chance of winning in the 1968 olympics.

Mr. O'Brien, speaking at the annual Royal Military College athletic awards night, said there should be two forms of amateurism.

One would include amateurs playing strictly for fun while the other would be the national athletes playing for Canada.

Mr. O'Brien said many athletes pass up a chance to represent Canada internationally because they suffer financially and lose time from their careers.

A player like Bobby Orr, rookie of the year in the National Hockey League, may have been tempted to play for Canada if the fitness council "took over and found such a person a job or provided scholarships that made sure he suffers for nothing within reason.

"In that way, we would not only retain our developing super athletes, but we would reap benefits from them."

Mr. O'Brien suggested our super amateur athletes be paid $10,000 a year.

"This would work out to an expenditure of about $1,000,000 a year which it well within the budget of the national fitness council."

He said under the present conditions our national hockey team "won't have a ghost of a chance in the 1968 olympics".

"Russian hockey is worked on a pyramid style," he said. "Which means all their top hockey players come to the top as amateurs. The Russians should spint their team because now we are asking our Allan Cup teams to play against Russian pros."

Mr. O'Brien said the time has come for Canada to stop being good natured about playing international rules overseas and insist on allowing more body contact, especially by offensive players.

"Let's pound hime the fact, you are playing two-thirds hockey," he said. "Why not go all the way and have real hockey fun!"

Head table guests included skier Nancy Greene, swimmer Elaine Tanner, football's Russ Jackson, wrestling's Whipper Billy Watson, track's Bruce Kidd and hockey's Orr.

Wings May Suspend Epstein

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

International League baseball fans, other than those in Rochester, probably are hoping today that Baltimore Oriole rookie Mike Epstein holds to his decision to go home to California.

Unable to crack the American League team's lineup, the 24-year-old slugger last week refused to report back to the Red Wings with whom he played last season.

Now the Rochester club is expected to place him on their suspended list and halt payment of his salary, reported at $9,000 for 1967.

The Red Wings and Toronto Maple Leafs were rained out Monday night as were Columbus Jets at Richmond Braves.

But Syracuse Chiefs were unable to take advantage of the situation and improve their fourth-place tie position when they split a doubleheader with Toledo Mud Hens, losing 1-0 then winning 8-7..

But Pirates Lose

Clemente Clouts 3 Homers, Double

By DICK COUCH
Associated Press Sports Writer

Pittsburgh Pirates were marking time until Roberto Clemente's next trip to the plate.

But Cincinnati's Tony Perez got there first, leaving Clemente with a night to remember—and an empty feeling.

Perez' run-scoring double in the 10th inning gave the National League-leading Reds an 8-7 victory over the Pirates—and nullified the biggest single-game spree of Clemente's career.

The Pittsburgh star drove in all of his team's runs with three towering homers and a double, taking the National League RBI lead and raising his average to .390, in Pittsburgh's 8-7, 10-inning loss to Cincinnati Reds.

Pitching—Tony Pierce, Athletics, blanked California on one hit over the last 6 1/3 innings, protecting John Odom's first victory as Kansas City trimmed the Angels 5-2.

Jerry Stephenson, Boston Red Sox, pitched a 3-hitter to defeat Baltimore 4-0 for his first major league victory.

Clemente, whose batting average soared to .390 while his RBI mark jumped to 34, socked a bases-empty homer in the ninth inning that capped the personal binge and gave the Pirates a 7-5 lead.

But Lee May's two-run homer pulled the Reds even in the bottom of the ninth and Perez's fourth hit—a booming drive to center field off reliever Juan Pizarro in the 10th—knocked in the winning run.

While Cincinnati moved three games ahead of the second-place Pirates, Houston Astros ended a five-game tailspin by leading Los Angeles Dodgers 5-3 on Bob Aspromonte's two-run triple in the 10th inning.

Ernie Banks' three-run homer and two-run blasts by Leo Thomas and Billy Williams carried Chicago Cubs to a 8-3 victory over San Francisco Giants in an afternoon game. New York Mets and Atlanta Braves were rained out.

Kansas City trimmed California 5 - 2 in the American League while two games—Baltimore at Boston and Detroit at Washington—were postponed because of rain.

Clemente leashed two - run homers off Milt Pappas in the first and fifth innings, sandwiching a single between the circuit blows. He doubled two runs across in the seventh before slamming his sixth homer of the year in the ninth.

The Astros tagged LA relief ace Phil Regan with his first loss in almost a year. Regan had won 15 straight since last May 13.

He came on at the start of the 10th, gave up a single by Joe Morgan and retired the next two hitters before walking Rusty Staub intentionally to get at Aspromonte.

Banks' sixth homer capped a four-run burst in the ninth for the Cubs, who have won seven of their last eight starts. Williams rapped three singles in addition to his homer for a total of nine hits in his last 19 at-bats.

Kansas City extended its winning string to four games as Bert Campaneris ignited two Athletic scoring rallies with singles and rookie Tony Pierce pitched one-hit relief over the final 2 1-3 innings, preserving John (Blue Moon) Odom's first victory.

Torres Favored Over Tiger!

NEW YORK (AP)—The first three rounds are expected to tell the story tonight when Nigeria's Dick Tiger defends his light heavyweight title in a ten-round box with ex-champion Jose Torres at Madison Square Garden.

"If Torres doesn't knock him out or stretch him out in the first three rounds then I don't think he'll win," Roger Rouse said today.

"You better root for me." Torres said to Rouse. "We'll do more business. I'm gonna knock him out within 10 rounds."

Rouse is the No. 1 contender for the crown. He has been promised a shot at the winner within 90 days.

Torres is a 9-to-5 favorite to regain the 175-pound division he was brown he lost to the 37-year-old Tiger on a unanimous decision in 15 rounds at the Garden last Dec. 16.

The 31-year-old Puerto Rican was a 3-to-1 favorite when he was soundly whipped by the older, shorter and lighter Tiger. The veteran Nigerian had been dethroned as middleweight (160 pounds) champion eight months earlier by Emile Griffith.

The first Torres-Tiger fight drew a crowd of 13,554 and a gross gate of $100,488 plus $60,000 for television.

This time the Garden is looking for a crowd of 10,000 and a gate of between $75,000 and $100,000 plus another $60,000 for national television to be carried by ABC starting at 10 p.m. EDT.

Tiger's year-long drought ended 56-15-2, including 25 knockouts. Torres' record is 29-2-1, including 27 knockouts. He's been stopped once.

City Hall, Public Works Form Combine

City Hall, last year's pennant-winners, and the fourth - place Public Works teams were combined into one entry at a hot meeting of the Departmental Softball League last night.

The two clubs have been unable to obtain enough players from last year to field regular squads and the suggestion for filling out their lineups were rejected by City Hall and Public Works representatives at last night's meeting in favor of the combine.

Absent from the meeting were league president Al Rump and secretary Bill Cooney. The vote was 4-1 in favor of the combine.

Other clubs already entered are the Police, the Fire Department and Electric Motor Sales.

The Intelligencer withheld entry until other team players' meeting expected to be held at a practice tonight. The Intelligencer, the only one of last year's clubs which has not asked for help this year, objected to the combine, claiming it amounted to packing a club and because it reduced the number of league entries.

The league schedule opens next Tuesday, May 23, with either four or five teams.

The Combines' list of players, which must be followed for the season, has Bob Dafoe, Jim Sweet, Rodney Green, Gord Green, Bradley Lee, Gary Reid, Graydon Rogers, Jim Reid, Bill Morton, Bill Ferguson, George Butler, Frank Rumblow, Bud Keller and Archie McMillan.

G. Smith and B. McCormick of last year's Public Utilities team were given to the Fire Department.

All clubs must submit a final players' list to the league by July 15.

There are many things you can depend on when you buy a Johnson

besides the Johnson

Your dealer, for instance. He's one of the most dependable things a Johnson has.

Though a Johnson seldom needs repairs, you can depend on a Johnson dealer to give you his best when it does. We conduct special factory service schools every year to help him know your outboard inside out. This year your Johnson dealer has 11 dependables to show you: Power/Pulse V-100, 80, 60, 40, 35, 20, 15, 9 1/2, 6, 6 and 3 horsepower. Each uses regular fuel with a 50-to-1 oil-gas mix and is backed by a 2-year warranty. Your Johnson dealer has a lot to talk about this year. Ask him about the exciting new GT-115. He'll talk a good deal, too!

That's another thing you can depend on.

Brewer; No Punch-Puller

TRENTON — He built himself a reputation as a "beauty" hockey player, and Carl Brewer is equally fast on his feet fielding questions about his career, his opinions, or what have you.

In Trenton last week on one of the goodwill tours that are so much a part of sports celebrities' lives, the former Toronto Maple Leaf star blueline performer quickly showed questioners he doesn't pull punches.

Try these on for size:

—"Harry Howell is on the first all-star team this year largely as a result of sentiment."

—"Red Berenson was better than eight of the nine regular Montreal forwards when he was with the Canadiens, but he wasn't given an opportunity to play."

—"European hockey teams are more disciplined than ours."

—"Many sportswriters ruin hockey for readers, since they are writing about something they know nothing about."

—"Playing hockey is just like any other job."

The terse-talking Brewer was equally adept at using a barrage of similar one-liners to dodge queries about his future, giving no inkling whether it would be as a minor league playing coach, in the National Hockey League, or on a future national team.

And is he the "property" of the Toronto Maple Leafs?

"That's what they say."

Damascus Trains In Secret

BALTIMORE (AP) — A television viewer in California Saturday will see more of Damascus racing in the Preakness than those readers at Pimlico do all week.

Trainer Frank Whiteley Jr. is following the same secluded plan with Damascus as he did with Tom Rolfe two years ago and it has brushed off Laurel race course, 25 miles away, for track over a few hours before the $150,000-added race and be back home before dark.

If Damascus can duplicate Tom Rolfe's 1965 performance, there will be no faulting Whiteley's system. Tom Rolfe smoked in, ran off with the Preakness and went on to be voted best three-year-old of that year.

Damascus already has paralleled one Tom Rolfe performance by finishing third in the Kentucky Derby. He went off the betting favorite May 6, but trailed John Galbreath's Proud Clarion and Bartel Dehlgth, both of whom also will tackle the 1-3-16 mile Preakness.

The Tracks

TORONTO (CP)—Amber Tex won the $11,850 Friar Rock Stakes at Woodbine Monday after Pine Point, ridden by Avelino Gomez, was disqualified from a first-place finish for a jumping incident on the final turn.

Gomez attempted to move Pine Point between Mr. Sid and King Alpha, but the horse was bumped again by Pace Point.

Gomez also was given a 10-day suspension at Fort Erie Saturday which he started to serve Tuesday. The suspension was imposing for Gomez allowing his horse-to-horse with another in the ninth race Friday.

The daily double of Gay Sister, a $25.30 winner in the first, and Gareen D'or in the second paid $34.00.

The exaztor of Feast or famine and Junior-ex Carolana in the double was worth $48.50 while the exactor of He's A Smoothie and Gentle D. Good was good for $43.20 in the sixth race.

Attendance at the opening day of a 41-day meeting was 7,050. The handle was $502,122.

MacDonald Urges Restoration Of Law Making Beaches Public

TORONTO (CP) — NDP Leader Donald MacDonald called Monday for restoration of a law which he said had the effect of preventing Great Lakes beaches from falling into private hands.

Mr. MacDonald told the legislature a provision of the Beds of Navigable Waters Act, in force from 1960 to 1931, stated that the Crown owned all land to the high-water mark along shorelines.

However, a revision of the act in 1931 had restored a provision in the original act of 1911 which stated that the Crown rights ended at the low water mark. The result, he said, has been that the beaches have been "pre-empted for private use."

The situation was most critical in Welland and Lincoln counties, where there was practically no public beach land.

The NDP leader told the house of cases along Lake Erie where cottage owners had fenced off the beach and installed "no trespassing" signs. They prevent bathers from walking around the fences in the shallow water. Some of the cottagers had even put broken glass in the sand.

He said one four-mile stretch of Lake Erie shoreline which had been proposed as a provincial park now is held by a private operator who charges $1 a day for parking and uses policemen with dogs to keep out trespassers.

Mr. MacDonald spoke as the house debated lands and forests department spending estimates. Lands and Forests Minister Rene Brunelle said the NDP leader "has made a good case and we will give it very serious consideration."

Moliere's Gentilhomme Rollicking Performance

MONTREAL (CP)—The 17th century came to life again Monday at Place des Arts as Montreal's Theatre du Nouveau Monde Troupe gave a rollicking rendition of Moliere's Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme.

The comedy - ballet, directed by Jean Gascon, was provided with a new musical score by Maestroeker Gabriel Charpentier.

The TNM presentation was a precisive performance in conjunction with Expo's World Festival.

Judging from audience reception, it was a successful attempt by this troupe to interpret the art of Moliere which is a combination of comedy and farcical ballet, firmly interwoven with a thread of reality.

The story is of a bourgeois gentleman with aspirations towards the noble realm of society.

Unfortunately, all his money cannot make him cultivated and he is duped by his dancing teacher, his music teacher, his philosophy teacher and, finally his tailor.

Gilles Grouix as the bourgeois gentleman played the fool to perfection.

In one unforgettable scene his tailor, played by Roland Gennat, arrives with a hideous new suit. Part of the decor is a huge silk rose which adorns the region below the midriff.

The gentleman asks that it be removed, but the tailor easily convinces him that all the people of quality are doing it. The gentleman willingly concedes.

Another outstanding performance is given by Denise Pelletier who plays the maid.

As the play draws to a close, the gentleman betrothes his daughter to the "great Turc" because he wants to be certain she marries into a noble family. The Turc of course is the daughter's lover in disguise. The daughter is played by Francine Racette, and the lover by Jean Perreud.

Protesting all the way through is her husband's extravagances, and representing reality, is the gentleman's wife, played by Claude Schmidt.

Critic had high praise for Jean Gascon's direction.

Jacob Siddall, critic of The Gazette, said he did not like the production at all but praised Denise Pelletier in the role of the maid, and said she is to be given credit for keeping the production going.

Pilot Film For Wojeck Wins Award

TORONTO (CP) — The Last Man in the World, the first instalment of the CBC-TV Wojeck series, Monday was awarded the fourth annual Wilderness Award for the best film made for CBC television during the last season.

The Wilderness best actor award went to Johnny Yesno, an Ojibway Indian from Fort Hope, Ont., who made his acting debut in the one-hour Wojeck drama.

Ron Kelly, director of the film, is a Vancouver native. Phillip Hersch, author of the series, was born in Toronto.

In the award-winning episode, Yesno, 29, who lives in Montreal, portrayed Cree youth who moved from his reservation to the city where he found hostility and loneliness and eventually hanged himself in a jail cell.

Treaty Giving Indians $4 May Be Revised

TORONTO (CP)— Lands and Forests Minister Brunelle promised Monday to seek revision of a 1904 treaty under which the provincial government obtained resource rights on Indian lands in Northern Ontario in return for payment of $4 a year to each Indian.

The treaty between the Indians and the federal government dealt with lands north of the Albany River in Ontario's far northwest. About 10,000 Indians are affected by the treaty's terms.

The minister said that under the treaty each Indian will get $4 a year in perpetuity. He agreed that in light of current prices, the payment should be revised. But he said that a change in the treaty would be up to Ottawa.

Kenneth Bryden (NDP—Toronto Woodbine) suggested that $4 in 1904 probably bought as much as $20 will today.

Forestry Policies Criticized

TORONTO (CP) — NDP Leader Donald MacDonald told the legislature Monday a revolution is needed in government forest management, regeneration and planning policies.

He said the "dominant message" of a national forestry conference in 1966 was that world demand for forest products is increasing and that Canada and the Soviet Union are the only countries left with substantial stands of virgin timber.

Mr. MacDonald said the government's forest regeneration policies "are falling shockingly short of the need."

Improving Deer Ranges May Just Feed Wolves

TORONTO (CP) — Backbencher Paul Yakabuski (PC—Renfrew South) said Monday a program in which the lands and forests department will spend $270,000 a year improving deer ranges may amount merely to "providing more adequate food for the wolves."

Speaking during debate of the department's spending estimates for 1967-68, Mr. Yakabuski said wolves are driving farmers out of sheep - raising and pose a threat to the tourist industry by depleting deer herds.

Rene Brunelle, minister of lands and forests, turned down two recommendations by a legislative committee to reduce the wolf population.

—Elmer Sopha (L—Sudbury) said the provincial government should stop sale to Americans of Crown lands that might be needed as parkland. He told the legislature such lands should be leased to Americans on only 25-year terms.

—Mr. Brunelle said almost 10,000,000 visitors came to Ontario's 92 provincial parks in 1966. He said the number represented an increase of 10 per cent over 1965.

—Premier John Roberts said that the legislature will not sit this afternoon to enable members to attend the funeral of Justice Dana Porter, who died Saturday.

Committee resolutions passed in March called for a "drastic drop" in the wolf population by an increase in the $25 bounty and by allowing wolf hunting in Algonquin Park.

Elmer Sopha, however, said he was opposed to the killing of the animal. Mr. Sopha said all forms of animal life are dependent on each other and biologists fear the results of wholesale wolf hunting.

Just A Happy Occasion

The infectious smile of Princess Alexandra spread throughout the official greeting party, including the RCMP escort, on her arrival by air in Toronto Sunday to begin a state visit to Canada. With the princess are Mrs. W. Earl Rowe, left, wife of the Ontario Lieutenant Governor, and her husband Angus Ogilvy, right. Behind the princess and her unidentified RCMP escort are Robert Winters, federal trade and commerce minister, and Mrs. Winters. (CP Photo)

Romney Uses Expo Forum To Act as A Candidate

MONTREAL (CP)—A United States Republican wounding like a presidential candidate left the stage at Expo 67 today, turning it over to a dedicated Communist.

Michigan Governor George Romney, believed a leading contender for the Republican nomination in the 1968 presidential election, visited the fair Monday at the head of 3,000 of his state's citizens.

His visit was unofficial but got almost as much attention as heads of state who have been visiting the fair. He was welcomed by Robert F. Shaw, deputy commissioner-general of the fair, made a speech about Canada's part in peace-keeping missions around the world.

At his press conference, he said he still is "weighing" his decision to seek the Republican nomination. But in answer to questions about his Mormon church and its attitude toward Negroes, he used the present tense—"I am running as an American citizen. . . ."

Monday was a bleak, drizzly day with the temperature in the upper 40s.

Attendance was swelled by 50,000 school children from points in Ontario and Quebec.

Total attendance for the day was 150,073, based on available figures at 12 midnight. This brought total attendance since the fair opened to 4,540,330.

Documentary Shows U.S. Image In Serious Need of Repairs

NEW YORK (AP) — Town Meeting of the World, CBS's transatlantic satellite discussion program Monday night, arrayed California Governor Ronald Reagan and New York Senator Robert F. Kennedy against a panel of students from Europe, Africa and Asia, all students at British universities.

The theme of the hour was "image of America and youth of the world."

After 60 minutes of sharp attack, laced with skeptical looks and sagacy commentaries from "the youth of the world," a viewer received the impression that, if their attitudes are typical, the U.S. image abroad is in serious need of emergency repairs.

The students moved in immediately on Vietnam and either brushed aside or ignored remarks made by both Reagan and Kennedy. Both men remained good tempered and made simple answers, even to baiting questions.

One girl student presented her question this:

"I believe the war in Vietnam is illegal, immoral and politically motivated. Do either of you disagree?"

Both men did disagree and both spoke of U.S. determination to give the South Vietnamese the right of self-determination.

Another student read an indictment against the United States that ranged from establishing a "puppet regime" in the Dem government to the charge that CIA activity overthrew the Jagan government in Guinea.

Reagan attempted to defend some U.S. activities. Kennedy spoke of "many mistakes made in the last 10 years," but urged the students to consider the present U.S. position—willing to step aside for free elections with outside supervision in South Vietnam, and accept the result of the ballot, but only if North Vietnam goes along with the plan.

The give-and-take was certainly lively, but the students in their savage attacks and waning attitude generated more heat than light.

No One Questions Authority Of Action Director in Movie

LEHI, Utah (AP)—The big guy was where he liked to be: right in the middle of a fight.

Here in this town near Salt Lake City, the national guard armory had been converted into a movie stage. The set represented a Montana gin mill circa the Second World War, and a was filled with actors portraying Canadian and American soldiers and civilians. Included were several Hollywood stunt men.

"Okay, here's how it goes," said the outsized director, and the stunt men listened with respect as he choreographed the punches and falls for his new film, The Devil's Brigade.

The big guy was Andrew Mc-Laglen, and he was respected not only for his physical stature —230 pounds on a six-foot-seven frame. The man was also given him credit as the best new practitioner of a rugged breed—the action director. He follows the tradition of John Ford and William Wellman, who were his mentors.

McLaglen himself is far from pugnacious. He speaks in quiet tones, the voice sounding flat and expressionless, like that of his longtime friend, John Wayne. But, also like Wayne, there is no questioning the authority.

McLaglen comes naturally by his toughness. His father was Victor McLaglen, the actor-adventurer who himself starred in some brilliant brawls in films like The Informer — Academy Award, best actor—Gunga Din and Fort Apache. Andy was born in London 46 years ago and he came to Hollywood in 1925 when his father, who once performed as a strongman in Winnipeg, sought a career in films.

"But we never really lived in Hollywood or were part of the movie colony," Andy said. "Dad never encouraged me to go into the movie business.

Andy chose to get in. Although he had the stature and looks to be a star, he preferred working behind the scenes.

McLaglen acquired his seasoning in television. He directed 91 Gunsmoke episodes and 115 of Have Gun, Will Travel, as well as a flock of Perry Masons, Rawhides and Virginians.

His first movie success was McClintock with pal Wayne in 1962. But it was Shenandoah with James Stewart, that put him in first rank as a director.

School Issue Settled

Prince Edward Approves Addition

PICTON (STAFF) — Prince Edward County Council, by a 9-8 vote, last night approved construction of the proposed $1,500,000 addition to Prince Edward Collegiate Institute in Picton.

Holton Martin, chairman of the Prince Edward Collegiate School Board, told council a month had already been lost due to government red tape and said further delay caused by county council opposition could only lead to higher costs.

Reeve B. C. Hepburn of Picton, who opposed the project, asked whether council was obliged to approve the addition.

Robert Walmsley, a lawyer representing the school board, said rejection would result in the board seeking a court order to force the council to agree to the issue of the necessary debentures.

Reeve Gordon Lloyd of Hillier Township, who favored the addition, said that the relevant act says the council "shall" approve the issue of debentures.

Reeve Harold Harrison of North Marysburgh said he would have to vote against the project because his council had earlier opposed it.

Reeve Lloyd, however, declared that, members of the county council were free to vote as they pleased.

Reeve George Cunningham of Ameliasburg Township, which is not included in the Prince Edward Collegiate school area, said he cast his vote in favor of construction because the project had earlier been supported by representatives of areas with a higher proportion of assessment than those opposed.

Two members of the 14-man County Council had two votes, while there was one absentee, Reeve Gordon Demorest of Athol Township.

Opposing the motion were Reeve B. C. Hepburn (2 votes) and Deputy Reeve D. Thompson of Picton, Reeve Harold Harrison of North Marysburgh, and Reeve D. Kotchapaw and Deputy Reeve George Foster of Sophiasburgh.

County Promotion Program Sought by Prince Edward

PICTON (Staff) — In an effort to form a Prince Edward County promotion committee, Warden Robert Boyce had representatives from local organizations meet during county council Monday.

Representatives from Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce, Kinsmen, Kiwanis, Rotary, Quinte Isle Tourist Association and the Bay of Quinte Regional Travel Council, met with council last night to discuss a scheme whereby council would work closely with the local organizations to promote development of Prince Edward county.

A representative from farm organizations will also be invited to join the "promotion pool."

A co-ordinated group, it was felt, could more effectively advertise Prince Edward County both financially and through sharing of work involved.

It was thought many of the groups had their finances already committed to the specific areas of service. Warden Boyce said the proposed committee also needed their support through manpower and ideas.

He said the county hoped not to be the sole financial supporter of the project. After discussion it was decided a meeting would be held May 30. Representatives from clubs involved would work with a committee of three-men appointed by council.

Volunteers were North Marysburgh Reeve Harold Harrison, Sophiasburg Reeve Donald Kotchapaw and Bloomfield Reeve Henry Leavens.

Quinte's Isle Signs Sought At 401 Exits

PICTON (STAFF) — Discussion of the proposal to form a county promotion committee at Prince Edward county council this week resulted in passing a bylaw requesting signs on Highway 401.

County council voted to ask the department of Highways to place signs at Trenton and Belleville on 401 stating: Quinte's Isle Provincial Parks (4).

Reeve of North Marysburg, Harold Harrison, said in speaking with department of lands and forests representatives he learned earlier if such a sign were agreed on by councillors, the department would probably have it placed within a month.

The question came during talks between county council and representatives of local organizations at council Monday night on a plan to jointly promote the county.

Representatives from local organizations were asked by Warden Robert Boyce to return to their clubs and have names of their representatives sent to the county clerk treasurer for a meeting at the end of the month.

Welfare Review Supported

PICTON (Staff) — The department of social and family services will send a representative to discuss the possibilities of amalgamation of the children's aid society and the county welfare department.

Reporting on work accomplished by the special committee appointed to look into amalgamation in Prince Edward County, Picton Reeve B. C. Hepburn said December May 8 ended with all parties in agreement.

Present during the meeting were CAS superintendent Miss Violet Anglin and welfare administrator Grant Harvey.

The question has not yet been discussed with the Children's Aid Society board however, May 31 a Toronto representative is due here to meet with committee members.

County Council Approves Grant To Federation

PICTON (STAFF) — Prince Edward County Council granted $200 to the Farm Union, Federation of Agriculture and the County Milk Committee for a "march on Ottawa", at a meeting last night.

Funds for the grant will be taken from the county promotion fund, Reeve Hillier Reeve Gordon Grant, asked that the grant be taken from other council funds.

He said he was in favor of giving the grant, but he feared establishing a precedent for uses of the county promotion fund, money voted earlier this year to finance promotion services for Prince Edward.

He said the farm community was "against a stone wall" regarding federal government reconsideration of the farm policy this year. Noting other organizations are strike for higher wages, he said he was in favor of the farmers' bid for higher prices.

On the other hand, it seemed that unfair non-farming ratepayers should pay to increase their prices. Criticism of milk retailers, he said the last time milk increased in the consumer by two cents per quart the farmer received only a penny more for his produce. All things considered, Mr. Lloyd was in favor of the grant.

Warden Robert Boyce, Wellington Reeve, said he was in favor of the grant from the county promotion fund "provided farming is a big part of the community." He could see no reason to question the grant.

Ameliasburg Reeve George Cunningham said he would go along with the proposed grant, but felt ordinarily the county should subsidize no union or organization.

"The lion sleeps sixteen hours a day—and he's king of the jungle!"

New Design For Government Is Selected

Public Works Minister, Ray Connell, announced that a design has been selected for a sign has been selected for a Provincial Centennial Display that will symbolize Ontario's participation in Canada's "Second Century of Progress."

The design will appear at many Ontario government buildings within the next three or four weeks.

About 250 locations will have the design, locations such as buildings occupied by Water Resources, Central Health Laboratory, the Department of Highways and departments such as Agriculture, Attorney General, Ontario Provincial Police, Education and Health.

The association serves as the licensing body for the engineering profession through the province.

W. G. G. Lindley of 43 Keller Drive in Belleville was one of the 255 new members.

Jury Says Negligence On Part of Drivers

TRENTON—A coroner's jury, sitting in Brighton Monday, recommended that commercial vehicles be equipped with four-way flashing signal lights.

The jury was enquiring into the cause of death of 56-year-old Robert Hayes, R.R. 4, Trenton who died in Trenton hospital Oct. 13, of multiple injuries suffered in an accident Oct. 12 on the Carrying Place Road, west of Trenton.

Hayes was the driver of a car which rammed into a tractor-trailer, owned by Mel Hall Transport Co. of London, Ont., and driven by 37-year-old Symon Vanderweyr of London. The tractor-trailer was backing into a driveway to turn around when the accident occurred.

A passenger in the Hayes car, 28-year-old John Boag of R.R. 4, Trenton, was instantly killed in the collision.

The jury also ruled that there had been negligence on the part of both the driver of the car and the driver of the truck. The car, according to the jury ruling was travelling at excessive speed and the tractor-trailer was not displaying adequate signal lighting.

The accident occured in the early morning hours of Oct. 12 when the two men in the Hayes car were on their way to work.

Mr. Vanderweyr had just begun turn into a factory, and was attempting to turn around.

Exercise During Pregnancy Important

Dear Dr. Molner: Can you give me some information about exercise for pregnant women? I am four months pregnant and concerned about staying fit. — Mrs. N. I.

Exercise is important in keeping fit, but there are other reasons besides. One is to help keep weight under control. Another is that it makes for easier deliveries.

You are (I take it) seeking your doctor, and I trust you're for that you direct this question to him. There are variations in doctors' preferences. More important, there are individual differences in patients which at times may have a bearing on the amount of exercise. A woman who has had previous miscarriages must be more restrained in physical activity, for one instance.

In general, however, any reasonable exercise short of tiring yourself is excellent.

Walking outdoors is easiest and perhaps best, all things considered, since it can be continued throughout the pregnancy.

In the earlier and middle (bending, leg-raising, arm motions) should be safely tolerated by a healthy woman. Even swimming is acceptable, or golf if you like it although I would limit it to nine holes. Or bowling so long as it isn't tiring.

As the pregnancy progresses, the more active exercise becomes cumbersome and an effort, which takes care of the matter automatically. But there is still walking.

Dear Dr. Molner: I enclose 10 cents in coin and a stamped, self-addressed envelope for a copy of "How To Control Emphysema," and would you assure me that:

Can one person have emphysema, bronchitis and asthma, and what can be done? — E.B.

It is possible to have all three, and quite common to have at least two of them at the same time. Asthma is wheezing and struggling to get air into the lungs; bronchitis is inflammation of the bronchial tubes, which obviously interferes with breathing; emphysema is inability to expel enough stale air from the lungs, which automatically limits the amount that can be inhaled. One ailment compounds the problem of another. Each must be controlled as effectively as possible to make the others less troublesome.

Dear Dr. Molner: I refinish quite a lot of antique furniture and breathe a lot of dust in the process. Can you advise me also fumes from paint remover, thinners, etc. How harmful can this be to me, especially the sanding dust? — Mrs. L.R.

The dust particles can settle in the lungs as well as contributing to your eyes, nose and throat. Air is polluted enough without our adding to it. Best choice would be to install a blower which will carry the dust outdoors. If that is not feasible, use a mask of some sort to cover nose and mouth.

Fumes can be irritating, too — and your "etc." covers a lot of possibilities, some of which could be quite dangerous, depending on what you use. Again — blower or mask or both, since a simple mask will not control fumes.

Dear Dr. Molner: I read your warning about trichinosis and have thoroughly cooked. Does the same thing apply to pork liver? — T. C.

Yes. Even if the liver did not contain eggs of the trichina organism, you would have no way of being sure that they were not accidentally transferred from some other part of the animal.

NDP Backing Enables Liberals To Win Two Confidence Votes

OTTAWA (CP) — Small-party support gave the minority Liberal government easy victories Monday in two Commons non-confidence votes which lacked suspense because of an NDP promise to side with the administration.

NDP support assured government-backed rejection of the non - confidence motions proposed by the Conservatives and Creditistes.

The Creditiste motion accused the government of ignoring provincial constitutional prerogatives and letting down the agricultural community. It went down 115 to 80.

A similar tally—116 to 61—defeated the Conservative motion criticizing the government for not calling a conference this year to examine the constitution. Both motions were in the form of amendments to the session - opening throne speech outlining government legislative plans last week.

The Creditiste motion was opposed by 87 Liberals, 15 New Democrats, two Social Credit members and independents J. A. Mongrain (Trois-Rivieres). In favor were seven Creditistes, 52 Conservatives and independent Maurice Allard (Sherbrooke).

On the Conservative amendment, one additional NDP member voted with the government and one extra Conservative with his party.

Andrew Brewin (Toronto Greenwood), who promised NDP support in the votes earlier in the throne speech debate, at the same time criticized the government "for extraordinary neglect of constitutional reform."

His party's guideposts to constitutional change would involve repealing 30 meaningless sections of the British North America Act.

The new constitution, as the NDP sees it, would redistribute legislative power between the federal and provincial governments and provide a special status for Quebec.

Nicholas Mandzuk (PC—Marquette) charged the government is stressing the English and French cultures in Canada but tending to regard all others as second-class.

Jack Roxburgh (L—Norfolk) scored the "autocratic bureaucracy" as all levels of government he said is hurting small business. There was too much red tape which added to the work small businessmen must now do to make a slim profit.

Elden Woolliams (PC — Bow River) attacked federal expropriation procedures. They should be handled by provincial courts rather than by the Exchequer Court of Canada.

In the Senate, Opposition Leader A. J. Brooks said Monday night during the throne speech debate that the upper chamber should be given more work and greater responsibilities.

At the opening of House business Monday, Opposition Leader Diefenbaker failed to get an emergency debate on a weekend speech by Prime Council President Walter Gordon in which he criticized United States policy on Vietnam.

He accused Mr. Gordon of damaging international confidence, encouraging the Communists in Vietnam, stirring up trouble between Canada and the U.S. and opposing official government policy.

Speaker Lucien Lamoureux ruled there was no need for a special debate because the current throne speech debate that goes into its fifth day today, Vietnam could be discussed in the remaining time allotted to it.

Five-way Contests Loom in Three Ridings

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Five-way contests developed at official nominations Monday for three vacant Commons seats. Two other open seats each drew four candidates.

Voters go to the polls Monday, May 29, in the Ontario constituency of Sudbury and the Quebec ridings of Hull, Richelieu-Verchères, Montreal Papineau and Montreal Outremont-St. Jean.

All have long records as Liberal seats and were won by the Liberals in the November, 1965, general election.

Liberals and New Democrats fielded candidates in all five constituencies. The Progressive Conservatives got men on the ballot in all except Montreal Outremont-St. Jean where the returning officer disqualified Leopold Bouchard, a Conservative, for soliciting names for his nomination papers, a violation of electoral laws.

In the three by-elections since the general election, the government has retained two seats and won one—Nicolet - Yamaska — from the Conservatives.

After the May 29 by-elections, there will still be one vacancy in the Commons, in Jasper-Edson where Conservative Hugh Horner resigned to contest the Alberta provincial election.

The Commons standing: Liberals 127, Conservatives 95, New Democrats 21, Creditiste 8, Social Credit 2, Independent 2.

Ice-Breaking Device Copies Iceberg

OTTAWA (CP) — Scott E. Alexander of Ottawa says he got the idea for a new ice-breaking device on an Arctic voyage of the RCMP schooner St. Roch in 1935.

The St. Roch expedition was commanded by Henry Larsen, an RCMP sergeant who later became a superintendent. Mr. Alexander was a constable and a crew member.

At one stage in the voyage, the St. Roch was trapped in the polar ice pack off Point Barrow. Mr. Alexander recalls. Mr. Larsen got the idea of working the crushed closer to a small iceberg in the hope of getting some shelter from the ice pack that was threatening to crush the vessel. The plan worked. Behind the iceberg was a basin of open water.

"The underwater prow of that berg was clearing a channel through the ice better than an icebreaker could have done," he said.

In 1954, the two men were recalling the Arctic trip and their experience with the iceberg. Mr. Alexander said it should be possible to design a ship to work in ice as the iceberg did. That was the start of the design of his unit, called an Alexbow.

Mr. Alexander announced his new device last Friday. A prototype was built at Kingston last winter for $80,000 and tested on Lake Ontario ice.

Round-Clock Work Ahead for Farmers

TORONTO (CP) — According to provincial agricultural officials, the unseasonably cold and wet May weather has caused delays in spring field work by Ontario farmers.

Temperatures have been five to 15 degrees below normal since the first of the month and little change is in sight.

Walter Rutherford of the Ontario department of agriculture's Bowmanville office said even if the weather breaks it would be "a round - the - clock operation to catch up."

W. W. Snow, director of the department's soils and crops branch, said farmers would know in two weeks whether the weather had caused any serious damage.

Heavy rains have made it impossible for many farmers to get into their fields and the chilly air has slowed crop growth.

Kenneth Standing, secretary-manager of the Ontario Wheat Producers Marketing Board, said an aerial survey shows a loss of 12.1 per cent of wheat planted last fall.

He predicted that the provincial crop will drop to 373,720 acres left to harvest from 455,000 acres planted.

Alan Fisher, Chatham office of the department, said there is no cause for alarm. He said April weather in May made balance out with September weather in October.

Wildcat Strikes Harmful

TORONTO (CP)—Larry Sefton of Toronto, director of the 108,000 member District 6 of the United Steelworkers of America, says disciplined unionism is more effective than wildcat strikes in winning gains for union members.

In a report to be presented Wednesday at the Steelworkers' annual policy conference, Mr. Sefton said strikes inhibit negotiations and divert leaders from the main road of bargaining.

However, he does not condemn workers for giving vent to their pent-up feelings of frustration which result from management's indifference to the problems that plagues the employees.

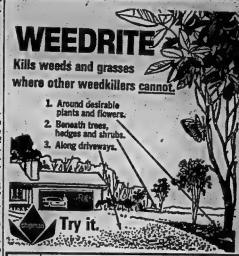
Mr. Sefton said it is not important for Canadians to own their own industries.

"The important thing is who makes the decisions and what the industry does for and on behalf of the Canadian people."

'Coriolus' Identified

TORONTO (CP)—The Globe and Mail says the identity of an undertaker who recently published a scathing book on his business has become known through his appearance on a CBC radio program.

The newspaper says the man who wrote the book, Death, Here is Thy Sting, under the name Coriolus, is Robert Forest, Toronto furniture store employee.



During the show, Coriolus said he was afraid the board might take away his licence as an embalmer if his name became known.

PC Whip Says Liberals Plan to Adopt Gordon's Vietnam Views

ERIC WINKLER

Conservative party whip, Eric Winkler (PC—Grey Bruce) has charged that the Liberal Party is "wilfully planning to take a position against the United States in Vietnam".

Last night in a speech to the Belleville Conservative Association Mr. Winkler accused the Liberal party of attempting to confuse the electorate on the war issue.

He charged that controversial speeches last weekend by Liberals Walter Gordon and John Turner had the backing of the Liberal party and were used to "feel out" the public on the Vietnam issue.

"These speeches will become Liberal policy in the near future—they were of a "like-fly-ing" nature and a test to find the reaction of be Canadian public when government policy on Vietnam is changed."

Mr. Winkler said "the Conservative Party is backing the U.S. position in the Vietnam conflict.

"We want peace as much as anyone — but not at the expense of losing our national security."

The party whip claimed Liberal policies on other issues are being initiated by the left wing element of the party.

"Mr. Gordon says we have to buy back Canada — in a unilateral way. I think he's wrong — we need foreign capital in a sensible, realistic way.

"Liberal policies are demoralizing and degenerating and the time has arrived when a halt must be called to these left wing policies . . . while there is still some incentive left for the individual.

"The Conservative Party has good reason to go to the public — some members of the Liberal Party have endeavoured to build castles in the sky and it's time they were stopped."

Mr. Winkler congratulated Premier John Robarts on calling a constitutional conference.

"The Liberal Government should have done this long ago but it left it up to a provincial premier".

In his closing remarks he told the membership that the freedom of choice even in a socialistic age must remain with the individual.

Other speakers at the meeting included: Les Grills, South Hastings member of parliament; Dr. Richard Potter, Quinte Riding Conservative candidate; Ted Parker, president of the Quinte provincial riding PC Association; Jack Ireland, president of the new provincial riding of Hastings; and Roy Duffy, secretary of the Belleville PC Association.

President Jerry Joyce of Belleville was chairman for the meeting.

Winkler Expects to Head Convention Credentials Body

Conservative Party whip, Eric Winkler (PC—Grey Bruce) expects to be named chairman of the credentials committee at the party's national leadership convention in September.

Mr. Winkler said following a speech in Belleville last night that he must remain neutral on the leadership issue if he is to "do a job" on the credentials committee.

The national convention will be held in Toronto.

Britain Keeps Trying

LONDON (CP)—Prime Minister Wilson's government will keep trying to get Britain into the Common Market, even though President de Gaulle has given a "velvet veto," and said noo, noo, noo.

That sums up official and newspaper opinion today, following the French president's Tuesday press conference which, says British anti-marketeers, amounted to a slap in the face of Wilson.

But some commentators here feel the British may have to wait until de Gaulle, 76, no longer calls the tune in Paris. France, like any of the five other countries in the Common Market, can veto applications for membership.

Other observers believe that the considerable success of the Kennedy round of international tariff negotiations in Geneva may present a similarly satisfactory outcome for Britain's Common Market bid.

Their thinking, as outlined by the Tory Daily Telegraph, goes like this:

"The success of the GATT talks was in doubt until the very end, in large measure because of the equivocal attitude—to put it no lower—of the Common Market countries.

"This reflected more than anything the reluctance of the French to make substantial tariff concessions."

Yet France has acquiesced in a vast multi-lateral deal, which is almost certain to benefit Britain. The implication is that Britain's bid will become stronger all the time.

British government officials, meanwhile, seized upon de Gaulle's blunt acceptance that negotiations will take place despite his warnings of many obstacles in the way of entry.

Boo!

President Charles de Gaulle of France yesterday poured cold water on Britain's Euromart bid and called U.S. intervention in Vietnam a "scandal." Here he appears to be cutting loose with a Bronx cheer.

War Threatens Egypt to UN: 'Out of Way'

CAIRO (CP) — The United Arab Republic today called on United Nations peacekeeping forces in the Gaza Strip to immediately withdraw beyond the Egyptian - Israeli armistice line and ordered its own forces to be ready for action if Israel attacks "any Arab state."

The UN Middle East Emergency force along the Egyptian-Israeli frontier and in the Gaza Strip includes troops from Canada, Norway, Sweden, India, Yugoslavia and Brazil.

It numbered about 4,500 men but UN Secretary - General U Thant said recently it was being reduced this year to 3,400 men.

The UN troops man the 180-square-mile Gaza Strip in force, but have only patrols along the 117-mile desert border stretching southeast from it to the Gulf of Aqaba.

The moves come as tension rose following Israeli threats to strike hard against Syria if sabotage and border incidents in which 14 Arabees Syria continued.

Today's Egyptian announcements followed the announcement of an estimated division of U.A.R. troops eastward through Cairo two days ago.

The Syrian radio today called on Arabs to unite "for the final battle" against Israel.

Syrian Foreign Minister Ibrahim Makhous flew to Cairo for talks on the rising tension.

Cairo radio said the U.A.R. told the UN force to withdraw into the Gaza Strip "so that it may not face any threat in case of military operations breaking out."

The UN has stood between the Egyptians and Israelis since the aftermath of the 1956 Israeli-British-French attack on the U.A.R. after Egypt nationalized the Suez Canal.

Cairo radio said Field Marshal Abdel - Hakiem Amer, U.A.R. first vice-president and deputy commander of the armed forces, sent a message to Maj.-Gen. Indar Jit Rikhye, the UN force's Indian commander, asking him to concentrate his troops in the Gaza Strip.

The message said U.A.R. forces had gathered in Sinai, near the Israeli border.

Riots, Flames Rack Hong Kong

HONG KONG (CP) — Anti-British rioters spread fire and destruction through the main business area of Hong Kong's Kowloon section today. New demobilizations were reported in Peking, and London sent a sharp official protest to the Chinese government.

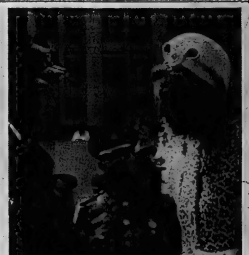
Tonight, Radio Peking accused Britain of brutally suppressing Chinese residents in Hong Kong to help the United States escalate the war in Vietnam.

Authorities clamped a curfew on southern Kowloon, a part of Hong Kong that lies on the Chinese mainland, after teenagers burned cars, smashed windows and fought with police.

Outnumbered riot police fought running battles with at least three separate crowds that spilled out of Kowloon's Sanpo-kong industrial area, ripped by three days of violence last week, into the main Nathan Road business districts across the harbor from Hong Kong island.

The biggest mob, estimated at 1,000 persons, looted shops, smashed store and bank fronts, overturned and burned automobiles, and hurled rocks at police and spectators.

Nathan Road is the main three-mile thoroughfare leading from Kai Tak airport to the cluster of main tourist hotels near the island waterfront.



Police fought back with tear gas and wooden batons, but many times the rioters defied them. One unit of six police turned and fled before a mob of 500.

Fifteen Critics Of LBJ Policies Back Vietnam War

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson's determination to see the war through in Vietnam has received backing from 15 senators critical of his policies.

Without moderating their dissent, 13 Democrats and two Republicans plan to make public a declaration aimed at North Vietnam's leaders saying they are steadfastly opposed to any American withdrawal until there is an honorable settlement of the war.

As a notice to North Vietnamese President Ho Chi Minh that he cannot count on criticism, demonstrations and protests to weaken U.S. resolve to secure South Vietnam against aggression, the move was welcomed by State Secretary Dean Rusk.

Senator Frank Church, Idaho Democrat and chief sponsor of the declaration said in an interview that "because the situation is so delicate," he submitted the statement to Rusk in advance.

He said Rusk felt a statement of this nature by the president's critics might have more chance of being accepted as truth by Hanoi than all of the declarations by the administration and he supporters that there will be no American pullout.

The declaration carries the signatures of such vigorous senatorial critics of Johnson's war course as J. W. Fulbright (Dem., Ark.), chairman of the foreign relations committee, George McGovern (Dem. S.D.), Joseph Clark (Dem. Pa.) and Wayne Morse (Dem. Ore.).

Republicans who signed are Senators John Sherman Cooper of Kentucky and Mark O. Hatfield of Oregon.

Texas Students Kill Policeman

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—Helmeted police, firing as they ran, stormed a men's dormitory at Texas Southern University today and halted student snipers who created a no-men's land on campus. A rookie patrolman was killed and two officers and a student wounded.

Police took 488 men students to jail and worked to discover which had fired the shot which killed Lewis R. Kubs, 25, who was shot between the eyes in the first assault wave against the dormitory that sheltered the snipers' nest.

Kuba died about 7½ hours after he was shot.

Four hours and 3,000 police bullets after the first peppering of gunfire and the explosion of four crudely-made fire bombs, officers secured the dormitory. They smashed down doors in their search for weapons and suspects, found one pistol, one shotgun and one rifle.

Mayor Louie Welch met this morning with police, the district attorney and officials of the predominantly Negro school where the administration ordered classes suspended.

The incident began late Tuesday night when police entered the campus to watch students recruiting others for a candlelight demonstration at a city dump which Negroes living in the area want closed.

Patrolman Robert Blaylock, 25, was wounded in the thigh in the first burst. One of the fire bombs hit a women's dormitory but burned out harmlessly.

Within 90 minutes Houston police had every man available on hand and more on the way from suburban forces. The little army reached 500.

Police sealed the campus and pulled their main force back to an intersection a block from the students' range of fire while F. D. Kirkpatrick, a leader of the Student Non-Violent Co-ordinating committee chapter on campus, sought to negotiate a truce.

The effort to start talks failed.

When the students set fire to barrels of tar, Police Chief Herman Short, acting on Welch's instructions, shouted to his men to "let's get this damned mess cleaned up."

Moving into darkness the police crept past the women's dorm and onto the terrace of the student union building, between the women's and men's housing units. It was there that a shot caught Kuba in the forehead.

Cabinet OKs Vietnam Policy And Adopts Rule of Silence

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson said today the cabinet reviewed Vietnam policy and every minister agreed to say and do nothing that would make his implementation more difficult.

The prime minister made the statement to reporters after a cabinet meeting which discussed Privy Council President Walter Gordon's public statements conflicting with government policy.

Mr. Pearson declined comment and referred reporters to the prime minister.

Mr. Pearson said: "I outlined in great detail our policy on Vietnam . . . so it would be clear to every member of the cabinet what that policy is.

"They knew it but I thought I would repeat it.

"We all agreed that as members of the cabinet we would follow that policy and say or do nothing that would make its implementation more difficult."

After the 90 - minute cabinet session the prime minister made his brief statement in the corridor outside the cabinet chamber as ministers hurried away to a caucus meeting of Liberal MPs and senators.

Mr. Pearson said that he went into detail of the statements by himself on Vietnam and by External Affairs Minister Martin who attended his first cabinet session since Mr. Gordon publicly broke ranks on Vietnam last weekend.

A mid - morning cabinet reception for Queen Juliana of The Netherlands was cancelled at the last minute after what the states visita office said was "an emergency cabinet meeting."

Earlier, Mr. Pearson said the session was "just a cabinet meeting to consider the discussion of yesterday's agenda."

Couple of Steeplejacks Would Like Less Wind, Fine Weather

Bay of Quinte district farmers are not the only ones who are hoping for an end to the wet weather which has been prevalent in the Belleville area in recent week.

There are a couple of steeplejacks currently engaged in roof and tower repairs at Bridge Street United Church who would greatly appreciate less wind and more fine weather.

The Kobzol Brothers (Kenneth and Clarence), from Bright, Ont., near Kitchener, have been in the city for nearly three weeks and because of the frequent wet weather have still only nicely started on the job which now appears will take considerably longer than expected.

The two brothers are painting the church bell tower, repairing roof slates and installing new gutters and valleys.

The big catch is that they cannot work when it rains.

Yesterday, despite the high wind, Kenneth Kobzol was hard at work painting the exterior of the bell tower along from a boss's chair 125 feet above the sidewalk.

"Actually," said the older brother, "we shouldn't be up here today in this wind but as we've been in Belleville more than two weeks I'd have been able to work only a few days.

Steeplejacking has been a lifetime vocation for the Kobzol Brothers and they are no strangers in Belleville.

They have worked on the steeple at St. Michael's Roman Catholic Church here on a number of occasions and have also done previous work on the tower at Bridge Street Church.

Kenneth started steeplejacking when he was 16 and one of his first jobs was working on the steeple at St. Michael's. That was more than 30 years ago.

To be a steeplejack you apparently have to be something of a jack of all trades.

Not only do they repair steeples, fix roofs and do painting. They also are called on to do general repairs such as the Kobzol Brothers have run into at Bridge Street church.

Many years ago a set of electronic bells was installed in the church with the big speakers being mounted on the church tower roof.

But as a result of high winds, the brackets holding some of the speakers have become broken.

Also the pigeons which daily flock around the church tower have been using the speakers as roosting places.

Besides the painting the brothers are replacing broken roof shingles and installing new flashing in the roof gutters.

Mrs. Douglas Redner Presented Silver Tray

AMELIASBURG — At a centennial celebration for Albury people at Mildred Corke School last night one of the school's teachers retiring at the end of this term was honored by the township area school board.

Mrs. Douglas Redner, who is completing 25 years as a teacher or elementary classes—most of the time in Ameliasburg township — was presented a silver tray by Mrs. Twila Langman acting on behalf of the board. Like many of the school children providing a program of singing and dancing for the occasion Mrs. Redner was dressed in centennial costume.

An item of interest was a display of antiques collected from families in the neighborhood. Among the prized articles was an exceptionally well-preserved assessment roll in hand written form by the township of Ameliasburg for the year 1856 when pounds, shillings and pence were used as legal tender.

Hospital Excavation Continues

TRENTON — S. O. Graham, chairman of the Trenton Memorial Hospital Board said today excavation at the hospital was continuing, pending official approval from the Ontario Hospital Services Commission of the board's plan to extend hospital facilities.

Mr. Graham announced at the annual board meeting on April 27 that an addition would be built in three stages. The million dollar addition will have the end result of accreditation for the hospital.

Mr. Graham commented favorably today on the residence of the hospital's director plan, as demonstrated the evening of the annual meeting. When 14 Hercules aircraft crashed north of the Canadian Forces Base, doctors, nurses and other hospital personnel were ready within 15 minutes to receive any number of casualties.

GOOD SUM DONATED

Last weekend's Rose Tag Day in Trenton, Brighton, Stirling and Frankford netted $724.25, a spokesman for the Trenton Memorial Hospital women's auxiliary said today.

STEELMEN STILL WORKING

Eight steelmen working on Trenton's new bridge and 30 to 40 structured steel field men at Central Rebar contracts are off this week, with no news of whether the International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers' strike which would have now entered intend to call them out on strike.

"At the moment we're carrying on a war of nerves," commented O. L. Crosby, field superintendent for the bridge job today. "The men are still at work . . . but who knows if they'll be here tomorrow . . . or next week?"

Panel Discusses Prospects Of Union Between Churches

KINGSTON (CP) — A New York City minister called Tuesday for the recovery of "meekness" as essential to the mission of the Church.

In one of two addresses before the annual day of Quiet conference of the United Church of Canada, Rev. Harold A. Bosley, senior minister of Fred York's Christ Church Methodist, said meekness means "unselfish, directed energies in the Christian scene, compliance to God's will.

"Meekness is the essential point in understanding the Christian morality," Dr. Bosley said. "It is one of the distinctive things about the Christian ethic."

Meekness should be the basic characteristic of the Christian.

In a second address, Dr. Bosley told about 300 delegates that there can be no cure for human relationship without honesty.

Many society is a quality of life that is linked with conscience with and heart and is vital for true Christians Dr. Bosley said.

"Being honest in today's society is easy but it is impossible if we are willing to pay the price.

In a panel discussion on prospects for union between the Anglican and United Churches Kingston lawyer John Black drew support from clergymen in stressing the need for involvement in church union.

Mr. Black warned that the position of the layman must be asserted in church union because the role of the layman today is "more challenging than ever before."

Rev. Robert Craig of Lindsay Ont. a member of the Commission of Ten which worked out the document Principles of Union said there are dissenters in both churches on the union movement.

Much of this he said results from a feeling that the union question is not being attacked

Curling Club Elects Board Of Directors

At the annual meeting of the Quinte Curling Club held at the clubhouse on Tuesday evening a board of directors including J. L. "Pete" Acton, Doug Bennett, R. E. "Dick" Barrett, Frank Dodds, Sr., C. "Bill" Gall, "Goldie" Livingston, Bill McPherson, Bill Riley and Bill Spinelli were elected without opposition and in the near future this board will meet to elect its president and then a various chairman of the standing committees. The meeting was one of the shortest in history but the seventy-odd members who attended were loath to go home but rather ate around and talked shop with a few reminisces of the past season thrown in.

Fred, the retiring president of the club, chaired the meeting and was sincerely thanked for the amount of work he put into the office during the past year. On behalf of the committees were also thanked for their efforts and the financial statement showing the club to be in a sound condition and the physical condition of the building to be in excellent shape.

Reports were received from Neville Symington, chairman of games, William McPherson on mixed curling, Goldie Living ston on mixeds, Jack Chevrson on fee, Jim Stewart on junior curling, Dr. McCorquodale on the state of the building, Bill Spinelli on the canteen and D. F. Bennett on entertainment and each of the reports showed a most successful season.

Ken Hess, representative of the club on the Bay of Quinte tri bonspiel gave a lengthy report and stressed the discussion from the floor with one member suggesting that the club withdraw from the spiel because of the decreased entry from the club this year but the matter was referred back to the new board of directors for their action and recommendations. Some discussion also took place on ice conditions near the close of the season and this matter was also left to the board for their decision and action.

It was a harmonious meeting in every respect and plans are already being laid for another season of curling in this community.

Canadian Wheat Farmers Must Be Cost Conscious

SASKATOON (CP)—The president of the National Farmers' Union says a new three - year wheat agreement negotiated in Geneva creates several "impressives" for Canadian growers.

Interviewed Tuesday after returning from the Kennedy round of world tariff bargaining in Geneva Roy Atkinson said:

"It becomes imperative that Canadian wheat farmers become conscious of production costs and take tremendous action to ensure control of input costs.

"They also should insist on a more efficient farm supply distribution system.

"They also should insist on a modern grain - gathering and handling system and up-to-date low-cost transportation.

"These are necessary steps if farmers are to stay in business and to keep Canadian wheat competitive in international markets."

Commenting on new floor and ceiling wheat prices Mr. Atkinson said:

"We are disappointed of

Egypt

Nasser sent messages to Russia, Yugoslavia, India, Iraq, Algeria and republican Yemen informing them of the latest developments and telling them the U.A.R. intended to implement the Syrian - Egyptian defence treaty.

War preparations have mounted in Egypt in the wake of charges that Israeli troops are concentrating on the Syrian border in preparation for a plot against Syria backed by the United States and masterminded by the U.S. General Intelligence Agency.

A state of emergency was declared in the Egyptian armed forces two days ago and full civil defence measures were initiated, including mobilization of hospitals.

Large units of the Egyptian Army were still moving out of Cairo early today toward the Israeli border. The local press described it as a "mass military mobilization on an unprecedented scale."

Major Effort Here

Ontario Drownings Hit Peak in 1966

There'll be nearly 400 swimmers better qualified to take to the water this summer in the Belleville area.

The statistic's significance is graphically underlined by grim necessity.

Last year 380 people drowned in Ontario, the worst year for water safety on record, says Red Cross officials.

Since that time, a stepped-up program to promote safety through instruction has been under way — and part of its tangible results can be seen in Belleville Collegiate Friday night.

Some 350 young swimmers, eight year old and up — including some adults — will receive a total of 500 awards from the Red Cross and the Royal Lifesaving Society of Canada.

The presentations mark the end of a 27-week course in swimming and water safety measures, sponsored by the Quinte Kiwanis Club, and taught by Belleville instructor Murray Workman.

The presentations, gained though practice each Friday night and Saturday at the Tony Hotel pool, range from beginners' certificates, to senior lifesaving awards.

Urgency of a stepped-up sense of swimming safety is stressed by Red Cross statistics which show that 79 persons died last year in Ontario while swimming.

The most highest factor involved boating. A total of 33 persons drowned in fails from power boats, 36 from non-power craft.

The statistics have not gone ignored in Belleville.

Mr. Workman today said he plans including water-survival practices in next year's round of safety courses.

Significantly, while summer sees the accident rate peaking on Ontario waterways, it was November — and duck-hunting season — that saw more people drown in falls from power boats. There were 12 such drownings last November.

Maine To Spray Spruce

WASHINGTON (CP) — The U.S. government with "some reluctance" has approved aerial spraying of 3,000,000 acres of Maine timber threatened by spruce budworm.

The agreement would increase the floor price by about 19 cents (U.S.) a bushel and the ceiling by about 16½ cents. A Canadian expert at the talks making a study of the consultant new pricing structure estimated the new floor and ceiling will increase by about 21 cents a bushel in Canadian funds for No. 1 northern grade at the Lakehead. The current wheat agreement which expires to July is based on 11.74¼ a bushel floor and $2.17¼ ceiling, basis No. 1 northern in Canadian funds.

Canadian growers originally hoped to get an increase of 40 to 50 cents a bushel.

A-Plant At Bath Possible

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Hydro is studying the feasibility of building a thermal power station in South Fredericksburg Township 30 miles west of Kingston.

Hydro Chairman George E. Gathercole said today several hundred acres of land have been optioned on Lake Ontario shore front about miles west of Bath to permit exploratory tests of foundation and other conditions.

A final decision on the site will not be reached until tests are completed and evaluated, he said.

The site acquired will be large enough to accommodate a nuclear power station, but in as much as permission of the atomic energy control board of and many other factors are involved, no definite decision has been reached as to the type of thermal plant that will be built there.

Flagship Purchased

VANCOUVER (CP)—The national hartbra board, anticipating rapid expansion of Vancouver port facilities, has acquired a new flagship for its patrol fleet that should be able to keep pace with developments.

The vessel acquired will be large enough to accommodate a nuclear power station, but in as much as permission of the atomic energy control board of and many other factors are involved, no definite decision has been reached as to the type of thermal plant that will be built there.

Mrs. Edwards died May 21 in Kingston General Hospital following a lengthy illness. She was 72.

Born in Belleville, she was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Gough. She resided in Belleville for 15 years and in Kingston for 72 years.

Mrs. Edwards was a member of the Church of the Good Shepherd.

She is survived by her husband, Gordon Edwards, by two sons, Merrin, of Palmerston and Alfred at Kingston. She is survived also by two daughters, Mrs. James (Cire) Elliot of Belleville and Mrs. Walter (Gelleine) Brooks, of Peterborough, by five grandchildren and by seven great grandchildren.

She was predeceased by her first husband, John Kemp in 1926.

Pipes, Headers, Floor, Roof Proposed for Ice Arena

Current hopes are for the construction of a new arena complex at the Belleville fair grounds, but the new facilities will not likely be ready for this winter and in the meantime the present arena on the market square is badly in need of repairs.

The estimated cost of the work is $31,000 and city council at its last meeting gave approval for the work to be done with payment to be spread over a three-year period.

City manager J. R. Reynolds pointed out that the capital cost was too large to be handled in the 1967 budget estimates and recommended the cost be amortized over three years with the annual payments being recovered through the general tax rate.

Needed at the arena is the installation of new brine pipes and headers at an estimated cost of $9,000; a new cement floor at $9,000; a new roof at $12,600, and miscellaneous repairs amounting to another $1,415.

Tenders for the new Arena roof and for the new cement floor over the brine pipes will likely be called. It is expected the new brine pipes will be laid by the Canadian Ice Machine Company.

Students Form Firm To Make Parade Floats

HALIFAX (CP)—Two graduate students at Dalhousie University say they have solved their own summer employment problem. They also hope to provide work for another 30 students.

The students, Frank Hennigar of neighboring Dartmouth and Ron Macinnis of Halifax, have formed their own company, Faradayed, which will construct parade floats for anyone in the Maritimes.

"It's unique in the Maritimes and, with more than 50 parades planned in the region this Centennial Year, we anticipate a reasonable demand," said Hennigar.

The students, who graduate in May, started planning the company last October. They found more than enough interest on campus with ideas and ability to design, construct and operate the floats.

About 30 stock floats will be available, each of which will be easily modified according to the customer's desires.

Hennigar said the floats will be leased rather than sold, benefiting the small businessman wishing to enter a float in a parade.

The students said the only snags they have encountered were governments and their red tape. They have to look after sales tax regulations, records of birings and firings, income tax returns and workmen's compensation requirements.

The students have already started work on their first order. A Halifax tea company has ordered a float depicting a teapot hauling a stream of tea

Bridge Club Will Hold Social Night

The evening will be spent in Bridge with only the rumors conceiving prizes on the night stay. Gerald B. "Jerry" Hyde, Q.C., president of the association will be master of ceremonies for the evening.

Those who joined the year were Jim Walker and Ross Bailey, Irv Shulman and Harry Tryopoulos, Jerry Hyde and Bert Rikley, Bill Colby and W. B. "Sid" Cavanagh, Jack Cook and Mrs. Jack Empson and Al McCollum and Ron Benn. College Street Bridge Opens Today

This is the day that Belleville motorists have been waiting for.

Barring a mid-day rain which conceivably could delay the painting of traffic lines, the new College Street bridge was expected to go into use this afternoon some time before the five o'clock traffic rush.

City engineer Wilbur Purcell said this morning that paving operations were expected to be completed on the bridge approaches before noon following which public works crewmen would start painting the traffic lines.

"If it doesn't rain the bridge will be open before five o'clock," said the engineer.

The engineer warned, however, that with the opening of the College Street bridge, motorists should not expect any immediate change in the traffic pattern at the Upper Bridge and Pinnacle Street.

Before there can be a change back to the original traffic pattern, there has to be an amending bylaw passed by city council and this will not be presented before next Tuesday's council meeting.

Also the traffic lights at the north end of Pinnacle Street will have to be co-ordinated with those at the south end of the Upper Bridge and the firm of Damas and Smith, traffic consultants, will be retained to work out the best possible phasing of the lights.

All in all it is expected it will be about a month before the former traffic pattern at the Upper Bridge can be re-instated.

In the meantime, the city works department has started on its annual spring program of painting traffic lines.

This is a job which ordinarily would have been completed by this date.

But, as with the paving of the College Street bridge approaches, chilly weather held up the work.

War With China?

Premier Chou En-lai is reported to have told a western journalist that China would not tolerate any invasion of North Vietnam by the United States, but would if needed go to the extent of North Vietnam and the U.S. arriving at any settlement of the conflict there that would be in the nature of a "sellout."

This is as good an indication as any of the fact that the real master on the communist side in Vietnam is China. It may have troubles at home; for instance, a recent Tokyo report said that several hundred thousand peasants fought backers of Mao Tse-tung in Szechwan Province and more than 10,000 persons were stated to have been killed or wounded in the previous four weeks.

That is many more casualties than have been occurring on both sides in the Vietnam war, but then life is cheap in China where the population outnumbers ours 15,000,000 and individuals do not count. China has the largest standing army of any nation in the world. In any war of attrition fought on land it could survive indefinitely.

There have been any number of suggestions of late that the United States and China are moving closer to an inevitable confrontation. But one wonders what form such a conflict would take. As Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery has said, the United States at all costs must avoid a land war with China.

A nuclear war then? Well here the United States, with massive superiority on the sea and in the air presumably would have the advantage. Yet what would be gained from initiating a nuclear holocaust? It could also involve Russia and bring about the Armageddon which could plunge the world into something far exceeding even the horrors of the dark ages.

Meanwhile the Vietnam conflict drags on interminably, and no end is in sight. Peking, it appears, is making sure there will be no quick end to the war. Whatever its troubles at home the communist regime there has plenty of staying power and resilience. Any kind of a war with China is a bleak prospect which could have incalculable effects on the future of the world.

John Masefield

With the death of John Masefield, Poet Laureate since 1930, one of the great names in the literature of our time has passed from the scene.

Masefield will be remembered mostly for his sea ballads — works like Cargoes and Sea Fever — and the earthiness and realism of his verse, much of which stemmed from the starkness of his early experiences of life.

Orphaned at an early age Masefield went to sea at 13 and in four years had travelled around the world as a seaman, ship's cook and ultimately as a sixth officer. Leaving his ship in New York in 1895 the young Briton spent a couple of years as a hobo and casual laborer, working his way across the continent and back. From such experiences came the same kind of realism that characterizes the verse of two other great poets of an earlier time, Robert Service and Australia's Wilfred Lawson. Experiences too that placed Masefield among the adventurers of our day, men like Sir Francis Chichester now heading for England after a lone round-the-world voyage.

It was in Yonkers, N.Y., of all places, that Masefield began a lifelong love of writing in which poetry predominated, although he also wrote some novels, including a work on Dunkirk.

"Although I wrote some verses in childhood with pressure to myself, I first felt the real delight of poetry in a room in Yonkers, N.Y. It was there that I decided that I had rather write verse than do anything else in the world."

With these experiences came such contrasting lines as those from Sea Fever, "I must go down to the sea again . . ." and the celebrated observation that "life is one damn thing after another!"

Popular Princess

Princess Alexandra, as Torontonians have discovered, is the personality girl of the Royal Family.

She is reported to have shaken hands with a bearded pacifist, and acknowledged a youth's shout of "Love the Queen, love you too," while a teenage girl from Yorkville, exposed to the princess outgoing ways and good looks, said "she's absolutely terrific!"

At the airport Alexandra worked gamely at conversation with members of the honor guard despite the extra loud blasts of the gun salute.

The princess is a welcome visitor. Her presence here indicates moreover that there is no sign of diminishing interest in Royalty in this country.

Agriculture

Are Canadians Taking This Vital Industry For Granted?

"Dynamic" is the word for the agricultural industry in Canada, says DOUGLAS TIPPER, agricultural representative for Hastings County.

In the following article Mr. Tipper reviews developments in the industry. He says Canadians must keep this vital industry dynamic, but remarks on that the farmer "gets and expects adequate returns according to his investment and equity."

"For a long time various groups have struggled as individual segments for their place in the economy," he says. "In 1966, as never before, the Canadian farmer entered the struggle and suddenly people began to talk of a 'complete perspective'. Other groups or segments had to be taken into consideration. There was little protest, if any, against farmers' demands. Suddenly everyone realized the importance of food . . ."

* * * *

How vital to the nation's interest is food? It is vital to the extent that the food industry requires 40 per cent of the national labor force. In Ontario, it is 35 per cent. This includes all products of the soil to the time the consumer hears the last click on the cash register at the time of purchase.

It is true all the food on the Canadian market, is not Canadian-produced but the foreign imports are balanced by tariffs and trading arrangements that affect some other part of the national economy. As a result, the food industry, including the farmer as a primary producer, is vital. In Ontario in 1967, it adds up to the province's biggest and most important industry. As such, farm production is rated as our largest primary industry and the foundation of our modern, industrialized economy. 'Dynamic' is the word for this industry.

Let us keep it dynamic. The rapid pace of change is affecting it in terms of technology, economics and sociology as much as any other industry. The key point is to take a perspective of the whole national picture. For a long time various groups have struggled as individual segments for their place in the economy. In 1966, as never before, the Canadian farmer entered the struggle and suddenly people began to talk of a "complete perspective". Other groups or segments had to be taken into consideration. There was little protest, if any, against farmers' demands. Suddenly everyone realized the importance of food. It is easy to say, "let's import, it's cheaper." But imports of food, except in the case of countries like Denmark and Holland, are a case of depending on current surpluses of other countries. Only wheat, in the Commonwealth, is a crop grown for national and export purposes on a calculated basis.

Back to history. Churchill taught us to evaluate history in the modern world. Look back to the history of nations and empires. Most of them, if not all, went under when they neglected their food industry and gave total importance to war machines and the industrial production of the day. A concrete example of this is found in the rise and fall of the Roman Empire. I quote from a speech prepared many years ago: "There was a time in the history of Rome when the men who worked the land and those who led the great Roman Legion were on a par. The man who toiled with the plow was equally honored with the man who fought with his sword. But Rome forgot the plowman and exalted the soldier and she entered upon a course that was destined to bring her to destruction". Let us guard our food vital industry in the national interest.

Today seems to be the world of economists. There are cures for every situation and opinions on how to do it. Mostly they are visions of their own trade, albeit 'very important ones. One most recent is that of John Kenneth Galbraith, Ontario-born economist, diplomat and intimate of the late President John F. Kennedy. Interviewed by Weekend Magazine, he said: "We'll have to recognize that agriculture is an area of state planning and, in some degree a welfare case".

This covers the wide range of the need for national interest and, on the other hand, a tendency to deal with the problem of the industry on a piecemeal basis — the effect of handouts. Can we afford a food industry that is deeply a State satellite? No. It can be so readily taken for granted. A live and vital industry depends on the efforts of individuals working both alone and in concerted effort. It affects too much of our lives. The farm producer has the same great needs of education, financing, marketing and legislation as any major industry because in the final analysis it is the greatest of all industries. What do nations basically struggle for? Food! True, in modern wordage we talk of control of land and the power inherited with it, but in the final answer it is food that is the prime, ultimate objective of people. Once we have that under control we can rise to unprecedented heights in terms of a modern economy.

Just who is the key man? Say "farmer" and everyone knows or thinks he knows who he is. Today in Ontario he makes up seven per cent of our population. Today he feels himself and so others. Twenty years ago he fed himself and 10 others. So the change has been dynamic. His position has not been so dynamic in terms of the gross national revenue. The Canadian farmer claims four per cent. By comparison, the Netherlands farmer is in the 7 - 8 per cent range and in Denmark it rises to 9 per cent — because of the size of markets the country puts on the industry from the standpoint of national needs. In the latter two, the Canadian farm products are competing in the same foreign markets. Foreign policy and trade distribution problems is the gift answer — and always will be unless we exert ourselves to do something about it as a nation. Farmers are receiving this need, but it will take the complete national perspective approach to really do something worthwhile.

To return to the question, who is the farmer? — in terms of Ontario spending, he is a billion dollar customer annually.

Statistics can be either boring or dramatic. A billion dollars isn't boring. Each year purchases by Ontario farmers include: $38 million for building maintenance; $18.7 million for electric power; $8.5 million for farm machinery and repair parts; $160 million for feed and seed; $56.7 million for fertilizers and lime; $311 million for food, shelter and clothing; $84.5 million for fuel and petroleum; $100.9 million for tractors, trucks, cars and repairs; also, $31.6 million for taxes; $23.7 million for interest on debts; $85 million for hired labor; and $18 million for rent. All this in addition to personal and property insurance; veterinary services, etc.

No other single type of business requires as many goods and services in such variety as the farm family business.

The farmer wants and expects adequate returns according to his investment equity, his managerial ability and his labor. No more, no less — just his fair share. His returns have not kept proportionate returns with, for example, factory labor. Yet since increased investment and managerial ability. On labor purchasing power alone, they run about 33 to 50 percent behind. He and his family, can't afford a stagnant farm economy any more than they can afford a stagnant system of education and community services. Yet these conditions exist and have existed with detrimental effects. In Ontario! Year the break-out is occurring. Let us love it consciously.

In the future, Ontario will have fewer farms, but likely they will be larger and certainly they will produce considerably more per acre. Mainly, it will be a question of judgment in terms of production units per acre per man. Though larger in size, the family farm is and will continue to be the backbone of our agricultural industry. The pride and incentive of working for oneself on one's own land will far outweigh any efforts of mass production or large community farms. On the other hand, cooperatives and market-ing boards help farmers obtain orderly marketing and fair prices for their products.

It is the farmer who decides what he will produce, who accepts the challenges of nature and the risks of crop failure, and it is the farmer who receives the satisfaction of helping things to live and grow in order to benefit society.

In the national interest, let us put the food industry and the private producer, the Canadian farmer, in proper perspective as we plan our affairs. For the Canadian farm economy is raised and maintained at the proper level, it will play its part in the continued development of the nation. For we are the receiving and leading group of the world's people.

Rates Increase 11 Per Cent

Canadian Stock Exchanges Revise Commission Structure

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto, Montreal - Canadian and Vancouver stock exchanges, Canada's big three, announced a sweeping revision of commission rates Tuesday.

The Toronto exchange estimated the new structure will increase gross commissions by 11 per cent. It also calculated that $38,000,000 was paid out on business transacted on the TSE in the six months ended March 31.

The new rates are expected to go into effect July 1.

The Calgary exchange said its rates are under review and a decision is expected in a week or 10 days.

Following the New York Stock Exchange's example, the new rates on stocks trading at above $1 a share will be calculated on a percentage basis.

Until now, the Canadian exchanges had a series of flat commission rates, rising in steps; for example, the commission has been 2½ cents a share on stocks selling from $1 to $1.99 a share.

The new commission charged for each 100 shares trading at $1 will amount to $1.75 or 90 per cent less than the current charge of $2.50.

On 100 shares trading at $1.99, the new rate will be $4.47 or 78.5 per cent higher than the current charge.

Under other changes the percentage increase in commissions declines as the price of stock increases.

One hundred shares trading at $5 but under $7.50 now are subject to a flat commission of $15. The new rate would have a charge of $12.75 for 100 shares at a $5 basis increasing to $13.43 for 100 shares selling at $7.45.

The present commission on a board lot selling at $25 to $39.88 is $35. This will be changed to $36 for a board lot at $25, ranging to $40.97 for one at $39.25.

The commission on a board lot selling at $100 or more declines under the new changes to $33.08 from $35.

A board lot is the smallest number of shares allowed to be traded in a single transaction.

Current members of the Toronto exchange the new rates will add about $2,250,000 to the annual total of $75,000,000 in commissions—fees paid by the public to brokers for buying and selling stock.

The Montreal, Canadian, and Vancouver exchanges announced the July 1 changes in commission rates on the authority of their governing committees. The TSE membership must give its approval at a special meeting.

One Million Shells Produced

Hundreds of shells receive final inspection at the General Motors Corp. Chevrolet plant in the Detroit suburb of Warren where workers produced their one millionth 81-millimeter mortar shell in the last 10 months. The shells are taken to an ammunition plant in Tennessee, loaded with explosives, and then shipped to Vietnam. The Warren plant has become the nation's biggest producer of the projectiles. Banks Hope to Update Image

TORONTO (CP)—"Down with drab 'old savings ideas,'" exclaims a Royal Bank advertisement.

It is one characteristic shot in a three-year-old campaign by chartered banks to update their public images.

"We have to go out and compete for people's attention in our advertising," says Alex Gillies of Toronto-Dominion.

In addition to the slogans, banks are using charm-school graduates, modern offices and longer hours to bring in business.

Loans, deposit interest and other services are coincidental and banks must compete for the consumer dollar through advertising, staff and official.

R. B. Pratt, advertising manager for the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, said market research three years ago showed that banks "did not appeal to anybody."

The old proverb that banks would only lend money if you did not really need it has given way to Imperial-Commerce's existing: "Want to buy a red convertible?"

Banks found through research that they were not reaching the large and affluent market of the under-40 set.

Unlike their thrifty parents, the under-40s are unwilling to scrimp and save for cars and furniture. They want them now. The discovery of this market was the signal for Toronto-Dominion's Go-Ahead loan program.

An advertising executive who handles the account of a large bank said bankers finally realized they have services to sell. They are trying to convince the public banks are more than just places to keep their money.

The executive said there had been a gentlemen's agreement among bankers not to use radio advertising. This was broken in March and several jingles are heard on radio stations.

Bank buildings which once resembled neo-classical railway stations are palaces of glass and steel equipped with the latest computers.

The Bank of Montreal, Imperial Commerce, Toronto - Dominion and the Mercantile Bank of Canada are experimenting with longer public banking hours at a few branches.

The work speed-up by computers relieves the bank staff from the bookkeeping necessity done before 10 a.m. and after 3 p.m.

Toronto-Dominion decided to send volunteers to a charm school for instruction in dress and cosmetics. Girls who completed the course and remained to ornament the bank for six more months were reimbursed.

Thomson Increases Earnings

LONDON (CP) — Turnover and earnings of the Thomson Organization Ltd. increased during 1966, Lord Thomson says in his annual statement.

The Canadian-born publisher, whose British holding includes the prestigious Scottish Television besides newspapers, magazines and books, says total sales increased to a record £63,000,000. Trading profits at £7,857,817 were greater by 8.8 per cent than the previous year. These figures do not include Thomson's North American operations.

Thomson, in his statement to trust Tuesday, says that since The Times introduced front-page news — in place of advertisements—more than a year ago its circulation has gone up more than 30 per cent. Circulation of 400,000 is expected in 1967 by Thomson, who acquired majority ownership of the paper last Sept. 30.

Breakdown of the Thomson Organization profit shows regional newspapers contributed £3,530,000, the Sunday Times £1,049,000; Scottish Television £1,035,000, magazines, books and exhibitions £1,062,000, travel companies £835,000 and other activities £77,000.

U.S. Federal Reserve Chairman Assails Some Institution Investors

NEW YORK (AP)—Chairman William McChesney Martin of the U.S. Federal Reserve Board has called disquieting the speculative stock trading of some institutional investors. He said Tuesday it contains "poisonous qualities" reminiscent of the 1920s.

Martin said the New York Stock Exchange must make certain that "this new cult of short-run market performance does not once again result in a tarnishing of stock exchange wares."

He referred to the depression of the 1930s which was preceded by the boom of the 1920s.

Martin made his remarks in a talk prepared for a luncheon in connection with the 175th anniversary celebration of the New York Stock Exchange.

The comments by the former New York Stock Exchange president were similar to those he made in a New York talk June 1, 1965. He said then there were "disquieting similarities" between the prosperity at the time and the boom which preceded the depression of the 1930s.

Martin said Tuesday that some institutional investors—he mentioned mutual and pension funds—are creating a new problem posing a potentially serious risk to the future of stock markets.

It said it also is looking into the influence which these investors, including mutual funds, might have on companies in which they become dominant stockholders.

The U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, in a report last December on the $38,300,000,000 mutual fund industry, said it is studying the effect on stock prices of rapid large-blue trading by institutional investors.

It said it also is looking into the influence which these investors, including mutual funds, might have on companies in which they become dominant stockholders.

One-Day Strike Paralyzes France

PARIS (AP) — A politically-inspired general strike knocked out the main public services in France today. Some 13,700,000 were striking or out of work and millions of other Frenchmen were affected.

The one-day strike, a frequent event in recent years, was being taken in stride by most Frenchmen.

Successful Living

Mother's Method of Handling Theft

Dear Doris: Just tonight read of the woman who suspected her nine-year-old boy of stealing. He, probably is, but forgot about him admitting it, even if it is confirmed. I too stole, to buy candy and make friends—sometimes sharing candy with even those I stole from at school.

Last year I found 44 cents in my son's pants. I left the money there. Later, my six-year-old daughter came downstairs, excited because she had found 36 cents in her dresser drawer. I checked — and sure enough the money was missing from the boy's pocket. And I found the other ten cents in her drawer.

Suddenly I felt panicky — my daughter a thief at six! Why? From experience, I knew if I asked her she would deny it. However, I did ask her if there were something she wanted to tell me; an innocent "No" was the reply. So I calmly told her I knew she had taken the money and still had ten cents hidden. No denial — simply the expected tears.

I asked her to think it over. Later, when questioned if she was ready to talk about it she said, "I can't". I realized that she couldn't either. So, I told her how I understood her kupidity as a child, her hiding some of the money and her fear of discovery. I gave her the 44 cents back, and asked her to produce she had just found it.

Shortly she came back and pretended to find the money for the first time. My son was relieved to hear that it was not lost. This "second chance" for my daughter has certainly been worthwhile, as I don't feel suspicious of her, which I would have, had I given her a spanking to force a confession.

Many parents also make the mistake of allowing children to keep anything they "find." This may start out as a ball, a shipping tape; but where does it end? Emphasize that whatever it is, it belongs to someone else who must miss it very much. Helping them compose a letter to the "lost and found" is another good idea. Let them know the peace of mind that comes with returning something. — From Experience.

Dear Experience: Agreed. Small fry need help in distinguishing between what is theirs and what is not there; and in facing facts without loss of too much self-respect.

DORIS CLARE

Dear Doris: I heard that the students taking commercial art courses have to model for other students sometimes with not many, if any, clothes on. Do you know if this is true? — Talent for Art

Dear Talent: Heavens, no! For the most part, models are hired. In some cases, one student will pose for another, by mutual consent. The amount of cover-up depends on them.

Dear Doris: Those red-blooded 13-year-old Canadian girls often have black patches on their necks and behind their ears. Please tell them to get acquainted with soap and water first before using any paint.

Anyway, a red-blooded healthy girl has rosy color, more attractive than any artificial hues you can put on.

I am sure you have the courage to print this letter? — Truth.

Dear Truth: Well, why not? I believe every word of it.

Is it better to put up with misunderstanding or to begin talking things over? Let Doris help you see the light.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Grandmother: "I always turned my babies on their stomachs to burp them. It's easier than the way you're doing it."

Mother: "Fred's mother said she always burped her babies over her shoulder."

Nothing brings out material recollections like a new baby in the family. If some of the loving advice seems to conflict with other loving advice, it may be because there are several good ways to care for a baby.

Every young mother will get lots of advice — most of it wise and good. Listen patiently. Experience has its points. If you doubt the advice, ask your pediatrician.

Serve Lamb Stew on Bed of Hot Rice

By MARY MOORE

On Mariance's shopping list I had written "2½ lbs. stewing lamb — could be frozen."

I was in Esquimalt near Victoria at the time and my son-in-law Herbie picked up the list and said, "Would you prefer like me to do this grocery shopping?" "We sure would."

WEDNESDAY

Dinner Menu

Philadelphia Pepper Pot Soup; Sliced Cold Roast Pork (leftover from Tuesday); Glazed Sweet Potato Slices; Spinach; Velvet Smooth Milk Jelly (with Tuna) with Fresh Frozen Strawberries; Coffee.

He brought home so many groceries that he and Gary and Davey made two trips to the car to bring them into the house. But among them were two packages stewing lamb weighing exactly 2½ lbs. and costing 15 cents per pound on a "special". It was from the rib section.

I took over. I cut off all excess fat of which there was at least 1½ lbs.

MADRAS LAMB CURRY
(serves 5 or 6)

3½ lbs. stewing lamb
1-3 cup flour
1½ tsps. curry powder
1 tsp. pepper
2 tbsps. lemon juice
3 cups water (use bouyl)
2 med. onions, chopped
1 large apple, pared and chopped
½ cup raisins
Cooked rice (see below)
Trim fat from stewing lamb and discard. Cut into small pieces as well as you can leaving most meat on the ribs. Sear in ungreased frying pan over high heat until you render out some fat. Add flour and curry and sear until dark gold. Tip off excess fat. Add salt, pepper, lemon juice and 2 cups only of the water. Simmer covered 1 hr. At this stage add the onion, apple, raisins and remaining 1 cup water and simmer ½ hr. longer. (NOTE: Before adding the onion and fruit I started to lift out the rib bones. My 9-year-old grandson Davey was standing beside me watching and objected saying, "Grandma, if you take those bones out it won't be spareribs any more." So I left them in and it was a joy to see all four children pick up the rib pieces and gnaw them clean to the bone.)

Serve on bed of hot rice: into heavy saucepan measure 1¼ cups raw long grain rice and 2½ tsps. salt. Add 4 cups boiling water. Cover, bring to boil, turn off heat and let stand. Turn on heat to simmer and cook 25 min. Simmer when all grains will be tender and separate.

Do not hesitate to serve Madras Lamb Curry at an informal guest meal.

Accompanying condiments could be small separate bowls of chutney, raisins, chopped green onions or chives, peanuts and shredded unsweetened coconut (preferably raw).

Brother-in-law Has No Right to Claim Baby

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am 18, unmarried and pregnant. My brother-in-law and husband have been good to me. When I told them about my condition they insisted that I move into their apartment. My sister works so I have been keeping house for them, which I don't mind a bit.

The problem is this: My sister has been trying to have a family for four years but no luck. The doctor says there is nothing wrong with her and suggested that her husband be tested. His reply was to be checked so my sister thinks he is unable to have a child. I know different because he is the father of my unborn baby. Of course my sister does not know it and I'd rather die than tell her.

They both want my baby but I'm afraid it would break my heart to see this child grow up under my eyes.

My brother-in-law claims I have no right to deprive him of the only child he may ever produce. Please, please tell me what to do. I'm going crazy. I can't see any real here for obvious reasons so print your answer and I will ditch the paper when my letter appears in print. Thank you. — WORRIED.

* * *

DEAR WORRIED: Your brother-in-law is a fine one to tell you what you have a right to do. He has already demonstrated his bad judgment is worth.

Get in touch with the Family Service Association and make arrangements to go to a home for unwed mothers as soon as possible. Relax, Your baby will be up for adoption and forget about giving him to your relatives.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: We are students at a well-known high school and need your help and soon. Your answer could start a whole new swing toward justice, Ann, so please don't let us down.

I am only one of several seniors who has played in the band for three years and will be graduating in June. This will be a big day in our lives.

The music teacher insists that we play in the band for graduation exercises which means we will not be able to enjoy the honor of marching in the line-up and sitting on the stage and doing all the things the graduating class gets to do.

Do you feel this is fair? Please print this letter and your answer. — SOUR NOTES.

* * *

DEAR NOTES: No, I do not think it is fair and I hope the music teacher will reverse the decision. Perhaps the quality of the graduation music will suffer if the seniors are marching instead of playing, but so what? You kids should not be deprived of the full flavor of graduation because you play in the band. I am on your side and you can quote me.

Confidential to FILLED WITH DOUBT: Some people who are institutionalized are better balanced and more rational that some individuals who are walking the streets. Joint UCW Meeting Hears Talk on Unity

MARMORA — Christian Unity was theme of an address given in St. Andrew's Christian Education Building Tuesday evening to women of Marmora and district churches by Rev. Robert Crooks, originally from the Maritimes now minister at Tabernacle United Church, Belleville.

Rev. Crooks cited examples of the divisive forces, greed, differences of belief, selfish ambition, among the disciples and said that Judaus knew that the same things would plague his followers in the generations to come. And so He prayed that all might be one. He was accurate in his foresight, for in the early church of the first century there were fighting factions marked by disunity and discord. Down through the centuries these have been among the unfavorable characteristics of the Christian churches. In the North American continent there are over 300 different denominations.

"At a Toronto study session, statistics showed that the United Church of Canada had 179 candidates for the ministry in 1881, and only 6 in 1956", Mr. Crooks said.

"The chairman felt that this might be God's way of saying we have enough ministers already, too many churches, as there is no need for a church every five miles. If the manpower and resources already possessed are used wisely, the outreach of the church will be extended and her activity increase".

Mr. Crooks was introduced by Mrs. Leith Stetson and thanked by Mrs. Vaughn Glover.

Mrs. Allan Wells, UCW president, and Mrs. Charles Gordonier of Deloro circle, welcomed women from Zion and Cordova charges, St. Paul's Anglican Church, Pentecostal and Free Methodist Churches and Sacred Heart Church.

The worship service was led by members of Deloro Unit, Mrs. Jacqueline Sayers and Mrs. John Davidson, Mrs. Eldon Killian accompanied the singing of hymns, and the offering was received by Mrs. Garnet Brownson and Mrs. Don Brady.

Pupils of Deloro Public School under the direction of Miss Linda Paranuik and principal Jack Murphy, presented a program. Square dancing group included Joanne Donaldson and Wayne Paranuik, Debbie Deering and Ron Empey, Ann Galloway and Howard Deering, Marlene Galloway and Randy Lowery. Commentator for a colonial fashion parade was Linda Tompkins and Debbie taking part were Susan McKenzie, Brenda Empey, Margie and Janet Empey, Joanne Donaldson, Marlene Galloway, Anne Galloway, Debbie Brady, Debbie Deering, Gloria Coens, Debbie Brown. A story and playlet was presented by the junior room with Carol Brown, Sharon Martin and Barry Gallaway taking part. The junior room pupils, the girls choral group and the senior choir also sang.

Congregation Honors Brides At Shower

FRANKFORD — Members of the Frankford Free Methodist congregation held a miscellaneous shower at the home of Mrs. Bob Campbell in honor of two brides-to-be, Miss Ruth McCumber and Miss Laura Potter.

Merle Moore was chairman for a program consisting of a contest conducted by Mrs. Richard Tweidy, readings by Mrs. George McComber and a duet by Campbell, a duet sung by Mrs. Bob Campbell and Miss Myrna Sine. Mrs. Gerald Haggarty read an address and the guests of honor were presented with gifts.

DISTRICT WOMEN'S INSTITUTES

SIDNEY SOUTH W.I.

At the May meeting of Sidney South Women's Institute held at the home of Mrs. Roy Nokes, Mr. Bert Waters and Mr. Gerald Cherry, St. John Ambulance, gave an interesting demonstration of rescue breathing.

Mr. Waters explained that after one minute a person has 98 to 100% chance of saving a life but after 12 minutes only 1 in 10,000 chances. It is well to know what to do in case of an emergency.

Each person present was allowed to practise rescue breathing with the mannequin "Rescu-ci-Ann" which was made in Norway and is owned by the St. John Ambulance.

Other means of artificial respiration were also discussed and explained.

Mr. Waters and Mr. Cherry were introduced by Mrs. Harold Regenaburg, safety convener, and thanked by Mrs. Fred Moran.

Mrs. Roy Nokes, president, was in charge of the business meeting when a Centennial project was suggested to be held some time in the fall.

Refreshments were served by the hostess and assistants, Mrs. M. Mywaart and Mrs. R. Windsor.

The June meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. W. Shortt.

CHRIST CHURCH JUNIOR AUXILIARY BANQUET

The annual mother and daughter banquet of Christ Church Junior Auxiliary was held Wednesday night.

Mrs. Jack Fletcher introduced the head table guests: Canon and Mrs. R. B. Wright; Rev. Allen Lauder; Mrs. Gerald Cherry, Diocesan secretary for Junior Auxiliary; Mrs. Fletcher, president of the Junior branch at Christ Church and Mrs. Ronald Godden, executive vice-president of the Anglican Church Women of the Diocese of Ontario.

Graduation certificates were presented by Mrs. Fletcher; the toast to the mothers was given by Miss Mary Womacott and responded to by Mrs. J. Cook; and Miss Betsy Wright and Miss W. Higgins led a singsong.

Canon Wright spoke on the part Junior Auxiliary girls will have in shaping the next 100 years and of the concern citizens of a wealthy and literate nation must have for the three-quarters of the world's people who go to bed hungry each night. Mrs. Cherry reported a decline in the number of branches of Junior Auxiliary in the last year because of the shortage of leadership. She called on the mothers present to come forward and offer their assistance

New Home Recipe Reducing Plan

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drug store and ask for four ounces of Naran Concentrate. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoons full a day as needed and follow the Naran Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way enjoyed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

Laws as They Affect Women Spelled Out in Pamphlet

TORONTO (CP)—In Ontario it is a punishable offence to have a child under 10 unattended for an unreasonable length of time.

A daughter who is married is not relieved of responsibility for a parent who is destitute or unable to maintain himself if her husband can afford it, she can be obliged by law to provide support.

A housewife who employs domestic help must deduct income taxes and Canada Pension Plan contributions if she pays the employee $600 or more a year.

These are samples of the spelling out, in layman's terms, of laws as they affect women in Ontario in a pamphlet called Law and the Woman in Ontario. It was recently published by the women's bureau of the Ontario department of labor.

The bureau's research officer, Jo-Ann Foglitch, who prepared the booklet, says it was done in response to public demand. Both individuals and organizations have asked if there was such a thing.

"We started with the statute books and went to the chief welfare and attorney general's departments and others. It wasn't enough just to put the laws into layman's language, you would end up writing a big fat legal text if you went into it all.

"We are not a legal aid department. We hope the book will tell them little things they might have to do—or the reverse—and they can go on from there for legal aid."

The booklet is available for 25 cents at the bureau, 74 Victoria St., Toronto.

WEDDING

WOOD — WILLOW

A double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. O. R. Flindall in Carlingford United Church recently when Lois Evelyn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Willow, St. Paul's, Ont., was united in marriage to William John Wood, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Wood, Ivanhoe. Jim Jordan played the wedding music and Miss Heather Morris and Miss Willow Morris of Hereford sang a duet.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white georgette over taffeta gown trimmed with pearls at neckline and sleeves. The full-length A-line skirt had a detachable train trimmed with bows at the waistline. She wore a shoulder-length veil and carried a bouquet of gerberias and stephanotis.

The bride's attendants were Miss Doris Willow of Hamilton, maid of honour, and Miss Judy Wood of Kingston and Miss Renate Fritz of Hamilton, bridesmaids. They wore sleeveless green georgette over taffeta gowns with lace bodices and green flowered headpieces.

Robert Taylor of Wawa was groomsman and the ushers were Maurice Willow and Harvey Willow, brothers of the bride.

The bride's mother was attired in a pink ensemble with matching hat, black accessories and a corsage of carnations.

Following the reception at the Victorian Inn, Stratford, the couple left in a wedding trip to Pacaudon Valley, Mount Pocono, Penn.

For her wedding trip, the bride chose an off-white wool dress and coat with blue and green trimming, navy accessories and a corsage of yellow rosebuds. On their return, the couple will live in Ivanhoe.

The Experts Say

A Range of Specially Trained People Is Needed for Hospitals

TORONTO (CP) — Hospitals need librarians, administrative staff, pharmacists, social workers—a range of specially trained people who are neither doctors nor nurses.

Marlene Schnurr is hospital careers consultant for the Ontario Hospital Association and it is part of her job to tell young people about the careers open to them in hospitals.

"It's not that we don't need nurses. We do, but we want people to know about other possibilities. In the hospital it's the nurse and doctor that people see and they often think technicians are nurses. I have been asked, for example if a physiotherapist is a special kind of nurse.

"Years ago, of course, the nurses did a lot of these things. Today it is highly specialized."

The hospital careers department has a booklet called Hospital Careers. Miss Schnurr says some other provincial hospital associations also have them. It can be obtained from the Ontario Hospital Association, hospital careers department, 34 Ferrand Dr., Don Mills, Ont. Miss Schnurr says some other provincial hospital associations have similar booklets available.

Local hospital administrators, hospital school directors and professional associations can also provide information on available jobs and the training necessary for them in each province.

Miss Schnurr works with guidance counsellors and hospitals to put on career days in schools and more elaborate career expositions.

The OHA booklet describes 14 categories of hospital career and the training needed in Ontario, and has information on financial help available to students.

It begins with hospital administrator.

"The student who is to become a successful hospital administrator must be intelligent, industrious, systematic and possess an alert mind. He must be ambitious, energetic and of unquestionable integrity."

It describes the work of a dietitian, says she may be responsible for training and teaching as well as food planning. Alternative possibilities are dietary and food supervisors.

The medical laboratory technologist helps the doctor diagnose and treat disease by doing the tests and experiments asked for by the doctor.

A medical record librarian must have specialized training to assemble, analyse, code and index records and procedures. The library can also use clerks and technicians.

The occupational therapist is part of the rehabilitation team, working under the direction of a physician. Ontario has a course for occupational therapy assistants.

The physiotherapist works to restore maximum function to people disabled by accident or disease.

The pharmacist in a hospital may also be a teacher, stock buyer, researcher, administrator.

The radiological or x-ray technician prepares patients for x-ray examination and is responsible for the taking of x-rays or radiographs.

Speech pathologists and audiologists diagnose and treat patients with disorders of speech, voice and language formation.

Hospital social workers work with patients and their families to treat social aspects and consequences of illness.

Of nurse and nursing assistant training, Miss Schnurr says:

"Some of the hospital programs are giving a better education today than they once did. Nursing school programs are being changed to put less emphasis on work in the hospital while they train. We would like to interest more boys in nursing.

"Although this is a well-worn phrase, hospital work is satisfying, it is an important field."

Elegance and Sophistication Appear in Newest Lingerie

NEW YORK (CP)—The night-gown now is so sophisticated that if you are daring enough you can wear it to evening and at-home events without causing a raised eyebrow.

Elegance and sophistication appear in lingerie, sleepwear and playtime shirt-and-shorts.

Some of the floral flip pettidrawers would even pass as day-time dresses. Warner's short-sleeved T-shirt and tiny mini-shorts, in satron and nylon were previewed as suitable for partying or sleeping.

Warner's also introduced a floor-length nightgown, blue-cut in decron crepe chiffon, the full-ness falling from a gathered circle-neckband that leaves the shoulders exposed. No one would question its appearance at a dance. Vassarette's short sleep gown in floral satron tricot has party manners with its wide bateau neckline and its mini-tie in front creating an empire look.

Ruth Gernreich's nightgown with oriental influence is no more bizarre for a semi-formal occasion than many of his couture clothes. His temple-belt sleeved, dacron - and - cotton shortie is in a chrysanthemum print with a high-tieing obi band in moon dots.

Gernreich has designed a whole oriental - inspired collection in these prints for Exquisite, including halter bras and pant-slips with hip-hugger cuffs. Another outfit that Gernreich himself tags as suitable for brunch, bed or the beach is a three-piecer of blue-polka-dotted mini-shirt, brief pink pants and a blue bra.

In Italy, Count Emilio Pucci has transferred some of the abstract prints used in his jersey dresses over to lingerie. One such short nightgown is something like a tennis dress and is topped by a smoking - jacket robe.

For sheer elegance you cannot overlook Pauline Trigere's lingerie-with-gowns to complement her famous crepes. The matching bra and girdle are jewel-studded.

Fernando Sanchez, a designer for Warner's, likes ruffles. These appear in his matador sleepshirt, floor-length, with the top tucked and ruffled like the bullfighter's shirt.

He also introduced a ruffled flamenco gown described as a "breakfast dress" for at-home mornings. But it certainly could have a dual life as sleepwear, too. His ruffled bikinilike flounces high in front and clips in the back, in the tradition of the famous flamenco dancer's costume.

The Eastern look that is invading every aspect of fashion turns up in sleepwear and lingerie too. Warner's has its Karwin jumpsuit in orange with a wide band of turquoise, its lotus print half-slip, shift and kimono. And Jeanette Hayt coats are translated into shortie nightgowns by Gernreich.

Claire Hackbad of Toronto has designed a blue-cut tent cover-up in smash stripes in silk-and-acrylic fibre with the long hand-kerchief hemline caught at ankle length to give an Eastern trouser effect. Underneath is her frilly-neckline, flowing and short nightie.

However, there are some orthodox undergarments on the spring - summer scene. Hollywood Vassarette likes feminine floral prints, some in latticework check, for petticoats, slips, half-slips and bras. New and interesting is the combination of tiny bouquet-print bra and girdle and larger florals on the petticoat.

Other lingerie designers include garden prints, too, mostly in pastels. But the top fashion shade of yellow also appears in both lingerie and sleepwear.

Marmora IODE Holds Doll and Fashion Show

MARMORA — A wide variety of entertainment at the Centennial Doll and Fashion Show sponsored by Marmora Chapter of the IODE drew guests from the surrounding area to Marmora Town Hall Wednesday afternoon.

A collection of historical character dolls provided by the Ontario Centennial Planning Branch of the Department of Tourism and Information was displayed.

Adults and children of the village also brought dolls to display during the afternoon show. Mrs. Jack Donaldson and Mrs. Richard Kolaiski showed dolls in period costume. German dolls from the Black Forest were displayed by Mrs. Frank Leal, a scrapbook of dolls was shown by Veronica Callery; a Scottish doll belonged to Charlene O'Neill, and Karen McTaggart brought a Negro doll in a christening gown.

In charge of these displays were Mrs. Howard Bleecker, Mrs. Mel Borland and Mrs. G. J. Metkiejohn.

A collection of miniature planes and cars was shown by Lionel Bennest and an electric bell made by Edward Cassidy also received much attention, the latter ringing during intervals in the afternoon.

A cavalcade of period fashions was a highlight of the event. Commentator was Mrs. Glen Wemyss and she was assisted in organizing the fashion presentation by Mrs. A. M. Jones.

Several of the gowns modelled were originals dating back 100 years. There were ball gowns, afternoon dresses, extravagant garden party ensembles, colonial and silver and jewellery saved for generations. Children as well as adults helped to make the parade a success.

Pouring tea for guests was Mrs. Irene Snell and the tables were in charge of Mrs. Frank Leal.

The sale of home baking was looked after by Mrs. J. R. Reynolds with assistance from Mrs. Sid Damorest and Mrs. William Regan.

Mark Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Jones, was winner of the afghan made and raffled by the Marmora Chapter.

The guest book was in charge of Mrs. Donaldson and Mrs. Park, and general conveners were Mrs. Bleecker and Mrs. Metkiejohn.

Antique Sale Helps Disabled

TORONTO (CP) — For the 12th year, thousands of items have been picked out by amateur volunteers from donations sent to Toronto's Society for Crippled Civilians.

They have been washed and polished, dusted and priced by the same amateurs and will be shipped to a skating rink to be offered at the society's one-day annual antique sale May 17.

The society's main aim is to provide employment and training for employment to the disabled. One way it does this is by operating stores. People donate cast-offs, clothes, books, furniture and other items.

Crippled Civilians' trucks collect them. Once the goods are sold, the trucks deliver them to customers. Members sell at the stores and they often clean or repair the donations.

The antique sale is the big project of the 75-member women's auxiliary to the society. Mrs. Bert McGill, the auxiliary's public relations officer, says the show started in a small way, with about 1,000 items. Last year she estimates about 20,000 were sold to net almost $25,000.

"Someone had the idea that if we took some of the best things out of the shop we would get more money for them, and the more money we get, the more goes to the Crippled Civilians."

The sale — in the suburban Leaside Memorial Arena—goes on for 12 hours, from 9:30 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. Mrs. McGill says last year 17 people spent the night outside in sleeping bags to be the first ones in.

The auxiliary charges a 50-cent admission fee in the morning, party in the hope of keeping the crowd down, partly because other antique sales charge admission and it feels it we might do the same—it helps pay the sales tax.

All the merchandise is given to the society.

Mrs. McGill says collectively the auxiliary members know enough to fix the prices of many items and they try to train themselves. Shortly before the sale a professional appraiser spot - checks prices for them. The appraisers donate their time.

"Sometimes they say, 'Why are you charging that, you should only charge half that much,' other times they tell us we could get four times as much for something. But it can only be a spot check."

In the first years they tried cutting prices to half for the last two hours to clear everything, but Mrs. McGill says greedy customers put an end to the practice. Too many of them held on to items for hours, waiting for the half-price time.

Expo Still Has Snags as Children Snarl Express Stops

MONTREAL (CP)—A horde of shrieking school children snarled up Expo 67's $18,000,000 transport system Tuesday and officials are guarding against a repeat performance today as Montreal celebrates its 325th birthday with its special day at the fair.

Public relations officials said 20,000 children from Ontario and Quebec points arrived at Place d'Accueil a little later than usual. They combined with 7,000 early fair-goers to swamp the loading platforms.

At 10 a.m., a half-hour after opening, 27,000 had passed through the turnstiles and security men on Expo Express stations were struggling to keep platform crowds at manageable proportions as more visitors came through the gates.

Confusion at the four express stops slowed the trains until the day, it was expected that many of the 1,216,325 residents of the city proper and the 1,205,729 in its suburbs would come to see the city's flag raised in Place des Nations. This flag is white with a red cross, with the fleur-de-lys, rose, thistle and shamrock, denoting the origin of the citizens.

The program calls for Mayor Jean Drapeau, the dimbnative dynamo who battled huge odds to bring the fair to his city, to take the stand of honor as host an emperor, a prince and prime ministers and presidents on six national days since the fair opened 19 days ago.

Tuesday was Czechoslovakia's special day with 63 - year - old President Antonin Novotny on the stand of honor as his country's flag was raised. The Place des Nations crowd included 1,-000 who had come to see the ceremony plus Czech folk-dancers and an 85-member Czechoslovak army brass band.

Meanwhile, Expo officials occupied themselves with crowd-handling. One team of researchers made the rounds asking visitors where they came from and what they liked and disliked at Expo. Another team was studying how to improve Expo's ability to handle crowds up to 800,000 a day.

Record crowd so far was the 569,500 who came Sunday, April 30, but Expo officials now explain they are gearing themselves to handle crowds of 600,-000 on a daily basis after school closes in June.

Tuesday's crowd came despite temperatures in the high 40s and a chilling wind. The count at 11 p.m. was 235,790 compared with an estimate of 97,140. Total attendance for the 19 days was 4,756,921.

"ANOTHER NEW A&P FOOD STORE OPENED THIS WEEK AT 411 KEELE STREET, TORONTO"

Daniel Johnson to Fire New Shots at Meeting With de Gaulle

QUEBEC (CP)—This week's Paris encounter between French President Charles de Gaulle and Premier Daniel Johnson of Quebec could well prove to be a milestone in Franco-Quebec relations, despite the unenthusiastic outlook of some observers here.

With Franco-Quebec cultural and educational relations clipping along on their best leg, it can be expected that Premier Johnson, scheduled to attend a banquet in his honor Thursday, will be introducing some new dimensions to explore.

He has, indeed, expressed all along his intention to give new impetus to the existing links between France and Quebec. But also figuring prominently on his Paris list are topics relating to economics and other matters.

A glance at the official entourage accompanying the premier indicates strongly that someone is going to do a lot of talking about money, investment and industry in general in Quebec.

Among others, the premier is taking along Finance Minister Paul Dozois, Jacques Parizeau, economic adviser to the cabinet, Michel Belanger, deputy minister of industry and commerce, and Jean Deschamps, director of the General Investments Corp.

The Quebec group, known to be interested in French investment, may even indulge in some outright sales promotion.

The French could conceivably be attracted to take an interest in Quebec pulp and paper, metals, motor vehicles and foodstuffs.

The question of Quebec borrowing on the French and European markets is scheduled for discussion as well.

Mr. Dozois said recently that the United States loan market has reached a saturation point and that Quebec may have to look elsewhere for the $450,000,000 it wants to pull through the current fiscal year.

But Mr. Dozois has also made it clear that interest rates, repayment plans and attendant obligations tend to be harsher on the European side than on the American.

There are other difficulties, too, Mr. Dozois says, but none of them are insurmountable.

Also among the subjects to be discussed at the Paris talks will be "francophonie" — a blanket word meaning relations among French-language nations of the world.

Premier Johnson is clearly anxious on this point, especially in view of his continuing "family quarrel" with Ottawa regarding the right to sign cultural pacts with French-speaking nations.

Mr. Johnson recently went on record as saying that Quebec cannot afford to have Ottawa fiddling with the question of "francophonie" on a global scale. The matter was one of vital concern for the province.

France could hardly be expected to take sides in an internal Canadian dispute, but Mr. Johnson can reasonably expect wholehearted sympathy and cooperation short of actual commitment in French government circles.

French immigration to Canada is another matter slated to be chewed out.

PUZZLED OVER FOOD PRICES?

Let Food City Complete the Picture for You

The conventional supermarket shouts "LOW PRICES" and then advertises 10 to 20 at a special price. These specials are available to you for 3 or 4 days, then these items revert back to their normal higher shelf price.

At Food City we simplify pricing by offering over 6,000 grocery items at "EVERYDAY LOW SHELF PRICES". That's right, these prices don't change from one week to the next.

Our policy is simple – sell in volume at a lower profit. We know we have the lowest food prices in town and all we ask is that you pay us a visit and prove this for yourself. You'll also find we don't skimp on quality or service either.

Start Flowers Of Hope Campaign

NAPANEE — The Flowers of Hope campaign got off to a good start Monday in the Napanee area but will not begin in the town itself until Wednesday, when the Red Shield blitz of the town is over. Captains for the town campaign are Mrs. James Miller, Mrs. Roy Hinch, Mrs. Donald Robins, and William Kirkham.

Funds collected in the campaign will be used mainly in this area, as there is no contribution expected by the central body, the Ontario Association for the Mentally Retarded. Each local association is responsible for building and furnishing its own buildings, and the money raised in Lennox and Addington now will be added to funds already raised for the building of a new school.

Fritz Jullussen, chairman of the campaign, states that the members of the executive have agreed that, since there are between 30 and 40 County children in the hospital school at Smiths Falls, a contribution should be made to that school from the funds now coming in, in the Flowers of Hope campaign. One per cent will go to the school toward the construction of a swimming pool, badly needed for therapy.

In case a canvasser does not call at your home, Mr. Jullussen asks that contributions be forwarded to him, Fritz Jullussen,"R.R. 3, Napanee. A receipt for income tax purposes will be sent.

White's District

WHITE'S DISTRICT — The Bayside Brownies and Guides held a successful cookie sale on Saturday.

Mrs. W. A. Jeffery spent a week in Toronto with her nephew and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace De Shane.

THE LITTLE WOMAN

"Have a seat, please. The doctor will see you in a few minutes."

School Children See Demonstration

NAPANEE — "Smoking Sam" is on his way back to Toronto after a visit of over three weeks in this area. During that time he has made the rounds of all the schools in the southern half of the county and has given the pupils graphic proof of the dangers of cigarette smoking.

"Smoking Sam" is just a life-sized head painted on the side of a machine which actually smokes a cigarette when a bulb is manipulated. A white filter placed in the tubing before the smoking is badly stained after just one cigarette. Also, the machine opens to show two pictures of lungs, one the lungs of a non-smoker and the other the blackened lungs of an habitual smoker.

"Smoking Sam" has been in charge of Mrs. Lorne Graves, chairman of the education committee of the local unit of the Canadian Cancer Society.

Between three and four thousand boys and girls have seen the demonstration. The physical education teachers in the NDSS showed the machine to all pupils of all their classes.

Many brands of cigarettes were used, both plain and filter tipped, and each of the blackened filter papers was labelled and placed on a bulletin board. The display is still attracting much attention. Even the "stuce leaf brand blackened the filter.

Mrs. Graves points out that many people co-operated in the venture. Inspector Paul Anderson set out the program and in every school, principals and teachers welcomed the opportunity to make use of the material. The Department of Health supplied booklets on cancer.

New Attack on Gordon Planned by Diefenbaker

OTTAWA (CP)—Look for a further round of parliamentary skirmishing soon over Walter Gordon's conflict with government policy on the Vietnam war, says Opposition Leader Diefenbaker.

He hinted that the Progressive Conservatives may renew the attack early next week.

Prime Minister Pearson has called a cabinet meeting for today to deal primarily with cabinet solidarity. Informants said the Gordon-Vietnam issue may be discussed at length at Tuesday's meeting of the cabinet as External Affairs Minister Martin was out of town. He will be back in Ottawa for today's meeting.

Mr. Diefenbaker charged that Prime Minister Pearson's explanations to the Commons Tuesday were "a gross caricature of the rule regarding cabinet solidarity."

"It means nothing but a retreat from reality. In Britain, the minister would have been out or the government would have been out."

The point at issue is whether Mr. Gordon, a cabinet minister as president of the Privy Council, can publicly disagree with government policy and remain in the cabinet without destroying the principle of the cabinet's collective responsibility to Parliament.

Too Many Obstacles

Experts Say UK Two Years From Market

PARIS (Reuters) — European political circles here today thought objections set by French President de Gaulle to British entry to the Common Market may take up to four years to overcome.

The most optimistic estimate given was that it will take at least two years of hard bargaining by British negotiators to get into the European Economic Community after de Gaulle's appraisal at a press conference Tuesday of their chances.

De Gaulle, dedicated to the ideal of a Europe striking its decisions on world issues independent of East and West, made it clear today's audience of 1,000 newspaper men, diplomats and government officials that the British, with their ties to the Commonwealth and the United States, were hardly European enough to blend with the thinking of the community.

Political sources said it seemed clear from the French leader's comments that he will try to convince the other five Common Market countries the time is not yet right for Britain to join the EEC.

They said he will try to get the French view adopted as the common platform of the EEC at its projected summit meeting in Rome at the end of this month.

There seemed general agreement here that any negotiations between Britain and the six Common Market countries will be more protracted than envisaged by British Prime Minister Wilson when he made Britain's second membership application last week. The first British application failed in 1963 largely because of French objections.

The president told the press conference that he felt Britain would find it impossible at present to assume the burden of adjustment to Common Market rules and practices. Its political, financial and economic conditions would make that too great an upheaval, he said.

He emphasized that he was not prejudging the content of any negotiations between Britain and the Common Market, although he expressed doubt that those negotiations would in fact take place.

The French leader outlined what he called "formidable obstacles" standing in the way of quick British entry into the European trading group.

He spoke of British isolation from the continent, Britain's Commonwealth ties and its "special agreement" with the United States.

Admitting Britain to the Common Market, he said, would lead to applications for membership from Britain's fellow members in the seven - nation European Free Trade Association. And this would mean "building a totally new edifice and razing what has just been built," he said.

Milk Prices Up Across Canada

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Milk dealers in nine of 10 major Canadian cities said Tuesday they have either increased the price of fluid milk this year or are anticipating an increase.

A Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press shows that Saint John, N.B., was the only major centre that does not expect to have an increase in milk prices by July.

Although most areas are experiencing spiralling milk prices, so far only Ottawa consumers have strongly protested the increases.

The Consumers Protection Association of Ottawa Tuesday called for a two-week milk boycott to protest a two-cents-a-quart increase by major Ottawa dairies Monday.

Milk dealers in Vancouver, Regina, Winnipeg, Montreal and Ottawa said they have increased prices on fluid milk in bottles and containers since Jan. 1.

Price increases are expected in Edmonton, Calgary, Halifax and Toronto.

In Ottawa, Acting President C. J. Kempffer of the consumers association said there are enough substitutes for fresh milk to make the proposed boycott bearable.

The group hopes the action will force the Ontario government to change legislation governing milk production and to get the dairies to lower their prices.

The price increases are attributed to the recent increase in the price paid to farmers for milk and to greater distribution and processing costs.

The price of milk across Canada is as varied as the containers in which it comes.

The increase at Ottawa brings the store price to 30 cents a quart, two cents less than home delivery. A three-quart jug costs 73 cents at the store and 87 cents delivered at home.

The price at Saint John remains at 28 cents for a glass quart of milk and 75 cents for a three-quart plastic jug. Home delivery and store prices are generally the same. Saint John led its last price increase—two and three cents—in June, 1966.

Price increases March 16 at Regina added one to 3½ cents a quart to the price. The price for one quart is generally 29 cents.

An increase of two cents a quart for Manitoba was authorized by the provincial milk control board Monday, bringing the price to 27 cents in Winnipeg. The three-quart jug costs 81 cents.

A January price increase in Vancouver in January brought the price to 28 cents a quart in the store and 30 cents for home delivery. The three-quart carton sells for 73 cents in the store and 84 cents delivered.

Sandbanks Park Has Large Parking Area

New parking areas complete with paved roads have been added to the Sandbanks park. The parking areas have been prepared to handle the upsurge of park visitors that will fill the 1,200 acre park area.

Park Areas Ready

Tweed District Parks supervisor, Harold Cantelon, has predicted that over 500,000 people will visit parks in the Tweed District this season. The parks in this district include Lake St. Peter, Bon Echo, Black Lake, Outlet Beach, Sandbanks, North Beach, and Lake-on-the-Mountain.

Vacationers on their way to and from Expo will account for the attendance increase. The parks have added many new facilities to accommodate the extra visitors.

At Outlet Beach the park officials have added 80 new campsites to bring the total to 480. As well, they have added 900 feet of sandy beach to the already 3,100 - foot long beach. The refreshment building has been joined to a new souvenir shop. The Outlet has 285 acres of park area.

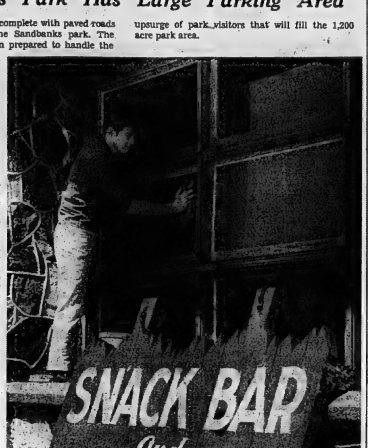
The 1,200 acres of park area that comprises the Sandbanks Park has had 52 temporary campsites added to it. There is a five - mile beach on the Lake Ontario side of the park and five more miles on the West Lake side. A parking lot has been readied in addition to the new staff house that has been constructed.

At Lake St. Peter the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests offers 60 campsites, a walking trail and good fishing in a park with an area of 1,200 acres.

Bon Echo, six miles north of the village of Cloyne has 400 campsites, group camping areas or organized youth groups, excellent scenery including Indian pictographs and over 15,000 acres of park land.

Black Lake, a park of 76 acres has 200 campsites, park area on two lakes, Sharbot and Black Lake, and a walking trail.

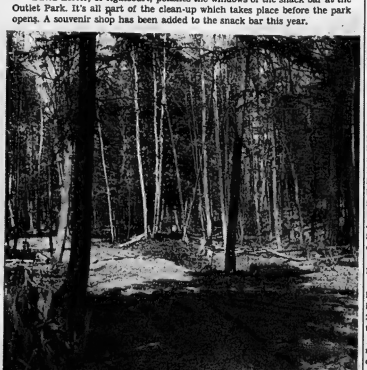
Another Lake Ontario park, North Beach, the site of an intensive reforestration program, has been reached, complete with low sand dunes and a mile - long beach.



Lake-on-the-Mountain offers an excellent look - out over the Bay of Quinte, Black bass fishing, and 256 acres of park land and water. There is no vehicle entrance fee at this park.

At parks accepting trailer facilities dumping sites have been built for sewage disposal.

Entrance fees for vehicles this year are the same as last year, $1 per day or $5 for a seasonal permit which allows entry into all Ontario Provincial Parks and St. Lawrence Parks.



Camping fees will be $1.50 per day or $9 per week. There is a camping time limit of 28 days in Provincial Parks.

The parks opened on May 12 this year.

Clean-up at the Outlet's Snack Bar

David Lester, of Agincourt, pollishes the windows of the snack bar at the Outlet Park. It's all part of the clean-up which takes place before the park opens. A souvenir shop has been added to the snack bar this year.

Roadway to Summer Camping

Vacationing campers will make their way along roads such as this to reach some of the new campsites. Over 52 new campsites have been added to accommodate the large crowds that are expected this year.

Victoria, B.C. Will Be Site Of Science Fair

Next year's Canada-wide Science Fair and Hobby Show will be held in Victoria, B.C. At the recent national event in Quebec City two Belleville students, Janice Blake of BCI and Rick Reilly of Quinte won awards. Joy Livingston of Quinte received an honorable mention.

Many Young Men and Women Turning to Career in Aviation

With little fuss or feathers, a quiet revolution is overtaking flying.

And it doesn't take an instrument reading to gauge its direction — even at the Prince Edward Flying Club.

At long last, youth has discovered aviation — not as a pastime but as a promising profession — and the youngsters are seriously settling in to do something about it.

Some are going so far as to trade in university for flying school, exchanging the promise of a mortar board for the possibility of a pair of pilot's wings.

"Just about a year ago the big push seriously started," recalls Murray Clapp, manager and chief instructor for the Prince Edward club.

"Young people have been coming here for years, but before it was more or less for kicks and pleasure. But now they're looking to the future."

What future ?

Flying with the big-time other commercial companies.

The reason is that time is running out on that once-huge reservoir of trained pilots loosed into civilian life from the airforce at the end of World War II, explains Murray.

"With the wartime pilots getting ready for retirement the companies now are beginning to cast around for fresh blood."

Add to this continued expansion of air services and the Viet Nam — keeping more U.S. pilots in the forces — and the future right now is placing a premium demand on pilot personnel.

The pattern of youthful interest already shows up on the books of the club, where instructor Bill Pomeroy figures there are now about 12 up-coming pilots in training aged in their late teens or early twenties.

Not all will become commercial pilots, of course. Most of those who don't, seem inclined on becoming instructors, at least.

However, some already have graduated from the Picton-district club to commercial aviation — or are headed that way.

Bill Pomeroy is a good example. In his early twenties, he came from Peterborough to the Prince Edward school in January 1966, has now obtained his commercial, and has turned instructor at the club.

However, his teaching days are numbered. Soon; he takes off for Air Canada employ — and a job piloting its big DC-8 jets.

"But they don't all necessarily have to go with the airlines," says Murray Clapp. "I've one lad flying here for two years who would like boat-flying and he's taking his commercial now for this."

Yet another, points out Murray, is working helicopters in the Canadian North.

"There's another at Stirling who's just waiting for his 18th birthday to get his commercial licence. He's hoping to also fly the choppers," adds Murray.

But, not all the teenage students are from the Quinte district.

Some are like, Mike Clement from Beaconsfield, Que., and Harold Jones, 19, of Islington.

Both youths are now the school's latest resident students, part of a program instituted some time back by the Prince Edward club.

Putting their full time to flying, resident students may live in a trailer beside the clubhouse while studying for the licences in the shortest time possible.

Graduation is a matter of capability, but the cost runs around $2,000 for the enthusiast, from the time he walks into the clubhouse, a rare resident student to the time he proudly pins on his wings.

Add to this about another $1,000 needed to take specialization training courses with the airlines.

However, starting salary for a pilot aboard one of those commercial jet jobs is about $7,200.

Not that all the current crop of youth will take a jet seat.

Like, for example 17-year-old Vicki Radonicich, of Belleville.

The darling of the club, Vicki fell in love with flying when a friend took her aloft two years ago.

Most of her lessons had to wait for a summer job to turn up the cash, she says.

She received her licence to fly on her birthday April 7, and wants to be an instructor.

But that must await her birthday next year.

By that time, the 18-year-old Belleville girl will probably be contributing to the process of training other Quinte youngsters for a new — and youthful — age of aviation.

Woman Left Her Mitts In Oven

TRENTON — Trenton firemen have spent a quiet week so far this week . . . with the exception of a few minutes Monday night when a frantic Campbell Street housewife put an alarm. She had left her oven mitts in the oven. Result . . . plenty of smoke in the family kitchen.

CHILD DASHED OUT

John Woodworth, 5, of 18 Barbara Street, was treated for head bruises and a bruised hip in Trenton hospital last night after he had been struck by a Honda on West Street, near his home. The youngster was released from the hospital following treatment.

The driver of the motor bike, John Masterson of 161 West Street, told police the child dashed in front of his machine.

BIKE ROADEO HELD

OPP at the Brighton office held a successful bicycle roadeo in Brighton on Saturday, with 200 boys and girls lining up their vehicles for inspection.

Constable Jim Graham commented that the children showed skill in driving, but the majority did not show enough care when approaching a stop sign.

Numerous trophies were won by contestants in various age groups. These were donated by the merchants of Brighton.

Constable Graham has given a series of lectures on bicycle safety to children at the Legion Hall in Colborne and a roadeo will be held in that village in June.

She's A Real Flier!

Getting ready to go aloft is Vicki Radonicich, licensed to fly and loving every minute of it. The 17-year-old Belleville girl hopes to become instructor for Prince Edward Flying Club.

SPORTS SLICES

By Geo. H. Garver
Sports Editor

Ten years ago a muscular young man clad only in bathing trunks and a terse-covering of fiery red hair cavorted over the lush lawns of the cottage grounds of the late Larry Eggert in Rossmore.

He was Leonard "Red" Kelly who at that time in a National League capacity were the insignia of the Detroit Red Wings.

"Red" with the immortal Gordie Howe and Marty Pavelich of the Wings were weekend guests at the cottage. So were the wives and two or three young girls, the friends of the Eggert family.

It was a warm summer afternoon and I was perfectly content to sit in the shade with a long cool one and "shoot the breeze" with Howe and Pavelich while the rest of the world went by.

Not so "Red." He went into the cottage and came out with a record-player. That was approximately 2.30 of the afternoon. "Red" asked one of the young ladies to dance. Barefooted they lingered and cha-cha'd on the lush grassy "ballroom floor."

Kelly, changing partners periodically, danced for approximately two and one-half hours without turning a single strand of that almost crimson hair. It was the longest non-stop marathon of terpsichore (on grass) I have ever witnessed.

Kelly laughed off a quip by somebody about dancing and the girls. Mrs. Anden, a former figure-skating champion, sat nearby, an amused smile on her face.

"Don't worry about 'Red' and the girls," she said. "He loves dancing — but for sun exercise. He likes to keep in condition." Red concurred. "It's the best exercise I have found to keep one's legs in shape."

Four years later Red announced his retirement from professional hockey. This followed the day he was traded along with Billy McNeill to the Rangers for Bill Gadsby and Eddie Shack. But with the redhead's announcement the deal was called off.

Ring Cleary of the Leafs cornered Red a few days later and talked him into joining the Maple Leafs organization. Secretly Red had always wanted to play for Toronto after his junior days with St. Michael's College.

But the scoffers coffed and the wise guys crooked their two cents worth. "Kelly," they said, "would not last 26 games in the NHL. He is not that kind of a player."

(Note: - Kelly recently completed his 20th year in hockey's big time).

Yup, "they laughed when he went out to play." He went out there to become one of the all-time great defencemen in the National Hockey League.

The Simcoe redhead is one of the cleanest-living guys in the monied ranks. His "profane" vocabulary is limited to a "By Hang." He indulges not in the weed or the juice of the grape.

But he went on a private binge when he learned of the switch. He muttered a couple of "by hangs" and crammed himself with peanuts and pastry, the story goes.

What one writer says was the "biggest steal in NHL history came about when the Leafs acquired him for Marc Reaume. Kelly is regain condition after five days absence worked out as a forward and never returned to his spot behind the blueline.

Kelly, believe it or not, was one of the players instrumental in bringing the Leafs Maberley to stardom. He told me later he used to work out with the Big 31, for sometimes two hours at a time perfecting particular plays and spot passing.

He has had thrills galore during his two-decades tenure with the NHL. His biggest "kick" came last season when winning the Stanley Cup with the Leafs. It marked his eighth Cup championship equalling the record held by Maurice Richard.

Now he may wind up an illustrious career in hockey as a coach with the new Los Angeles Kings. In my book it couldn't happen to a nicer guy. "Red" knows hockey, knows players and is richly endowed with "know-how."

And when the rocking-chair days give warning, Red can sit back and watch the tobacco grow on his Simcoe farms and/or listen to the music of the cash register in his bowling alleys.

This department joins with the city sporting world in mourning the sudden passing of Walter F. MacCormack. Walter, a true sport-enthusiast and sponsor, leaves his wife, six sons and a daughter. Local hockey, baseball and sports in general has lost a strong supporter.

Leafs Get Oliver

Shack Tumbles Down To Beantown

TORONTO (CP)—No matter if they never get out of the National Hockey League cellar, Boston Bruins are stepping up as one of the most colorful teams in the league.

EDDIE SHACK

Under his program of exchanging small forwards for big ones, Boston general-manager Milt Schmidt Tuesday acquired big, tough, fast and colorful Eddie Shack from Toronto Maple Leafs in exchange for small, competent Murray Oliver.

The trade, the second in 12 hours involving Boston, was announced after the midnight Monday deadline on trades prior to the June 8 universal draft meeting in Montreal, but was concluded prior to the deadline.

All NHL rosters now are frozen until after the draft.

In the previous trade, with league champion Chicago Black Hawks, the Bruins picked up centre Phil Esposito, right winger Ken Hodge and left winger Fred Stanfield in exchange for defencemen Gilles Marotte, centre Pit Martin and minor league goalie Jack Norris.

Neither Shack, at left wing, nor Oliver, at centre, had good seasons during 1966-67, but both did distinctive holes for their new clubs.

Oliver is seen as the replacement Toronto needs for Red Kelly, who retired Sunday after 20 NHL seasons to try for the vacant coaching job with Los Angeles Kings, one of six expansion teams joining the league next season.

Shack has the muscle and potential scoring power the Bruins need to climb up the standings.

Punch Imlach, Toronto general-manager-coach, had nothing to say following announcement of the trade, but Schmidt said both trades are part of a Boston drive to beef up the offence and prevent a repetition of last season's performance during which the Bruin forwards were shoved around by all the other teams.

Shack, after scoring 26 goals in 1965-66 while on the line with Kelly, was used sparingly last year and scored 11 while Oliver has stepped in the last two years to only nine goals after three consecutive 30 - goal years in 1962-63, 1963-64 and 1964-65.

Oliver entered the league with Detroit Red Wings from Edmonton Flyers of the Western League during the 1953-60 season and scored 20 goals. But that didn't stop Detroit from trading him to Boston midway through the season with 11 goals to his credit.

A Hamilton native, he played his junior hockey with Hamilton Red Wings of the Ontario Hockey Association.

Shack, a Sudbury, Ont., native spent six years with Toronto after being traded by New York Rangers in exchange for Pak Hamilton and John Wilson in 1960-61. In that time he scored only 76 goals for the team but became a particular favorite of the fans through his antics and free-wheeling style of play.

Wings Nip Leafs 6-5, Hens Win

It took Rochester Red Wings 10 innings to do it, but Tuesday night they beat Toronto Maple Leafs 6-5, moved another game ahead of Buffalo Bisons atop the International League standings and proved once more they don't really need Mike Epstein.

Buffalo and Syracuse Chiefs were idle, but Toledo Mud Hens slipped past Jacksonville Suns 3-2 on the strength of Wayne Redmond's two-run seventh-inning homer and Richmond Braves zapped Columbus Jets 5-4.

George Toma is helping Catfish Hunter into a role as Hunter can help Kansas City Athletics out of one.

Toma, the Athletics' beat groundskeeper, seen to it that Hunger has no trouble digging a hole in front of the pitching rubber to stop him. The right-hander complained the dirt at Minnesota was like cement May 11 when he lost 8-0 to the Twins.

But Tuesday night in Kansas City, the dirt was just like dirt and Hunter dug his first big league record to 4-3 with a three-hit, seven - strikeout, 4-0 victory over California Angels. Three of his victories have been at home.

The victory was the Athletics' fifth straight and moved them to within 4½ games of the American League - leading Chicago White Sox.

Third - place Kansas City now is 15-14—its best start since 1963 when the Athletics were 18-14 and in second place the morning of May 16. They finished eighth that year and did not get any higher until last season when they struggled to seventh.

Hunter, All - Star Game pitcher tonight, Dean Chance and Minnesota Twins stopped the White Sox winning string at 10 with a 1-0 victory. New York Yankees edged Cleveland Indians 4-3 in 11 innings, Washington Senators nipped Detroit Tigers 5-4 and Baltimore Orioles beat Boston Red Sox 5-3.

Rich Monday, Kansas City's hottest hitter over the last 11 games, gave Hunter all the help he needed by doubling home the first two runs.

Chance, winning his sixth straight since going his first start of the season, allowed just five singles and was backed by three double plays.

The Yankees, who tied the game with a pair of runs in the seventh inning, loaded the bases with none out in the 11th. Mickey Mantle then singled over the left fielder's head to end it.

Moore covered the route in eight minutes, 43.4 seconds. The track, with seating for 15,000, is of a composition material known as Tartan. It is at the University of Manitoba campus in suburban Fort Garry.

Spurs, Chelsea Cup Final

'Yer Pays Yer Money...'

LONDON (CP) — The form-chart favors Spurs over Chelsea, but only the boldest prophet and most brazen soccer fan will predict the outcome with confidence of Saturday's English Football Association Cup final.

On recent form and the past record, Tottenham Hotspur should beat Chelsea in the first all-London cup final at Wembley Stadium. The Spurs from White Hart Lane in North London have been winning while the mercurial, rich team from Stamford Bridge near the Thames barely scraped through the semi-final.

But the mystique of the Wembley Cup final is a celebrated third force in the climactic annual event. For most players, the final comes but once in a career. Wembley tensions have crumpled great teams. The hush Wembley turf has diminished great stars with fatigue.

"You never know how it's going to be till you get out there," says Spurs halfback Dave Mackay, the team captain who is a rare veteran of two previous cup finals.

"Man for man we're better than Chelsea but that doesn't mean we'll win. There's a lot more to it."

Spurs have won the cup four times—each time they made the final—in 1901, 1921, 1961 and 1962. Chelsea has been in the final only once since the FA Cup competition began 95 years ago, losing 3-0 to Sheffield United in 1915.

Voyageurs Ready To Go

EDMONTON (CP) — The infectious enthusiasm of two Prairie boating buffs will start 60 paddlers on a 1,283-mile trip to fame and upward of $100,000 in prize money a week from today.

The perpuasiveness of John Nikel of Edmonton and Jim Rheaume of Winnipeg at a meeting two years ago with Canadian centennial council officials laid the groundwork for the centennial canoe pageant, which starts at Rocky Mountain House, Alta., and is scheduled to finish at Expo 67 Sept. 4.

Expo and the co - sponsoring federal and provincial governments have donated up to $120,000 in official prize money, with unofficial additions from municipalities along the route for sprints and special events. The unofficial money is estimated to total as much as $40,000.

Ten crews will push their 260-pound canoes into the North Saskatchewan River next Wednesday at the site 50 miles west of Red Deer where explorer David Thompson built the first fort in Alberta's Rocky Mountain foothills in 1800.

The Centennial voyageurs will travel down 11 rivers and across 24 lakes as they journey on waterways first used more than a century ago by the explorers, traders and voyageurs whom the pageant commemorates.

The stakes are $22,500 for the winning 10-man team, $15,000 for second and $13,500 for third. Other teams completing the trip receive $9,000.

Tiger Decision Sparks Wild Riot!

NEW YORK (AP) — Puerto Rican fighters will be barred from main events at Madison Square Garden for a cooling off period, following the second riot within 10 weeks and the third in 21 months at a fight show in the famed arena Tuesday night.

Bottles, pieces of chairs and other missiles were tossed into the ring and the ringside sections shortly after light heavyweight champion Dick Tiger of Nigeria was awarded a split decision over Puerto Rican-born Jose Torres in a close return, 15-round title bout.

Eleven persons suffered cuts and were treated at nearby hospitals, police reported. None of the victims were reported seriously hurt. No arrests were reported.

The other two riots involved fights featuring Puerto Rican born Frankie Narvaez, a New York lightweight who lost both times.

In the first, Narvaez dropped a split decision in a close fight with Flash Elorde of the Philippines on Aug. 4, 1965. In the second, on March 10, 1967, Panama's Ismael Laguna decisively whipped Narvaez and was awarded a unanimous decision by whopping margins.

As a result of the third riot, a proposed title fight between lightweight champion Carlos Ortiz, a Puerto Rican-born New Yorker and Laguna may not be held in New York or may be put off for some time.

A garden source, who asked not to be identified, said: "We can't go with that or any main event with a Puerto Rican for some time after this one."

Tiger had dethroned the 3-1 favored Torres on a decisive and unanimous decision at the Garden last Dec. 16 before a crowd of 13,634 that paid $100,-486. There were no disorders at that fight.

In the return bout, Torres, with an advantage in age, weight, height and reach, was favored again, this time by narrower 5-to-5 odds. It drew a crowd of 12,674 and $104,452, and grossed $60,000 more from television.

JOSE TORRES

Referee Harold Valan and Judge Johnny Dron each voted for Tiger by 8-to-7 margins in rounds. Judge Joe Eppy had it 8-to-7 for Torres. The Associated Press had it 8-to-7 for Torres.

A late surge by the 31-year-old Torres excited his followers and probably touched off the riot. Well behind on all score cards, he staggered the 37-year-old Nigerian with a sweeping left and right to the jaw in the 12th round and captured the last four rounds on all scorecards.

Torres had predicted a knockout victory. He went after his lighter—173 pounds to 167—and shorter rival from the opening bell and they fought a fierce battle for three rounds.

The keen - lawed Nigerian, getting in close and banging away with both hands to the body and head, dominated the next five rounds. Torres spurted in the ninth and 10th, lost the 11th and then started his drive in the 12th.

When the scores were announced there was a momentary hush. Then a bottle was heaved from the balcony and then the other missiles rained down as spectators put wooden chairs over their heads and scurried for cover.

Police and firemen were summoned to help the special police in the Garden. It took at least 15 minutes before the disorders were quelled.

"They were like animals," said Dick Tiger, the head of the Gardens security force.

Torres remained in the ring for five minutes after the missile throwing started. He pleaded to the Balcony spectators to behave themselves. It didnt help. Tiger, left the ring with a wooden folding chair over his head.

North American Record

Jockey Boots Home 7 In Row

TORONTO (CP)—An 18-year-old high school drop - out knocked the racing world for a loop Tuesday by winning seven consecutive races at Woodbine.

The feat by Richard Grubb, an apprentice rider, is a North American record.

Grubb, a native of Ridgway, Ont., who dropped out of school in Grade 10 two years ago to take up riding, finished third in the first race Tuesday afternoon but booted home winners the rest of the day.

"It was my biggest day in racing," the five-foot-two, 102 pounder said. He shrugged off the seven wins by saying he takes every race as it comes. He won five of the races by less than a length.

Grubb came closest to losing in the fifth race when he was beaten by a nose on Redirect. He was aboard Robby Jr. in a three-horse photo finish in the fourth of and by a neck in the sixth on Capt'n Ron.

He won by four lengths with River Party in the second and had coast - from - behind wins aboard Vic's Tune and Thunder Jay in the third and eighth races.

His most impressive win came in the seventh when he brought Hail The King to the top from 12 lengths back at the head of the stretch.

The youthful jockey will not have an opportunity to extend his winning streak until May 27. He has been suspended 10 days effective today for careless riding in a race last Saturday.

Only in his second year of racing and still an Apprentice, Grubb's riding ability has improved to the point where horsemen are scanned at some of his antics. Some say he's the best apprentice rider they have ever seen.

He won his first race less than a year ago—May 24—but finished 1966 with 37 wins on the Woodbine - Greenwood - Fort Erie circuit. A jockey remains an apprentice in Ontario until one year after he hits fifth winner or until he wins 40 races in one season.

Grubb rode 11 winners at Greenwood this year but caught fire to win 30 races when the horses moved to Fort Erie. Jim Gone, North America's leading rider in 1966, had 25 winners at the Fort Erie meet.

The nearest anyone has come to Grubb's performance was Oct. 1, 1956, at Hawthorne Park in Chicago, when John Ruiz won seven consecutive races.

How To Make Money

Never Pass Up A 'Dark Horse'

BALTIMORE (AP) — It's horses like Barbs Delight which lead outsiders to look race-ing as a get-rich-quick game.

The runner-up in the Kentucky Derby was auctioned off for $2,000 in 1964. His three owners think so highly of him now they are paying $10,000 just to make him eligible to run Saturday in the Preakness at Pimlico.

In the family background of Barbs Delight is a striking parallel to another bargain horse named Carry Back. Their mothers passed into the heads of new owners because of unpaid room and board bills.

The mothers left a lot to be desired from an aristocratic breeding viewpoint. But Carry Back won the Kentucky Derby and Preakness and was the best three-year-old of 1961.

His dam, Joppy, had never won a race and her only winning offspring was Carry Back. Joppy died the "same year her colt was being crowned best of his class.

Barbs Delight is out of a mare named Flora MacDonald, Shirley Favor, who is training horses at Pimlico, recalls how

From Winnipeg

Dick Thornton To Argos!

TORONTO (CP)—Toronto Argonauts today announced one of the trading coups of the last several Canadian Football seasons with the acquisition of flamboyant Dick Thornton from Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

A number of clubs for several seasons have tried to pry the 6-foot-2, 200-pound pass-back halfback defensive half from Winnipeg — indeed Thornton has been asked to be traded from under the shadow of Kenny Ploen Winnipeg's first-string quarterback.

But while former coach Bud Grant now with Minnesota Vikings of the National League was in Winnipeg the only answer anyone got was that Thornton was too valuable to let go.

The Argos gave up two top prospects and Bill Van Burkleo an import quarterback halfback who played four games with the Argos on defence in 1966 after joining them from the University of Tulsa.

The Canadians are halfback Vic Janoski who last year was on the University of Wisconsin starting offensive squad and Chip Barrett a defensive half last year with the University of Colorado. Colorado Thornton and the Argos first drank choice of 1967. Both are from Toronto.

It is the second major trade in two weeks for the Argos. Earlier they sent linebacker Al Ecuyer to Montreal Alouettes for defensive half Ed Learn and linebacker Jim Andrews.

A daring quarterback Thornton who graduated from Northwestern University in 1961, seldom has had a solid opportunity to display his talents on defence.

But despite his compulsive desire to play offence which sent him to a psychologist for examination two years ago he is good on defence that he has been named to the Western Conference all - star team three times — 1962 1963 and 1965—and to the all-Canada team twice—1963 and 1965.

No Soccer Amateurs In Brazil

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP)—Brazil will not send a soccer team to the Pan - American Games in Winnipeg this summer because its professionals are too good.

All soccer worthy of the name in Brazil is played by professionals and the Brazilian Olympic Committee said there are not enough amateurs to man a team.

Homer And Double

Boyer Belts Big One To Braves

By DICK COUCH
Associated Press Sports Writer

Atlanta Braves are running short on strong arms, but their best glove is helping make up the difference—with his bat.

Clete Boyer, the Braves slick fielding third baseman, belted a two-run double and bases-empty homer in Tuesday night's 6-3 victory over New York Mets.

The home run was the fourth this season for Boyer, acquired in a winter trade from New York Yankees, and the 100th of his career. He has driven in 12 runs for the Braves, besides managers Hank Aaron, Joe Torre and company compensate for the loss of two injured pitching standouts.

Tony Cloninger, the club's right-handed ace, was placed on the disabled list Tuesday because of blurred vision in his left eye. Ken Johnson, a veteran right-hander, has been sidelined with a virus ailment.

Catcher Torre, tied with Aaron for the National League home-run lead at eight apiece, opened the scoring for the Braves in the fifth inning when he flashed a single over second base. Boyer then lashed his double into left field to score Torre, however, was pressed into service in the fourth inning Tuesday night when his replacement, Gene Oliver, got thrown out of the game for protesting a call.

Reliever Jay Ritchie, who also entered the game in the fourth, made Boyer's timely hitting stand up by retiring all 16 batters he faced to earn his first NL victory.

Elsewhere, league - leading Cincinnati Reds downed Pittsburgh Pirates 6-3, St. Louis Cardinals stopped Philadelphia Phillies 4-3, San Francisco Giants beat Chicago Cubs 3-1 and Los Angeles Dodgers whipped Houston Astros 6-1.

Boyer's two-run double in the fifth snapped a 3-3 tie at Atlanta and the ex-Yankee glove wizard homered in the eighth. The two hits raised his batting average to .250 in 25 games.

Ritchie who compiled a 2-4 American League record at Boston before joining the Braves last year, hailed starter Wade Blasingame out of a fourth inning jam and stymied the Mets the rest of the way.

The Reds scored three runs without a hit in the second inning on the way to their fourth straight victory. Mel Queen struck out nine and blanked the Pirates until the ninth while bowling his pitching mark to 5-1.

Fish And Game Approves Extension

Rejects New Trout Limit

Members of the Belleville and District Fish and Game Club went on record last night as being in favor of a January 1st opening for lake, brown and speckled trout, but against decreasing the lake trout limit from five to three.

The proposal for the new opening date and a smaller limit for lakers was advanced by the Department of Lands and Forests for approval or disapproval by Southern Ontario fish and game clubs and similar associations.

The question was put to the meeting in open session and a number of well-known sportsmen spoke to it.

While the general consensus was in favor of the new date members were unanimous in as against vote for the decrease in the lake trout limit. Limits of browns and speckles remain the same, the proposal stated.

Some of the speakers to the motion said they went lake trouling some three or four times a year at a cost of $30 or $40 per trip.

"If we caught three small trout during the first hour we had would have choice of two things, come home or throw them back. Sometimes we had to wait days to catch a trout worth taking home."

Others felt the lake trout population is such that the reduction was five to three limit was unnecessary.

Some years ago the lake trout limit was three but later due to population estimates was raised to five.

Since then catches have been fairly consistent in "lace" lakes and it was felt that two extra months fishing would affect the population to any great extent.

The decision to put the proposal into effect or leave it rests on the consensus of district and area clubs.

Club secretary Ken Yorke will forward the club's decision to the Tweed headquarters of Lands and Forests.

The meeting was well attended and chaired by vice president George Woodhouse who substituted for President Fred Fisher.

There is a possibility that due to pressure of business, President Fisher will be unable to continue in office.

PLAQUE HONORS MANTLE

NEW YORK (AP)—New York Yankees announced Tuesday that a plaque commemorating Mickey Mantle's 500th home run will be placed in Yankee Stadium, on the seat where the ball landed after clearing the right field fence. In a brief ceremony before the Yankees' game with Cleveland, club president Michael Burke also presented Mantle, who hit his 500th career home Sunday, with a $500 savings bond for each of his four sons.

Victoria Franchise Switched

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP)—Transfer of the Victoria franchise to Phoenix was announced by the Western Hockey League.

At Monday, WHL president said Toronto Maple Leafs would continue to operate the franchise.

Phoenix has seating for 12,000, Leader said.

Los Angeles and San Francisco were given to June 16 to decide whether to enter teams in the WHL next season. Both cities won franchises starting next season in the National Hockey League.

The transfer from Victoria to Phoenix leaves the WHL with teams at Vancouver, Seattle, Portland and San Diego.

"We are prepared to operate with five, six or seven teams but I don't know where we'll put them," Leader said.

"California is interested in moving its franchise to Fresno but there was no representative here at the meeting."

MAKE TWO ARRESTS

MONTREAL (CP)—Two men have been arrested in connection with the April 1 abortive holdup of a Brinks' express truck following a series of raids in which police also seized weapons, ammunition and money. A third man suspected of taking part in the attempted robbery was captured at the time.

Picton Cadet Wins RMC Sports Trophy

A Picton area youth, Officer Cadet Bill Bentley, has been awarded the second highest athletic trophy at the Royal Military College of Canada, Bill, the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Bentley of 15 Mary Street East, Picton, received the "Tommy Smart Cup" at the annual Athletic Awards Night presentation at RMC Monday evening. The Tommy Smart Cup is awarded annually to the best all-round cadet in athletics during the College year.

BILL BENTLEY

It is very unusual for a first year cadet to win this trophy, however, Bill, a 1966 graduate of Prince Edward District Collegiate Institute, had no time in proving that he was a top competitor in one of the most demanding university programs in the country.

Early in the year he demonstrated his athletic prowess by winning the Recruit Obstacle Race - a gruelling 2½ mile fight against 75 obstacles. Bill excelled in wrestling. He captured the College wrestling crown in his weight class and was a runner-up in the Canadian Intercollegiate Wrestling Championships held in Edmonton this year.

To fill a vacancy on the college hockey team Bill donned the gloves and became the CIAU Welterweight boxing champion. He has also been an active competitor in harriers, badminton, football and swimming.

All Opposition Against Liberal Dairy Policies

OTTAWA (CP)—The opposition parties are expected to line up solidly today in a non-confidence vote against the minority Liberal government on the subject of its dairy policy.

Prospects of a government defeat however seem as slim as usual.

It would take a substantially better attendance by the motion's Conservative sponsors than they have managed in three previous confidence tests during the throne speech debate.

Conservative strength on those votes averaged about 60 not enough to threaten the Liberals even if the NDP Creditiste Social Credit and Independents side with the Tories.

A substantial number of the 95 Conservative MPs are believed to regard political peace as the first priority under all circumstances until the party's leadership convention in September.

Today's motion scheduled for a vote at 5:30 p.m. may nevertheless give the appearance of danger for the Liberals.

Moved Tuesday by Dr. Lewis Brand (PC—Saskatoon) it criticizes the government for failing to guarantee dairy farmers a return of $5.10 a hundredweight through its subsidy program for manufacturing milk.

Ed Schreyer (NDP—Springfield) promised New Democrat support. Creditiste MPs have been lobbing to mold the government with their votes on behalf of Quebec farmers and had hoped to introduce a similar motion of their own.

The five-man Social Credit group which also represents mainly rural electors has been just as critical of dairy policies.

The unusual feature of the day's debate was that the milk issue was almost ignored, except in the remarks of Dr. Brand and Mr. Schreyer. The gap between the farmers demand of $5.10 and the available return of $4.75 has become famous in repeated Commons attacks during the last two months.

Dr. Brand himself spent most time attacking the throne speech for its omission of drugs legislation the war on narcotics and measures to fight social injustice and mental illness.

Mr. Schreyer said the government has artificially divided jurisdictions in milk subsidies by taking manufacturing milk and leaving fluid milk for provincial support.

A crack at the NDP's newly-canonized policy favoring a special status for Quebec was delivered by Bryce Mackasey Liberal MP for the predominantly English - speaking Montreal riding of Verdun.

He charged that NDP Leader Doubles is saying one thing to Quebec about special status and repudiating it in speeches elsewhere.

The true color of the NDP policy toward Quebec had been painted in the Commons Monday by Andrew Brewin (NDP—Toronto Greenwood) Mr. Mackasey said.

That speech had suggested a kind of special status in a cultural sense without recommending a partial 'of' change from the current policies of the Liberal government he said.

A major speech on economic policy was delivered by Alvin Hamilton former Conservative agriculture minister who is expected by many to announce his candidacy for the party leadership before the end of May.

He urged Canada to set a goal for annual growth of six per cent which would make it the wealthiest country in the world on a per capita basis within 25 years.

The route to this performance was not nationalism—the path of economic union with the United States. Nor was it restrictive nationalism a traditional policy of both the Liberals and Conservative for 35 years.

Mr. Hamilton said Canada needs an "expansionist nationalism" that would include a conscious development policy of resources and trade programs for have-not areas and a recognition of the importance of trade.

India Depends on the Cow

Sturdy bullocks pull carts in India, where cattle are everywhere — arrogant or indifferent, magnificent or mangy. Cattle pull the plows in millions of tiny fields too small for cultivation by more advanced mechanical methods. Without cattle, India's economy would collapse. (CP Photo)

Road Subsidies Will Be Raised

TORONTO (CP) — Amendments to the Highway Improvement Act introduced in the last session Tuesday night by Highways Minister George Gomme will permit the province to increase subsidies on connecting links through municipalities.

Under the new legislation the government will be able to subsidize the entire width of such roads. At present the aid is limited to roadways 22 to 40 feet wide.

The amendments also enlarge the basis on which local municipalities, counties and suburban road commissions may enter into agreements on sharing the cost of building county or suburban roads.

A portion of the act deal[ing] with construction of roads through Indian reserves is to be changed to permit the federal government to appoint Indians as road superintendents and authorize the Indian band councils to apply for subsidies in the same way as townships.

Another change will permit municipalities to "easily" raise roads as controlled access highways provided the action is approved by the highways minister.

Elmer Sopha (L—Sudbury) found most support when he criticized the junior ranger program of the provincial lands and forests department.

He suggested the program was really a public relations effort and advised the department to concentrate on management of the province's forest resources.

Dief Talks To Young

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Diefenbaker told 241 teen-agers Tuesday to keep their ideals and their sense of humor.

The 71-year-old former prime minister told the high school students from all provinces, taking part in the Rotary Club's annual "Adventures in Citizenship", that he envied them for the Canada they would see in the future.

The five-day Rotary program includes tours of the capital, discussions with members at Carleton University, a day at Expo 67 and a visit to the Commons.

Travel Trailer Clubs to Hold Ottawa Rally

The Travel Trailer Clubs Association of Ontario will, this year, be holding its annual convention-rally at Lansdowne Park, Ottawa during the weekend of June 29 - July 3, when it is anticipated that close to four hundred trailers will attend. Committee members estimate that approximately a million dollars worth of trailers will be on hand, and that the total value of the rolling stock might very well exceed three million dollars.

The Travel Trailer Clubs Association of Ontario represents sixteen trailer clubs from Windsor, London, St. Thomas, St. Catharines, Toronto, Oshawa, Belleville, Kingston, Renfrew and Ottawa. In addition, many of the border area clubs have members from the U.S., some as far south as Converse, Texas. A delegation of fifteen trailering families will be coming in from West Virginia.

The rally, which will be under the direction of retiring president, Martin Osler of Oshawa, will entertain guests, including Ottawa mayor Don B. Reid, as well as representatives of the Federal and Ontario Departments of Lands and Forests, and the Ottawa Tourist and Convention Bureau. Gerry Gelbert, Ottawa Tourist Director, and his staff, have been most helpful to the committee.

Based on figures from last year's rally, which was held in Oshawa, the committee estimates that approximately sixteen hundred people will be present. Since breakfasts will be the only meal prepared within the trailer area, it is believed that around four thousand eggs and 250 pounds of bacon will be consumed. In fact, the rally will become a community within a community. Consequently, arrangements will be made to have dairy and bakery units remain on the grounds. In addition, first aid, fire fighting equipment, and extra policing will be necessary. It is anticipated Lansdowne Park Commissionaire will establish a temporary 'Corner Store' for the occasion.

Following the rally in Ottawa, it is expected that most of the trailerites will proceed to the fair grounds at Ornstown, Quebec, where arrangements have been made for accommodations as well as a bus service to and from Expo.

The convener of the rally is D. Stewart Robertson, president of the Ottawa Travel Trailer Club.

Foley Foundry Older Than Confederation

The Belleville firm of Foley Foundry goes back further than confederation, sales manager Bill Kelsey told Sidney Robertson in a classification talk Monday.

In 1865 Robert and R. S. Patterson established a foundry in a building erected 21 years earlier. Three years before Confederation the firm changed hands and for many years was known as the Wallace Foundry.

The foundry and shops turned out iron work and machinery, including shredding machines, reapers, mowers, straw cutters, saws, grain crushers, water wheels and stoves.

The firm's steel plows, especially the Walker "cow and tackle" models were world famous and won first prize medals at exhibitions in Paris, Vienna, and even Moscow.

In 1917 the company was sold to Frank E. Foley and R. J. Graham and the facilities were converted for the manufacture of evaporating and dehydrating machinery which had been invented by Mr. Foley Sr.

As conditions changed, the operation moved from manufacturing to jobbing machine work, serving a wide area in the district. Later, Mr. Foley became sole proprietor of the firm and just prior to his death in 1947 the company name was changed to Foley Foundry and Machine Co. Ltd. After his death his son, Frank, took over and is the present owner.

In 1960 the firm suffered a disastrous fire and the building which had served from 1834 to 1960 was demolished. A new plant was completed on Wallbridge Crescent and occupied in 1961.

Mr. Kelsey went on to describe the firm's modern operation in a talk dealing with the distribution of welding gases.

Juliana Arrives But Tulips Delayed

OTTAWA (CP)—Not even a royal command can urge the capital's 1,000,000 tulips into bloom today when Queen Juliana of The Netherlands declares the annual Tulip Festival officially open.

Cold weather has stunted the growth of the flowers and it will probably be a week before they burst into glorious bloom.

About 15,000 bulbs are given to the city every year by the queen in appreciation to the people of Ottawa for their hospitality during the war years.

The queen came here as a princess in 1940 with her daughters Beatrix and Irene then 2½ and nine months. Another daughter Margriet was born in the Civic Hospital in 1943 and the family returned to Europe in 1944.

Tuesday night the queen and her husband Prince Bernhard received about 150 guests before an official dinner in their honor at Government House.

For the banquet Queen Juliana wore a dark gold brocade gown trimmed with feathers at the hem and on one shoulder. She wore diamond earrings bracelet and necklace and four small diamond pins on the shoulder of the gown.

Prime Minister and Mrs. Pearson and the Government House staff watched from across the reception rooms as the Governor-General and Mrs. Michener and the royal couple greeted their guests.

In the short wait before the head table party entered Mr. Michener asked Prince Bernhard if proceedings of the Dutch Parliament were broadcast.

"Yes we do it now" Bernhard answered.

"We're thinking of doing it" said the Governor-General rubbing his ear.

Rig Blown Over

CHETICAMP, N.S. (CP)—A 20-ton tractor-trailer, part of the eight - vehicle centennial caravan leaving Nova Scotia, was back on its wheels Tuesday, five hours after being blown on to its side.

Two men in the cab, driver Ron Morton of Moncton, and electronics engineer Tom Anderson of Victoria, escaped injury.

RCMP and witnesses said wind gusting to 70 miles an hour blew the 73-foot rig on to its side about three miles from this Cap Breton Island community.

Manitoba Launches Development Scheme

ARBORG, Man. (CP)—A 10-year program to shore up the sagging economy of the Interlake area of Manitoba with $83,000,000 of federal and provincial funds was initiated here Tuesday.

Designed to provide aid for almost every facet of life, the program is the largest regional development plan ever undertaken in Western Canada and may be the format for similar projects in other areas.

Terms and scope of the undertaking were set out in an agreement signed in this farming community, 80 miles north of Winnipeg, by Premier Duff Roblin and Forestry Minister Sauve.

It calls for extending the arable land, turning unproductive land into recreational areas, improving the road network through the region, aiding fishermen to improve their techniques and sell their catches, attracting industry to the area and providing educational opportunities to 5500 children and adults.

"Never before has such a massive program of regional development been undertaken in Manitoba or Western Canada," said Mr. Roblin in addressing the 500 interlake residents witnessing the signing.

The agreement was the third federal - provincial pact undertaken under the terms of the $300,000,000 federal fund for rural economic development. The largest — $80,000,000 — is under way in northern New Brunswick.

Mr. Sauve, who said the experience gained in the Interlake program could be useful in planning others, said similar projects are planned for eastern Quebec, eastern Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland.

"The program is not yet a year old and it remains to be seen how far it can go in solving the hardcore rural problems.

"This is a new and adventurous course that we have embarked on together."

Mayors Want Province to Pay Four-fifths of School Costs

NIAGARA FALLS (CP)—The Association of Ontario Mayors and Reeves passed a resolution Tuesday at its annual meeting urging that the provincial government pay up to 80 per cent of municipal education costs.

The resolution was one of two passed by the association calling for a more active provincial position in municipal education.

The second resolution called on Premier Robarts to set up a study into school design with an aim to establishing standardized school plans throughout the province. Delegates said present school designs result in high costs.

In other business:

Tom Davidson, mayor of East York, told the conference Ontario is drifting into a welfare state that threatens the freedom of private citizens.

Chairman of the association's welfare committee, Mayor Davidson said the local elected official is the hope for saving personal freedom in the province.

The association endorsed her recommendation that municipal councils appoint social welfare boards similar to planning boards. Mayor Davidson's committee also said control of welfare and child-care programs should be given back to elected councils.

Expanding Mayor L. A. Foscoe said persons on relief

New British Columbia Park

Forbidden Plateau in central Vancouver has been acquired by the British Columbia government from a logging company and will be turned into a park area complete with ski and recreational facilities. The name Forbidden Plateau is derived from an Indian legend that states Indian women and children seeking safety from invaders travelled up to the sub-Alpine meadows and never were seen again. Thereafter Indians avoided the plateau. (CP Photo)

Jury Would Simplify Hospital Admittance

BRANTFORD (CP)—A coroner's jury Tuesday took a long hard look at hospital emergency and admission procedure before recommending that patients' cards be simplified and made uniform.

The recommendation was made towards the end of a 5½-hour inquest into the Oct. 2 death of Arthur U. Magee, 53, of Brantford.

Magee died in Brantford General Hospital of complications after contracting tetanus.

The death was one of 11 listed earlier this month by Dr. Morton Shulman, dismissed in April as chief coroner for metropolitan Toronto, in which he claimed there was interference or suppression of inquests.

Mr. Magee, a self-employed tradesman, died 13 days after a heavy spring on an overhead garage door, he was installing broke and struck him in the face.

Tuesday, jurors recommended simplification of patients' cards after two nurses testified neither had noticed instructions on Mr. Magee's admission card calling for a one-cubic centimetre injection of an anti-tetanus round.

Dale Robb and Maureen Norman, both on duty in Mr. Magee's hospital ward, said neither administered the injection. They could not say if another nurse had done so.

Students Stole Skeleton, Then Painted It as A Joke

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Visitors opening a closet in the room of two University of Western Ontario students were due for a shock.

Detective George Brunton testified in court Tuesday that he found a human skeleton hanging in the closet with the skull painted copper and the rest of it cream.

The students, Nicholas John Mayo, 21, and Ian Phillip Corey, pleaded not guilty to improperly and indecently interfering with human remains.

They said in a statement to police, read in court, that they dug up the skeleton as a Hallowe'en prank from an abandoned graveyard and were aware of the consequences.

BELLEVILLE UTILITIES COMMISSION

Mortgage Money Availability Helps Real Estate Business

The real estate business in the Belleville area is booming and realtors attribute at least part of the upswing, to an increase in the availability of mortgage money.

Representatives of the Belleville and District Real Estate Board claim the introduction of government loans on older properties and increased competition in the mortgage money markets have made them optimistic about further growth in the field.

Frank Follwell, the real estate board's publicity director, said recently, "The real estate business is wholly dependent on the availability of money. Business as usual has been slow this winter but has picked up over the past two months. I'm hopeful we're going to have a good year."

The Belleville multiple listing service, which combines many of the properties listed by board members, now have between 135 and 150 houses in their files. In addition to these, realtors also hold exclusive rights to many properties.

Properties listed in the Belleville area include everything from the small, older property priced at approximately $7,000 to the top listing of $30,000. Most properties are selling in the $14,000 to $20,000 range.

Apartments are readily available in the area with rents running from $70 per month for a small one bedroom unit to $130 per month for a plush three bedroom apartment. More than 60 new apartments will become available shortly with the completion of a new apartment block.

Real estate agents hope the opening of Loyalist College will help to increase business and they also point to the location of at least two new industries in the Belleville area.

Several agents feel the opening of the mortgage money field to the banks will help business considerably although, "It will take some time for the full effects to be felt," they said.

Lending agencies are receiving from 7 to 8½ percent on mortgage money and are lending up to 75 percent of the property value.

Lone on many older properties are available through a government agency with the purchaser receiving 25 per cent of the first $10,000 as a mortgage. He is required to spend $1,000 on renovations to the property.

All of the real estate agents are looking for more listings, especially in the older section of Belleville.

32 of 38 P. S. Teachers Now Acquired By Board

The Belleville Public School Board has now hired 32 teachers of a total of 38 required for the opening of the fall school term in September and expects no difficulty in obtaining its full complement.

Included in the teachers hired was a physical education supervisor to co-ordinate such instruction in the 14 public schools. The new co-ordinator is Walter Cochrane of Waterloo.

Thirty-two of the 38 teachers required are replacements and to fill vacancies caused by the retirement of nine teachers. Six teachers are required for additional classrooms and to slightly reduce the pupil load per teacher which is now about 30.8.

The board at its regular monthly meeting last night voted to accept 48 senior public school students from the Tyendinaga Indian Reservation if the accommodation is required by the Mohawk Band school board.

Adverse weather conditions and strikes at plants supplying materials and equipment are still holding up completion of the new five room Sir John A. Macdonald school in West Belleville.

Board members are pressing for completion and take-over of the school and it is expected the building will soon be ready for classes.

Also last night the board approved of a request from the city parks board for use of the Haig Road school site at the corner of Victoria Ave. and Haig road as a city playground. The school board will grade the site and agreed to use of the ground until such time as a new school is built.

A conciliation board hearing on the dispute between local public school custodians and the school board will be held in the board room at Belleville on May 24. Chairman for the hearing will be Dr. L. Finn of Toronto. The board appointee will be John Lennox Q.C., and the labor nominee Murray Tate of Toronto.

City public school students have taken part in several school centennial projects this spring, the most recent being a combined school concert held last week at the Belleville Arena.

The board last night commended the students for their fine effort and also expressed appreciation to Miss Phyllis May, choir director, Heather Grant, accompanist, and Alfred Cooper, school band leader.

Also this year grade seven students took part in a Centennial tree planting program, planting approximately 1,200 trees at Thomasburg on property owned by the Moira River Conservation Authority.

On May 27 there will be a Centennial field day at the fairgrounds at which about 1,000 pupils are expected to take part.

Also from June 5-16 grade 6 pupils from city schools will take part in the conservation and natural science tours at Vanderwater Park.

The board was informed that school board chairman Macdonald Smith has been named a director of the Ontario School Trustees and Municipal Councillors' Association.

The second provincial grant payment for schools' operational costs and debenture debt, amounting to $243,900, has been received by the board. Such grant payments are received four times a year.

Bilingual Professor To Head Film Board

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Hugh A. McPherson, 46-year-old bilingual professor of English at the University of Western Ontario here, says he is delighted with his appointment as president of Canada's National Film Board.

The appointment was announced Tuesday by Prime Minister Pearson.

"A fascinating and challenging job—a remarkable job," Dr. McPherson said in a recent interview when rumors about his appointment began circulating.

A native of Sioux Lookout, Ont., who holds degrees from the universities of Toronto, Manitoba and Western Ontario, Mr. McPherson has taught at McGill University and the universities of Manitoba, British Columbia and Toronto.

Since 1966, he has been a professor of American and Canadian studies at Western.

The author of 10 books and many articles on critical, historical, sculpture and poetry, his latest published piece is a chapter on the visual arts in a new book called The Canadians.

Generally known as Hugo, Mr. McPherson is a member of the editorial board of the magazine Arts Canada. He is a specialist in "Canadian literary history."

Mr. McPherson succeeds Guy Roberge who resigned last year to become general delegate for Quebec in England.

U.S. Needs Goodwill Of Canada Says Hees

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — The United States "cannot afford to temper" with Canada's goodwill, said George Hees, candidate for leadership of the Conservative Party, in a speech on Canada's economic needs here on Tuesday night.

Addressing the Macdonald-Cartier Club, Mr. Hees, member of Parliament for Northumberland, said Canada must make it clear to foreign governments it "will not tolerate any attempt by them to dictate or influence in any way the course of our economic direction or operation."

Foreign countries with capital to invest in Canada must be shown that their money will be treated in the same manner as Canadian money and be subject to the same obligations.

Mr. Hees said Canadians must invest more of their savings in development projects.

Ottawa Puts Up Ten Million Dollars To Materialize Canadian Personality

OTTAWA (CP)—A $10,000,000 fund set up this year to stimulate the production of domestic feature films is basically another attempt to materialize the Canadian personality.

Nowhere is this personality more elusive than in the country's 1,400 movie theatres and five-inc, all dominated by American, British, French or Italian productions.

The fact is even more often Japanese than Canadian.

Ottawa pins its hopes for change on the Canadian Film Development Corporation, which will administer the $10,000,000 fund.

A hard-headed, knowledgeable figure now is being sought as film commissioner and by year's end the government hopes to have a six-man board appointed.

The film industry has rallied behind the legislation and will be represented on an advisory committee that also will include critics and distributors.

The legislation, passed in March, gives the board the authority to pump funds into productions at practically any stage through investments or loans.

State Secretary Judy LaMarsh has told Senate hearings that the $10,000,000, at a "conservative estimate," prompt $20,000,000 to $30,000,000 in private investment.

The Canadian legislation is an amalgam of successful European state schemes that have helped build the British, French and Italian movie industries.

The United States and Canada are among the few Western countries where filmmakers haven't been subsidized.

In Italy, movie houses are state-owned and distribution at home is practically guaranteed.

The post-war establishment in Britain of a fund similar to Canada's accounted for the growth of its feature film industry.

When Britons buy a ticket to a foreign film, they pay a surcharge that is put into the domestic industry.

Once the Canadian corporation is established, co-production agreements should be signed in short order with France and Italy. The agreements have already been drawn up.

This will mean, on Italo-Canadian productions, for instance, that state benefits from both countries will be available to the film-maker.

A co-production agreement with Britain is in the preliminary stages.

Ottawa isn't worried that Canada's foreign-tied theatres expected to turn up with all will refuse to show home-made films.

"They are aware that we have not tried the quota system, as is used elsewhere, and we have made nothing to suggest that we will not get co-operation from the distributors," Miss LaMarsh told a Senate committee.

Under the British quota system, 25 per cent of films shown in each theatre must be made in the United Kingdom.

The big troubles of Canadian film-makers have been financial. Despite some notable flops, talent isn't really a problem.

The Luck of Ginger Coffey, made by Crawley Films of Ottawa in 1964, is a favorite example of what happens to the best of Canadian films.

Ginger Coffey was based on Brian Moore's popular, Montreal-set novel, featured British stars Robert Shaw and Mary Ure, and was well distributed.

"But if it is not promoted by the distributor, it is stuck into a movie house for a day or two and no one knows it is there," Miss LaMarsh told the Senate committee.

Ginger Coffey won good reviews but because it lacked the pounding promotion foreign competitors get, it often played to empty houses.

The 10 private companies that now produce feature films in Canada have made it a $14,000,000 industry, despite the innate problems.

Professionals will benefit the most from a federal scheme that aims squarely at commercial success.

A good commercial film requires at least three fundamental elements: a good story, established artists and a competent director, the Senate was told.

Producers seeking funds are three, plus a commercial distribution plan. The no-budget art movie is, practically ruled out.

"There are many young movie-makers in Toronto and elsewhere who think they can go out to a couple of basements and make a movie and that is all there is to it and they should be entitled to assistance," said Miss LaMarsh. "That is not the case."

The corporation will be making the decisions, under the steely eyes of Parliament.

"If we found, for instance, the corporation spending its entire budget on nudist films or something of this kind, we might decide it needed some sort of direction." Miss LaMarsh said, citing an outside possibility.

Hornung Denies Film Ambitions

LEHI, Utah (AP)—It was a curious place to find pro football star Paul Hornung — on a movie set in this Salt Lake City suburb.

Hornung is playing a bit role as a movie called the Devil's Brigade.

"I'm here doin' it for kick in the head—and the money," said Hornung. He denies any ambitions to pursue a career on the screen, as is his onetime colleague, Jim Brown of Cleveland Browns. For the time being, Paul intends to limit his action to football stadiums.

Hornung's role calls for him to play a Montana miner and he has a total of five lines. His previous acting experience: A similar - sized part in the fifties television show My Sister Eileen six years ago.

At 31, Paul Hornung has endured 11 seasons in pro football, minus one for bad behavior, and he knows his years as a player are numbered.

His future is complicated by the fact he will be spending next season with New Orleans Saints, having been drafted for the new team after years with Green Bay Packers of the National Football League.

How does he view the change?

"I'm looking forward to it, although I don't think we'll win many games. At least it will be a new town, a new team, and new opportunities. I'll be doing a television and radio commentary down there, and that's the direction I want to go. Not in acting, believe me."

Will Conduct Two Rallies

Rev. David Wilkerson, the advocate of spiritual awakening among troubled youth, will be conducting two rallies tomorrow evening in the Belleville Collegiate Auditorium at 7:00 and 8:30 p.m.

Mr. Wilkerson has succeeded in reaching the delinquent gangs in New York, helping to destroy narcotic addiction and delinquency which he believes are spiritual problems.

At first Mr. Wilkerson had had luck in New York but soon he had established "in patient" care centres for narcotic addicts, a spiritual therapy clinic for addicts, a centre for girls in which an apartment staff house is included.

Mr. Wilkerson has also founded the Teen Challenge Institute of Missions located near Rhinebeck. He is the author of three books, "The Cross and the Switchblade," "Twelve Angels from Hell" and "The Little People."

Half Loaf Better Than None West Reaction to Wheat Pact

EDMONTON (CP) — Prairie agriculture officials have given the new three-year international wheat agreement grudging acceptance lamenting the fact that they failed to get all of a hoped-for 50-cents-a-bushel price increase.

The attitude in the West where this year's grain crops are just being seeded appears to be that the Canadian negotiators at Geneva did as well as possible and half a loaf is better than none at all.

The new agreement replacing one that expires in July was negotiated during the Kennedy round of world tariff bargaining. Under the new pact the minimum price to Canadian farmers for No. 1 northern wheat Lakehead price will be 40 cents higher. Minimum price delivered in Vancouver will be $2.03½ and the maximum $2.43½.

The deal represents a boost of about 20 cents a bushel over the minimum price set by the last international wheat agreement five years ago. The actual price may rise by less than 20 cents. The current Canadian price for No. 1 northern at the Lakehead is about 17 cents a bushel above the present floor.

Charles Gibbings of Regina president of the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool said the new agreement "does not provide western farmers with as high a price for wheat as had been hoped but it is as much as could be achieved under the circumstances."

Mr. Gibbins was one of five representatives of producer organizations in the West who joined the Canadian delegation in Geneva for critical phases of the negotiations.

Back in Regina he said studies had shown that a price increase of at least 40 cents a bushel was needed to allow Canadian farmers' incomes to keep pace with rising farm costs.

Ryg Atkinson of Saskatoon president of the National Farmers' Union said Tuesday the smaller-than-hoped-for price increase "is cancelled in the new agreement means that Canadian wheat producers face several imperatives.

Mr. Atkinson who like Mr. Gibbins participated in the Geneva talks said the imperatives are these:

"Canadian wheat producers (should) become conscious of production costs and take immediate action to assure control of . . . costs.

"They should demand and organize a more efficient farm supply distribution system.

"They also should insist on a modern grain gathering and handling system and up-to-date low-cost transportation."

Ken Singleton president of the Manitoba Farmers' Union said in Winnipeg that the low-price increase requires that the Canadian government set up a subsidy program for western farmers.

Mr. Singleton said that without a subsidy farmers will be forced to the cost-price squeeze to get out of wheat production.

Guaranteed Quotas Had to Be Abandoned

OTTAWA (CP) — Agriculture Minister Greene said Tuesday Canada's giving at the Geneva tariff - cutting talks included withdrawal of a demand for guaranteed wheat sale quotas in Europe.

Back here following the drawn - out negotiations, Mr. Greene told reporters the move was necessary to get higher export prices for Canadian wheat and an international food - aid program for developing countries.

He also said the 21-cent-a-bushel increase in minimum and maximum wheat prices under the new three-year cereals agreement reached at the Kennedy round talks was not all that Canada wanted. But it was a substantial increase for western farmers.

Benefits to the consumer of lower tariffs generally in international trade may not be great but they will have a long-term effect, he said. Those who are most efficient in any area of production will get more world business and the benefits will accrue to the ultimate purchaser of goods.

"It will open up broader markets and enable us to use the technology and techniques of a new age. Our population of 20,000,000 isn't big enough a market in itself to let us capitalize on these advances; we must have larger markets.

"We shouldn't kid ourselves. This means more competition, and we'll have to be better than other parts of the world. If we are just looking for a cushy niche, we would be hiding behind tariff barriers. We've actually come much closer to one world in a trading sense than anything since GATT began."

Mr. Greene said key members of Canada's negotiating team at the Geneva talks, who have been there for four years, will remain to put the agreement reached on Monday into detailed terms for ratification by the negotiating governments. The deadline for U.S. presidential ratification is June 30.

Mr. Greene regretted that specific announcements will not be possible until about July 1 on the rates of duty which will apply to various commodities. But he said it was important that Monday's agreement be worked out in detail.

"There is $40,000,000,000 of world trade that is going to be affected," he said. "I'm mighty proud of our negotiators. Nobody got everything they wanted, but we did get a substantial amount."

During the past few years we've been laying our cables underground. They now run up streets, down streets, across lawns, along fences and around backyards.
This year, you may want to dig a few post holes, build a sunken garden or make a wading pool.
Any of these chores could result in your damaging one or several of our cables. You could very easily knock out your telephone service as well as that of a few hundred other people, many of whom may feel the loss of service caused them irreparable damage.

HARRY MULHALL

Rebirth of a Nation?

Staff Reporter Harry Mulhall spent three days at Expo. Today he writes the first of a three - part series.

Something significant may be happening for Canada. Right now.

It's happening daily to Canadians, by the thousands, at times by the hundreds-of-thousands.

It's happening at Expo, the glittering cosmopolitan exhibition which has become a focal point of the nation's centennial celebrations.

But the sparkling reality of the big show may be taking second place to something more intangible, more historic. It's in the spirit of the huge crowds of Canadians, thronging shimmering site after site on the tiny, man-made islands housing the exhibition.

The collective experience is something new for Canadians. Long after the bright beacon of Expo goes out for ever, the memory of that experience could be a little, gleaming point of history.

Egypt Asks UN Troops Leave Land

BULLETIN

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Martin said today that if United Nations Secretary - General U Thant persists in his view about the UN force in Egypt the matter will have to be taken before the UN General Assembly.

Thant has taken the view that he has no alternative but to withdraw the force from Egypt now that Egypt has made a formal request for such action.

Mr. Martin told reporters he disagrees with this view.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (CP) — The United Arab Republic asked the United Nations Emergency Force to terminate its presence on Egyptian territory and leave as soon as possible, Cairo radio reported today.

With Arab armies massed in their biggest mobilization since the 1956 Suez crisis, the radio broadcast the text of a message it said Egyptian Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad sent to United Nations Secretary - General U Thant saying the U.A.R. wanted the presence of the force on either Egyptian territory or on the Egyptian border terminated.

Earlier today the U.A.R. claimed its troops had replaced UN troops along the border with Israel.

The multi-nation UN force, which has policed the Gaza Strip and the Sinai frontier since 1956, totals about 3,400 men including 800 Canadians. It was created in the aftermath of the Israeli - British - French attack on Egypt when Cairo nationalized the Suez Canal.

Canadian troops are in four locations in the area but none of them is along the border.

Most of the Canadians are in Camp Rafah outside but close to the Gaza Strip.

There are contingency plans for evacuation of the force in an emergency.

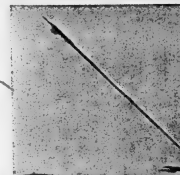
Britons Again Harassed



PEKING (Reuters) — Communist China whipped anti-British feeling to a new pitch today with accusations at a mass rally of 100,000 persons that British authorities in Hong Kong were conspiring with agents of Chiang Kai-shek, leader of Nationalist China, to suppress Chinese workers in the colony.

Premier Chou En - lai attended the rally in a sports stadium in Peking's eastern suburbs which echoed repeatedly to roars of "down with British imperialism" from the capacity crowd.

Public Security Minister Hsieh Fu - chih, the first speaker, repeatedly accused the Hong Kong authorities of collusion with Chiang agents in recent unrest.

The rally, held on the third day of massive anti - British demonstrations here, also was attended by Chen Po-ta, head of the group running the cultural revolution, and Foreign Minister Chen Yi.

A Drake Didn't Duck

The archer who made this mallard drake the subject of his target practice lost out on two counts. Not only did he lose an arrow, shown protruding from the duck's back, but he didn't get the duck. Cedar Rapids city employees spotted the injured duck. The bird was taken to a vet, arrow removed, and duck is reported to be recuperating. (AP Photo)

North Vietnam Rockets Slam Into Key U.S. Base

DONG HA, South Vietnam (Reuters) — North Vietnamese troops today slammed "whispering death" rockets into this key American base just south of the demilitarized zone, killing 11 U.S. marines and wounding 41 others and wrecking vital installations with deadly accuracy.

They blasted three other U.S. positions in similar pre - dawn barrages, but there was no immediate word on casualties in the other attacks.

The heaviest attack was at Dong Ha, 11 miles south of the buffer zone and a major forward base in the relentless struggle between marines and North Vietnamese troops for control of the northernmost part of South Vietnam.

The 140-millimetre rockets — most powerful weapon in the Communist arsenal in South Vietnam — sent an air force radar centre up in flames and scored direct hits on the marines' divisional operations centre, generators supplying the camp's electric power and a South Vietnamese military headquarters.

Mortar shells landed, too, but the heaviest damage was done by the rockets, increasingly used in the region recently.

The other bombardments struck marine bases at Camp Carroll and Cam Lo and a vital forward artillery position at Gio Linh.

For an hour before dawn Communist guns, mortars and rockets rained more than 300 rounds on the four marine outposts.

At least 150 rockets and mortar shells smashed into the Dong Ha camp in less than 45 minutes.

It was the third, and biggest, attack in three weeks on the base.

April 27, a similar barrage killed nine Marines and wounded 51 in the heavily-sandbagged positions.

Group Members Can't Take Jobs

The Registered Nurses' Association of Ontario has placed the Lennox and Addington County General Hospital on its grey list — an action believed without precedent in Ontario, possibly in Canada.

The grey-listing — which would see RNAO members refuse employment at the year-old hospital — will be mailed to 12,000 association nurses in the next few days.

It does not apply to nurses already working at the hospital.

L. B. Sharpe, director of the RNAO personnel - management relations department, told The Intelligencer from Toronto today the decision to grey-list the hospital — over dismissal of three nurses — had been taken in the "past couple of days" by the RNAO executive.

"I think it's an action without precedent in Ontario — and probably Canada — for a hospital," he added.

(The RNAO already has greylisted two health units — in Halton and Stormont-Dundas-Glengarry counties).

Mr. Sharpe said the official notice drawn up for mailing to RNAO members will be "very terse and won't pinpoint any detail."

However, the decision follows a breakdown in negotiations between the hospital administration and the RNAO in a dispute that recently saw three nurses dismissed and the director of nursing and the hospital board chairman resign.

Mr. Sharpe described the latest turn of events in the controversy as "unfortunate."

However, he stressed, the grey-listing would not affect staff now employed at the embattled hospital.

"We expect people working there to continue to do so. We're not stopping operation of the hospital."

Mr. Sharpe said the grey-listing was a move to create "a problem-solving attitude rather than an arbitrary attitude."

He said the RNAO would be "pleased to sit down and resolve" the dispute with the hospital administration.

The controversy, first publicly aired a month ago, dates back to February.

At that time, resignations were tendered by Mrs. Betty Helman, a nursing supervisor; Mrs. Ray Markham, chief operating room nurse and Mrs. John Glen, emergency department head nurse.

April 3 they were dismissed by hospital administrator James Hepburn.

Next move in the dispute came April 22 when the hospital board accepted the resignation of nursing director Violet Cerafici.

Then, four days later, Fred Creighton, one of the new hospital's founding members, re-

'Don't Let Child Enter Hospital' Lawyer Advises Witnesses

VANCOUVER (CP)—A second Jehovah's Witness youngster requiring treatment that may involve blood transfusions has gone into hiding with his mother reasoning in fears by welfare officials that there could be a panic among parents in the religious sect.

Gregory Gordon Standal, 5, was taken from hospital in neighboring North Vancouver Saturday by his mother Francis Standal, a 26-year-old divorcee.

Gordon is suffering a kidney ailment similar to that of Miriam McFlynnemi, 15, who fled hospital in Vancouver May 9 to avoid blood transfusions.

Mrs. Standal said she wants her son to receive the care he needs but "I dare not take a chance on hospitals here and my losing custody because the doctors want to give him a transfusion."

In a telephone interview from Toronto, Glen How, lawyer for the Jehovah's Witnesses in Canada, said he has advised the sect's 7,000 B.C. members that it would be unwise for them to allow their children to enter hospital.

Tough Policy Restores Calm To College After Riot Death

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—Texas Southern University administrators invoked a "get tough" policy and calm prevailed on the campus today after rioting in which a policeman was fatally shot and four other persons were wounded.

Of the 488 students arrested during the four - hour conflict early Wednesday, five were charged with rioting and their bonds fixed at $10,000 each. Conviction on the felony charge carries a penalty of four to 40 years in prison.

Most of the others taken into custody were released late in the day. Authorities said other complaints may be filed.

Patrolmen in unmarked cars cruised around the campus today without incident.

About 100 policemen stormed into dormitories at the predominantly Negro state school, largest of its kind in Texas, to reach snipers firing on them early Wednesday. Officers estimated more than 3,000 shots were exchanged.

Sheriff's officers said 16 students were treated at the county jail for minor injuries, mostly cuts and bruises.

Rookie Patrolman Lewis R. Kuba, 24, died about seven hours after he was shot between the eyes as he and fellow officers advanced on a dormitory from which students were shooting with toasted crude fire bombs.

Police said a preliminary ballistics examination indicated the bullet that struck officer Kuba has another object first.

Police and administrators of the 4,500 - student institution sought to pinpoint reasons for the outbreak, which started in brick and bottle throwing at passing motorists Tuesday night and flared into the gun battle. Student Leon Welch said the events proved that the school administration "has absolutely no control over its students."

University officials expressed shock and said the campus is plagued with outside agitators.

Multiple Listing Sales Up

Total multiple listing real estate sales across Canada have shown increases for 63 consecutive months, members of the Belleville Real Estate Board learned at their regular meeting yesterday.

Board secretary Ted Saunders read a release from the Canadian Association of Real Estate Board which showed multiple listing sales across Canada for February totalled $84,543,000 a record for that month and a 14 per cent increase over February of 1966.

Figures showed a similar trend in Belleville with February multiple listing sales totalling $132,000 compared with $115,000 in Feb. 1966 or an increase of 33 per cent.

Brownies Hold Birthday Revel

Approximately 250 Belleville and district Brownies and their leaders held a centennial revel at the Park Dale playgrounds on Saturday.

Nurses

signed as chairman of the board, declaring support for the three dismissed nurses.

May 5, an RNAO delegation arrived at the scene to discuss the dismissals.

The following day an association announcement expressed RNAO "willingness to work with the hospital administration in an effort to find a solution to the problem."

But it added:

"There is no indication in the affair to suggest to suggest that the nurses involved are other than competent professional persons. These senior nurses lost their position in attempting to bring about better nursing care to the patients and more effective nursing administration within the hospital."

"They feel their suggestions fell on deaf ears."

Mr. Sharpe said hospital authorities had been informed of the RNAO decision early this week.

"The possibility was discussed beforehand. On Tuesday they were officially informed by a telephone call from this office."

The reaction of hospital spokesmen today has been reticence.

Mr. Hepburn said as administrator he had not yet heard "officially" of the grey - listing. However, he said the hospital board was "fully aware" of the situation.

Reg Chapman, acting board chairman since Fred Creighton's resignation, revealed the board discussed the ban Tuesday night.

However, he would not say what decisions, if any, had been taken.

"We can't make any comment. The board must be heard."

Any statements at this time would only add to the controversy, added.

Mr. Creighton, who still retains his membership on the board, said he did not attend Tuesday night's meeting and did not know any of the details.

"I still stand behind the staff," he emphasized.

"I don't think there is an issue — and you can't have peace without justice."

Mr. Creighton added he would not like the nurses to lose "100 per cent right. But they're not 100 per cent wrong."

"The whole problem is most of the members of the board have no idea about what is going on."

While he did not intend that to be critical, Mr. Creighton said, he claimed other board members "have the one side."

"I've tried to find out both sides of the story."

Douglas Grant Invited To Lay Wreath on Grave

Belleville realtor, Douglas Grant, as the nearest descendant of John W. Ritchie, one of Canada's Fathers of Confederation, has been invited to go to Halifax on July 1 to lay a wreath in a commemorative ceremony at the grave of the Nova Scotia statesman.

The invitation is from Hon. Judy LaMarsh, Canada's Secretary of State.

Similar wreath laying ceremonies are planned at the graves of other Fathers of Confederation.

Mr. Grant, a native of Halifax, who moved to the Kingston area when he was about 16 years of age admits that it came as a surprise to learn that one of his ancestors had a part in Canada becoming a nation. He says Mr. Ritchie was a grand uncle of his.

MORE

96. Ritchie took a prominent part in Nova Scotian politics and legal affairs.

He was the son of a county court judge, was educated privately and was admitted to the Nova Scotian Bar in 1831.

He was first clerk of the Legislative Council of N.S. from 1839 until 1864 when he was appointed member of the council and acted as solicitor general from 1864 until 1867. Mr. Ritchie was a N.S. delegate to the London conference on Confederation in 1866 and was appointed to the Canadian Senate in 1867.

Mr. Ritchie resigned from the Senate in 1870 to become a member of the Supreme Court of N.S. and from 1873 until 1882 when he retired, served as judge in equity.

And aside from his legal and political interest Mr. Ritchie was the first president of the N.S. Historical Society in 1878.

The Real Magic of Expo

For First Time Canada Sees Itself As Enterprising, Imaginative Nation

By HARRY MULHALL
(Staff Reporter)

MONTREAL — It wasn't the best choice of day for a big birthday party — no matter how unobtrusively it had been toasted.

To begin with, it was Monday — and a biker Monday would be hard to find.

From early morning a dreary overcast had been moving inshore and the rain came on just as they opened the gates for another day.

Yet, by noon, nearly 70,000 people had flowed through the turnstiles. By midnight — as the rain reluctantly eased — the total tally had topped 120,000.

The weather was no crowd organizer's ideal, the throng's enthusiasm for Expo was typical.

So much so, that something new, maybe fabulous, is happening for Canada on the tiny, man-made islands in the St. Lawrence, scene of Expo 67 — and world focal point for Canada's 100th birthday celebrations.

The international exhibition is the biggest show of its kind on earth. But the glittering presence of Expo itself is taking second place to a new, national phenomenon — excited involvement by Canadians in a peacetime endeavor, transcending the vices of political regionalism.

For the first time in one place, Canadians en masse can view a Canadian endeavor on their own soil, which manifests the best, if intangible, attractions of their own country.

Those qualities include potentials for enterprise and imagination, which in the past have caught the eye of the outsider, and drawn him to new horizons here.

Too frequently, they have been lost on the native sons — but not now.

Suddenly, only 100 years old, Canada is on show, in shimmering, sophisticated fashion, worthy of a big land and its world environment.

And, at last, Canadians are finding something they don't have to compromise about — and are enjoying the sensation.

The true spirit of Expo 67 is the unreserved response of the huge, happy crowds thronging from sidewalking gala to site; their refusal to be deterred beforehand by any condition; their outspoken commitment to national pride as they depart.

"My God," said one Bellevillian, decup, bedraggled and braving the showers under the huge Maple Leaf flouting Canada's big display, to think I was even cynical about this thing before I came here. Now look at it. It makes you feel proud."

Over at the Place d'Accueil the scene rain -was failing — and the crowds still thronged through the turnstiles.

Up the steps from the bus routes, more than 100 Quebec public school youngsters flocked together, sorted themselves into a phalanx, turned their faces into the rain and belted out "O Canada" in French, gave three rousing cheers and marched toward the turnstiles.

Another Quinte resident, waiting for friends, watched, them go, turned to tell passers-by in English: "This is civilian, decup, bedraggled and braving the showers under the huge Maple Leaf flouting Canada's big display, to think I

10:30 a.m. — Netherlands national day.

It Was the Best of Days!

The day is bright, sunny, warm. Expo sees its fans swarm through entrance gates at Place d'Accueil and another big day is underway at the glittering international exhibition, focal point for centennial celebrations.

...It Was the Worst of Days!

Rain pours down on Expo but still thousands of Canadians throng its grounds, patiently standing in line to view its exhibits. Not all were as lucky as those at British pavilion, where guards passed out umbrellas . . . but all were just as cheerful.

Montreal Honored at Expo As It Marks 325th Birthday

MONTREAL (CP)—The city of Montreal celebrated its 325th birthday Wednesday and received a gift that soon blossomed to New York's Statue of Liberty.

On the 11th of the national and special days since Expo 67 opened April 27, Mayor Jean Drapeau took the stand of honor to see his city's flag raised at Place des Nations.

Then the dignitaries moved to a St. Helen's Island plaza where Alexander Calder's stabile Man was handed over to the city.

As Albert P. Gagnebin, president of International Nickel Co., turned over the 85-ton stabile by the American sculptor, he noted that both it and the Statue of Liberty had been built in France.

"It is perhaps significant that though almost a century separates these two stabiles, both are located at continental gateways and both represent an interpretation of mankind, his humanity, his freedom, his search for what is good and fine in life," said Mr. Gagnebin.

Today the fair celebrates the Dutch national day, with Queen Juliana and Prince Bernhard of The Netherlands watching their country's flag raised in Place des Nations.

Men from two Dutch ships moored at an Expo pier, the frigate Van Galen and the destroyer Rotterdam, are remnant of the war-torn days of 1940 when Juliana, then a princess, crossed the Atlantic in the flotilla leader Sumatra.

She landed at Halifax and spent the wartime years in Canada. Today she is expected to say "thank you" to Canada in a special way.

Another prominent visitor expected today is Edward Heath, Conservative leader in the British House of Commons. Mr. Heath planned to visit the British pavilion and hold a noon press conference, then visit the French, Russian and United States pavilions.

Meanwhile, in the executive offices, heads of Canada's world's fair, the Victoria Day weekend.

Wednesday's attendance was 193,794 at midnight, bringing the fair's total attendance so far to 4,958,715. Record day so far has been Sunday, April 30, with 569,500 visitors.

At a press briefing, officials remarked on the small number of police incidents among foreigners. Tuesday 219,000 visitors came to see the show on the St. Lawrence River Islands but of that crowd only two drunks were arrested and one was locked up for disturbing the peace.

No civic holiday was declared for Wednesday's Montreal Day celebration but by 8 p.m. the 24th crowd of 177,411 had exceeded the statistical prediction of 80,550.

The city's own Compagnie Franche de la Marine, a quasi-military group, discharged muskets in place of the usual howitzer salutes.

At the Montreal ceremony, the fair's commissioner-general Jean Dupuy called Mayor Drapeau the "mentor for a great city."

The mayor responded by saying: "Montreal is Canada's metropolis because its founding was an act of faith and of spiritual-

"Far and away the most ambitious and successful of the multi-element shows at Expo 67 is a major thematic display put together by the National Film Board of Canada and titled Labyrinth."

"This," wrote Crowther, "is, indeed, the most ingenious and complete construction of an audio-visual experience that has ever been done . . ."

Nicholas Taylor of The Sunday Times of London praises Buckminster Fuller's huge geodesic bubble, which forms the U.S. pavilion, but calls Habitat 67 "probably the most important achievement of the whole Expo."

British and U.S. Publications Shower Praises on World Fair

MONTREAL (CP)—Top publications in Britain and the United States are giving the close-up treatment of Expo 67, with generally enthusiastic comments and occasional soured by negative reactions.

"It is a fairy-tale world of pleasures and pleasures in a fairy land setting of islands in a river," wrote Ada Louise Huxtable, an architecture specialist for the New York Times.

"A stunning leap into tomorrow," was Life magazine's description of the fair's architecture.

"Pop goes the world," headlined The Observer of London in presenting a big spread on Expo.

Most features of the fair, from setting to art displays, drew praise.

But while the clippings with varying views poured into Expo offices, there was no comment from fair officials.

But there was dissent in The Spectator, a British weekly, whose satirical versifier, Christopher Hollis, echoed Samuel Butler in explaining vis-a-vis the British pavilion:

"Oh God! Oh Montreal!"

The Spectator's Roy Strong let go the strongest anti-Expo blast of all, suggesting that the fair may have been designed as a "crush course on philosophical platitudes to end them all."

But Canadians may come to look back on Expo as a significant experience, he went on.

John Canaday, art critic of the New York Times, praised fine aspects of the $35,000,000 art exhibit at Expo.

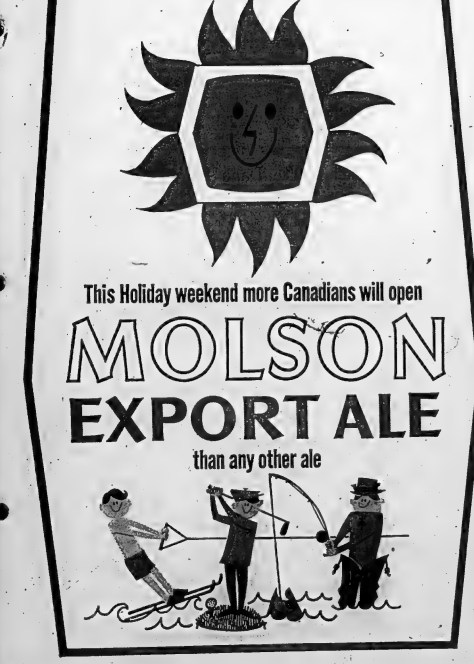
But he criticized "the indescribable inchations of third - and fourth-rate 20th-century talents and duplication of some of our time and of the past." Among the works he considered inferior and duplicative were "a tired, dying abstraction" by Canadian Paul-Emile Borduas.

The Times' movie critic, Bosley Crowther, hails the way Expo exhibits use of films to get their messages across.

U.S. Experts Say Canada Takes Lead in Architecture

NEW YORK (CP) — Harper's magazine says Canada has taken the lead in architecture "with something powerful and new arising that is bound to affect architecture everywhere before long."

An article in the May issue by Edgar Kaufmann Jr., who teaches architecture at Columbia University, discusses Toronto's newer buildings and some of the outstanding ones at Expo 67.



Architects, patrons and students of architecture should all see those buildings for themselves, he says, because the change they represent is "a new turn in how to think about buildings as human implements and poetic human expressions."

"One big idea is that the unit of architecture is no longer an individual building, but a whole milieu," Mr. Kaufmann writes.

Film May Be Shown

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has suppressed for nearly 22 years confessed Japanese films showing ghastly after-effects of the 1945 atomic bombing of Hiroshima, U.S. officials revealed.

Some U.S. authorities now are reported in favor of letting Japan decide what if any restrictions Film's showing.

Gordon on Vietnam

Whether Privy Council President Walter Gordon's voice is heard in Washington or not it certainly is reverberating around the rafters on Parliament Hill.

Mr. Gordon's criticism of the United States' involvement in Vietnam reflects general world concern over the continuing escalation of the conflict there and the possibility of this leading to an even larger and much more hazardous confrontation with China.

In short, there is the possibility that we are witnessing (as United Nations Secretary-General U Thant has warned) the early stages of a third world war. Or is this an exaggerated viewpoint? Vietnam, after all, is still only a small corner of the world. Yet in that land is to be found the larger issues of principle that divide the world into two — into one camp which believes in western democracy and into another which subscribes to the theals of world domination through communism.

This is the crucial thing to remember, and it matters little who says what about Vietnam so long as that factor is borne in mind. Those who protest United States policy in Vietnam may ask themselves what kind of world do they want? Which system would they prefer to live under? In the year 2,050, if not earlier, is it too great a flight of imagination to suppose that instead of a Governor General in Ottawa there might be some representative of Peking in residence? That is, unless the United States, with or without assistance, stands firm in Vietnam now.

For all that, Mr. Gordon has a right — and a duty — to say what he thinks, whether it conflicts with party or government policy or not, and even at the expense, if need be, of his own personal future in politics. As he put it himself, in an interview outside the Commons chamber: "If I or any other member of the Government feels that he is prevented from expressing his views on a matter of such importance then there is something wrong with our system."

He said if anyone felt as strongly about any matter as he did about the Vietnam crisis, "I would expect him to speak out." And many have been doing just that — from U Thant to External Affairs Minister Paul Martin and U.S. Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield. Speaking of Germany in a recent Montreal speech, Mr. Martin might just as easily have been referring to Vietnam when he said: "There is no freedom in East Germany, and we must pay the price of freedom to have freedom."

Senator Mansfield, meanwhile, wants the Vietnam issue put before the United Nations. This is a proposal the senator has made before and he claims it received the backing of President Johnson, but was opposed by U Thant who said he would prefer to pursue peace talks privately.

"I think the secretary-general has had his chance," said Mr. Mansfield. "It is now time to place the matter formally before the Security Council."

China of course is not a member of the United Nations, so that such a move would likely be doomed to failure. Yet it is one more attempt — and on the American side at that — to end the Vietnam war. No comparable effort is being made by China or North Vietnam.

In passing, a comment of the Buffalo News is relevant to this issue and to Mr. Gordon's defence of the right of free speech in particular. "What has clouded the cherished, constitutionally guaranteed right of free speech on Vietnam has been a distrust that has bred embittered debate and extremist tactics.

"Among the dissenters are those who vilify President Johnson personally, who break the law, who scream rather than speak. Yet on the other side, among the policy-makers, are those who veer dangerously close to making dissent unpatriotic, who contend that dissent will prolong the war.

Government Costs Jump 30 Per Cent in Four Years

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Up and up and up it goes and where it stops nobody knows — least of all Prime Minister Pearson or the Federal Cabinet.

Or so says Senator Wallace McCutcheon of the administrative cost of the Government.

That is the cost mind you, not of national public services — but of simply keeping the Federal department store.

It is the operating expense — the cost of the clerks and the department managers, maintenance and repair and all the rest of what business knows as overhead.

And it is rocketing so fast it scares even the Auditor General, Maxwell Henderson, himself a former member of the Federal Establishment, as a senior CSC executive. (And everybody this side of kindergarten knows how the CBC can spend — just like the public purse had no bottom.)

But now Mr. Henderson as Auditor General no longer is an employee of CSC and a Federal Establishmentarian.

Instead, he beongs to Parliament — and as the non-politically appointed Watchdog of the Treasury, wears no one Party's leash — so is free to snoop.

Turns out he speaks with a bark, but good, like a watchdog should.

Now ponder this . . .

. . . if a former Federal Wheeler-Dealer out of the Super-Spending CBC can be impressed by the way the Government pours out the money, it has to be pouring it out like the dam's let go.

Blowing the whistle on the Government's operational overhead, he plus is up to a wheeling 30 per cent in four years.

For what?

Senator McCutcheon takes his cue from the Auditor General, answers that it is mostly for the civil service, up by 25,000 in just the last two years.

Well, what does the Government itself say to that?

On this point, the Government speaks officially through the Federal Estimates, a department-by-department accounting of what nickel, dime and dollar goes where.

The payroll four years ago, was $898,742,253, it says right here in the 1964 estimates.

The payroll last year was $1,165,988,067, disclose the '68 estimates — up $266,000,000.

The payroll this year, reveal the '67 estimates, will run $1,307,302,606 — up another $142,000,000.

Add them, and thinking of your taxes, wrap — up by $286,000,000, plus $142,000,000 or a total of $408,000,000 in four years.

And that, dear taxpayer, is just for payroll — nearly half a billion dollars.

Senator McCutcheon insists that in the name of everything that makes financial sense, it has simply got to stop "here and now."

Who is Senator McCutcheon to be telling the Government where to get off financially?

Just Mr. Moneybags, that is who.

He was financier E. P. Taylor's man — at the — corporative — cash — register before he "retired" into federal politics as a last-minute Conservative Trade and Commerce Minister in the days when former Prime Minister Diefenbaker's Government was tottering.

So his qualifications for "money-talk" are about as impeccable as they could get.

But what, specifically, does the Senator say?

For one thing, that the Labor Department has spun off much of its work and staff to the new Manpower Department.

And what happens to the Labor Department employing a lot of the Labor Department's former staff and doing much of its work, and what is left of the Labor Department carries a payroll of $4,367,000.

The Labor Department — now has fewer, far fewer responsibilities than two years ago, but employs more people on a bigger payroll to do them.

And what about the new Manpower Department which is doing much of the Labor Department's former job?

It has a staff budget running $54,908,000, covering Manpower and Immigration.

The total Labor-Immigration payroll cost two years ago was $20,000,000. Now, it is $39,000,000. Up a mere $20,000,000.

But like old C. D. "Trader" Howe once said for the Liberal Cabinet, "What's a million?"

There has been inflation since then, so answer the question to read "What's Twenty Million of Four Hundred and Eight Million?"

"LSD nothing'! When my boy said,' We got all it takes for a real swinging trip, man', he meant Expo passports and maps and Canadian money . . ."

Psychology of Dentistry

Brantford Expositor

When you sit in a dentist's chair, your conscious mind may see the dentist as a kindly, powerful, parent-figure; perhaps as a hostile figure; or perhaps, even as a lover.

And dentists should try to understand all the tremendous mental complications of their patients, a university professor of psychology told a congress of Australian dentists in Melbourne.

Prof. Ian Waterhouse, professor of psychology at Macquarie University, said: "At a personal level a dentist is someone who almost magically relieves pain and arrests decay. But there are more irrational levels — for instance the features of being in a dentist's 'chair.'"

The patient is made to sit in a high chair and to wear a bib. The dentist stands over him and forces him to accept a passive role. In that situation the patient might think: "I like him but not I did my own parents."

Prof. Waterhouse said a dentist could sometimes stir up other sub-conscious responses in patients.

While working, often a dentist's face is very close to the patient's, often his arm may encircle the patient's head or cheek and often the patient's head is against the dentist's chest.

"It takes no imagination to appreciate that these things can serve to stir up momentary fantasies and feelings more appropriate to a lover."

One happy piece of news for Australians came out of the congress: Drinking beer could help to prevent tooth decay because it contained fluoride. "But you would have to drink a lot of beer for it to be really effective," a dentist said.

Poem Trips True Davidson

Globe and Mail

The times are hard. The poor old male ego was just beginning to swell a little — what with playoff hockey, and Judy La-Marsh's promise to curb women politics — when along came East York Mayor True Davidson, needle in hand.

Miss Davidson, speaking to a women's meeting of the UN association, announced that she had remained an old maid because she never found a man whose career she considered more important than her own.

Somehow, we prefer the words of a lady poet who some 35 years ago suggested gently that a woman's place was in the home. She wrote:

> What wasted effort what complete insanity,
> To mimic men
> In all their drinking, hunting and profanity!
> Let us return to decorative > Inanity
> And power again.

And who was the gentle lady poet who graciously put men in their place? Why, none other than True Davidson, writing in a slim volume of verse in 1931. Indeed, the times are hard.

Today in History

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

May 18, 1967 . . .

President Woodrow Wilson signed the U.S. Selective Service Act 50 years ago today — three days after the United States entered the First World War. Voluntary enlistment played havoc with war planning so much that the navy and army stopped accepting volunteers in 1918 and took in only conscripts. The same thing happened in the Second World War, for which the U.S. had a draft system prepared before it entered the war, and the system was extended in precedent after 1945.

1916—The Panama Canal was opened to barge traffic.

First World War

Fifty years ago today—in 1917 — Prime Minister Sir Robert Borden announced plans to introduce conscription and President Wilson enacted it in the United States: British artillery helped repel Austrian counter-attacks on the Italian front.

Russia Bids On American Dam Project

New York Times

Moscow's inquiry into the possibility of bidding for the government contract to provide the generating equipment at Grand Coulee Dam presents the administration with a tough test of its liberal trade policy with Communist Europe.

Already there has been speculation that the administration may seek to dodge the issue by refraining from opening the contract to free, worldwide bidding. Instead it might legally limit bidding to domestic suppliers or perhaps make an award after negotiation with only a few invited domestic manufacturers.

But such evasion would be widely and properly interpreted as a retreat from the president's own policy of seeking to expand trade and other contacts with the Soviet Union. By asking for the right to compete, Moscow has in effect challenged the President's policy of building economic bridges.

Chief Justice Dana Porter

Globe and Mail

Ontario Chief Justice Dana Porter, who died on Saturday, found a number of ways in which to serve both his province and his country, any one of which was enough to set him apart as a most distinguished citizen. The clarity of his thought and his capacity for initiative were also among the qualities which made him at one time the most influential member of the Ontario Cabinet, next to the then Premier Leslie Frost.

During the postwar years — important ones in Ontario's development — he headed five different departments. Probably the most notable of his achievements in this phase of his career was his organization of an airlift which brought 10,000 British immigrants to Ontario within a few weeks in 1947.

As Chief Justice, he enriched the lives of Ontario citizens by rulings which were marked by contemporary opinion, and a clear distaste for petty-minded restrictions on personal freedom. The cumulative effect of these judgments may indeed surpass, as a monument to his public service, his magnificent work as head of the Royal Commission which gave Canada the most searching look into banking legislation that it has ever had.

De Gaulle Again

Britain's humiliation at the hands of President de Gaulle is virtually complete. The leader of the country which Britain played a large part in restoring after its defeat in the last war once again has thrown cold water on the idea of its old ally joining the European Common Market.

De Gaulle spoke of the "incompatibility" of the role of sterling as a reserve currency (the French franc is now fully convertible and free of exchange controls) and said only an economic and political transformation would permit Britain to become part of Europe.

Britain might just as well make up its mind to make the best of its present situation and attempt to evolve closer economic links with this continent, while improving its competitive status on the European scene. And never mind de Gaulle.

Peking Threat

U.S. May Be Involved in Asia "Until End of Century"

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — Latest declarations from Peking and this capital, plus the seemingly irreconcilable Vietnam war, bring pessimism about an inevitable clash between China and the U.S.

"It's going to be useful for some time to come for America's power to be able to control every wave of the Pacific, if necessary," State Secretary Dean Rusk is quoted as saying in the current issue of Look magazine.

"There is an over-riding necessity for organizing a durable peace—to avoid a third world war," Rusk is quoted by the magazine as saying.

Look itself comments that, if China turns militant and hardnosed, it is difficult to see how a confrontation can be forever avoided."

In the same issue, Gen. Earle G. Wheeler chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, says, "We'll be involved out there until the end of this century."

The threat to Thailand's internal security now resembles that existing in South Vietnam in 1961, he says.

From Peking, Premier Chou En-lai in a series of interviews with the naturalized American journalist, Simon Malley, predicted that war with the U.S. is inevitable.

China will march its armies into North Vietnam "tomorrow or the day after" if bombing happen, Chou is quoted as saying.

One would be a land invasion of the North and the other the fashioning of any "peace sellout" between the North and the U.S.

In other words, says Chou, China reserves the right of veto over any peace, has warned the North against such a peace and vows the U.S. intervention in Vietnam "will not succeed."

However much bluff may be involved on both sides, these views come in the wake of the wavering last week from Secretary-General U Thant of the United Nations: "If the present trend continues, I am afraid direct confrontation . . . between Washington and Peking is inevitable."

His doors were seconded in several terms by Prime Minister Pearson, and criticized here.

"Your president is not going to let this war get out of hand," Vice - President Hubert Humphrey told a college audience during the weekend.

Chine's future actions are clouded by uncertainty about the extent and meaning of its continuing internal convulsions of struggle and upheaval and weaken prospects of intervention.

Chester Ronning, retired Canadian diplomat sent twice to Hanoi on peace missions, has been quoted as saying he believes China's internal ferment signals preparation for an anticipated war with the U.S.

Harrison E. Salisbury of the New York Times, who brought the U.S. the first American journalistic view of North Vietnam at war, says in the current Reporter Republic magazine:

"The peril of escalation of the Vietnam conflict into that catastrophic agglomeration of explosions of American strategists and statesmen have resolutely warned is real and present. . . . Today the hurricane signals are out.

"Well over a year ago I was told by responsible Chinese that they were preparing for war with the U.S., a war which would provoke by our escalation in Vietnam."

World Free Trade Bloc "Needed to Lift Living Standards"

MONTREAL (CP)—Two United States businessmen called Wednesday for the establishment of a world free-trade association with the aim of lifting living standards in both developed and emerging countries.

Speaking at the 21st congress of the International Chamber of Commerce they warned that the progress made earlier this week with the successful conclusion of trade talks at Geneva is not enough.

The businessmen—Daniel L. Goldy vice - president of the Houston Oil Field Material Co. and Ralph I. Straus director of R. H. Macy and Co. Inc. of New York—agreed that a piecemeal approach to the problem of international trade no longer is good enough.

Jean Royer consultant of the chamber on international trade and former deputy executive secretary of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade challenged these views however.

He told a press conference that while a world free-trade association should be formed it would come through negotiations devoted to specific sectors of countries' economies.

Mr. Goldy told the delegates from around the world that it is clear the Geneva talks under the sponsorship of GATT are an inadequate technique for dealing with trade barriers—despite the promise of the latest agreement.

"GATT negotiations by their very nature are foredoomed to less 'accomplishment than is sought'" he said.

"It is a slow painstaking and tedious approach in which the ultimate bargains represent the least common denominator of agreement."

The growth of regional trading blocs such as the European Common Market have added to the frustration of trade talks he said.

Noting that the difficulty of obtaining internal agreement on key issues among ECM members paralysed the Geneva talks for months he added:

"These difficulties might well be compounded should future GATT sessions involve several common markets as well as individual countries."

What is required he said is a better device for negotiating agreements on matters which are becoming increasingly complex.

"One proposal for meeting this need is for the establishment of a new world free-trade association which hopefully might include at the outset the European Economic Community the European Free Trade Association Canada, Japan and the United States.

Other countries or regional trading blocs would be admitted as they were ready and able to do so.

"Membership in the group would commit the participants to the elimination of all trade barriers on future agreed-upon date and the association would program the progress to be made toward achieving the objectives."

Mr. Goldy said that if Britain's application to join the EEC is approved "there will be a pooling of such a large percentage of free world trade that the attraction for the other countries should become almost irresistible."

"Or if Britain's application is denied and the U.S. should join EFTA in forming a larger free trade association it is doubtful that the EEC could long stand aloof."

Only Three Vacancies For Teachers

PICTON (Staff) — Only three vacancies face the Picton Public School Board for the 1967-68 season, supervising principal, Carl Reid reported this week to the regular meeting of the board.

"Still lacking," he said are physical education instructors for boys and girls and one rotary teacher for intermediate grades.

Mr. Reid has stated that he feels that at this stage there is still lots of time until fall, and he is not too concerned yet, that there is a major problem. The school board expressed surprise that with the increase in salary schedules any vacancies remain at all. Mr. Reid explained that in spite of the increase in salaries locally, a shortage of elementary teachers remains and salary schedules of most other boards are either competitive or higher.

TROOPS OFFERED

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rhodesia offered to send up to 5,000 troops to Vietnam to assist the U.S. and its allies, Senator Strom Thurmond (Rep.-S.C.), said Wednesday night. The remainder of the country will have near-normal readings. Precipitation will be heavy in most of western Canada and the Maritimes. Moderate precipitation is called for in the rest of Canada. Lighting Devices To Be Displayed

The history of artificial lighting down through the years from the stone age period to the present will be on display this week-end at the Hastings County Museum in Belleville as the wraps are taken off the Paul collection of lighting devices.

The display formerly owned by the late Dr. William Paul of Tweed includes approximately 300 items of historical interest ranging from the simple hollowed out stone receptacles of pre-historic times to the kerosene lamps of grandmother's day.

Some of the lighting devices in the collection have been definitely dated to as far back as 600 years B.C. while the time of use for some of the earlier lamps is unknown.

Museum officials have been working for weeks getting the Paul collection in readiness for Sunday's opening. The collection is believed to be the only one of its kind in Canada and almost completely fills two rooms at the museum.

Canadians Are Advised To Speak Boldly

KINGSTON (CP)—A leading American clergyman says Canadian churchmen should not be afraid to speak out boldly on the war in Vietnam.

Rev. Harold A. Bosley senior minister of Christ Church Methodist in New York City was addressing delegates Wednesday to the annual Day of Quiet conference of the United Church of Canada.

"I hope Canadians won't construe the friendly relations between Canada and the U.S. as a barrier against speaking what they feel is the truth on the issue of Vietnam" he said.

Mr. Bosley minister of the largest Methodist church in the U.S. was one of 10 inter-denominational representatives who traveled to Vietnam in 1965 to talk with political and religious leaders concerning the conflict in the Southeast Asian country.

"The problem of the war concerns all of us Canadian and American alike because the moral and spiritual issues of the war are of universal import" he said.

Secondary School Budget Is Reduced by $60,000

A capital expenditure of $60,000 was deleted from the Bay of Quinte Secondary School budget at a school board meeting last night.

The $90,000 covered the cost of an addition to the administration building and was deleted at the request of Belleville and Ameliasburg councils.

The addition was deferred until 1968 but several members claimed it was "unwise to go ahead with the structure in view of the threatening amalgamation.

The board expects to show an additional increase of $10,000 from provincial grants. If the grants are forthcoming the budget deletion will amount to only $50,000.

Several members suggested it is time to think of an integrated educational system for this area. "The Public School Board will also be required to increase their administration offices in the near future and the time appears favorable to operate from the same building."

It was suggested that the present administration building could be used as a medical centre.

Plans have already been drawn for the addition and it was pointed out that the board would be required to foot the architects' fee of approximately $3,300.

In other business several letters regarding salary increases were received from the secretarial and assistant operators in cafeterias.

The secretarial staff feel they should have received a higher increase in their last pay raise. The assistant cafeteria operators also feel they were not given a proper increase.

Committee members will meet with the assistant cafeteria operators in the near future.

Tenders on fuel oil and coal for use in the school system were received and contracts went to Moira Schuster Fuel Oil Ltd. and Harry Smith Fuel Ltd.

In his report, superintendent E. A. Orr said "The problem of drop-outs is not serious in this area." The number of students receiving honor seal graduation certificates in the school system is higher than the provincial average.

Mr. Orr also said the Moira Secondary School has been selected by the Department of Education as one of several schools involved in an experimental program in English.

The superintendent said he sees little or no problem in acquiring an adequate teaching staff for the coming year. "We have most of our positions filled at the present time."

Following the three hour meeting the board moved into committee to discuss salary arrangement with the teaching staff.

Jury Urges More Security On Toxic Drugs

KINGSTON (CP) — A coroner's jury investigating the death of a 26-year-old Kingston General Hospital employee urged hospital officials Wednesday to tighten security on highly toxic drugs.

The jury ruled that Eldon William Worsick of Carrying Place, Ont., died of an overdose of chloralhydrate, a sleep-inducing drug. His body was found in a washroom at the hospital March 17.

Coroner Stuart Patterson told the jury that Worsick, an outpatient at the Ontario Hospital, had obtained the drugs illegally from the hospital while working there March 16.

Dr. George Frukacy, a psychiatrist at the Ontario Hospital, said Worsick suffered from depression and had attempted suicide three times.

School Board Vetoes Partisan Political Clubs

By ROGER WORTH
Staff Reporter

Partisan political clubs will not be permitted in Bay of Quinte secondary schools.

Last night at a school board meeting a motion to permit the operation of political clubs was defeated in a split vote.

Following several representations by students the motion was placed before the board. After discussing the problem for more than an hour, officials granted the proposal.

Several board members felt the operation of clubs would be beneficial but the responsibility should not be with the education system.

The motion called for permission to operate the partisan clubs, subject to rules the board and principal deem necessary.

Members speaking in favor of the plan pointed out that youngsters in the school system should have the same right as college students to participate in politics.

They said in this way parties and their policies can be held up to critical examination. They also felt the board was denying the students their democratic rights.

It was pointed out by members opposing the plan that political science clubs could be set up to study all party policies. Members favoring the plan said this had been tried and was "a colossal" failure. "Enough enthusiasm could not be engendered in the students."

None of the principals in attendance were actively opposed to the plan and said they would abide by the wishes of the school board.

Several members feared the domination of the students by people outside the education system. They also wondered which parties would be acceptable — just the old line parties or could other parties be involved.

The plan to set up the clubs called for a staff advisor to be in attendance at meetings.

Other dissenters to the plan wanted to see the individual constitutions before making a decision. "The word partisan just doesn't seem to fit in a school system — what would happen if the next thing they wanted was a religious denomination climb. It's the same principle."

Quebec Jews GoodExample Of Minority

MONTREAL (CP)—People do not have to be melted down and moulded into "the exact replica of our neighbors in order to achieve world unity," Harry Gold, executive director of the Young Men's and Young Women's Hebrew Associations of Montreal, told a women's conference at Expo 67 Wednesday.

"This is a popular misconception which most minorities seem to have," said Mr. Golden.

"It's like all the smaller African countries trying to be like Pittsburgh. Of course, it can't work and there is frustration and resentment between races or religions."

Mr. Golden said the Jew in Quebec is a good example of a minority which has adapted itself to live in harmony in a diverse environment.

"Both the Jew and non-Jew have developed culturally and economically as a result of living together without losing their individual identities," he said.

He spoke in a panel at a conference sponsored by the Women's Federation of Allied Jewish Community Services of Montreal dealing with the theme The Uneasy City.

More Men Than Women At Russian Fashion Show

MONTREAL (CP)—More men than women crowded into the 600-seat theatre at Expo's Russian pavilion Wednesday to watch a spectacular array of fashions presented by equally spectacular models.

"Now those are girls," whispered one man.

"Not like our North American gals who all seem to be underweight."

"These are the kind of clothes women should wear," said another college-aged fellow.

Presented on the Moscow House of Fashions, under direction of Vezobel Helen, some 150 ensembles ranging from maxi-dresses to elegant floor-length evening gowns were modelled by seven girls.

There were suits and dresses, fashioned from soft wools in a variety of subtle shades ranging from rust to champagne. Hemlines were as much as four inches above the knee although a covered-up look emerged as a result of high necklines and long or three-quarter sleeves.

An explosion of color as three girls came out sporting gaily-coloured dresses with matching headscarves brought spontaneous applause.

There was a series of fur fashions, most created from white mink. The coats were distinguished with slimmed capeshoulderes to reveal silk cocktail dresses incorporating luxurious beading across the bodice of neckline and hemlines.

Color combinations run rampant in the evening dresses with the Moscow House of Fashions combining brilliant turquoise with silver in a wrap-around gown with matching shawl worn over the head, cascading over the shoulders to the floor. A lovely jewelled collar completed the outfit.

Many fashions had a Western influence in the semi-tailored line and some bordered on the oriental flavor but all fashions were created by Russians, using only Russian fabrics and furs.

The entire fashion show was accompanied by jazz-like musical arrangements played by a Russian trio, with guitar, bass and accordion.

A running commentary describing each creation was delivered in both French and English by Irina Zhukova.

The show is presented twice daily, at 3 and 5 p.m. and there is no admission charge.

This particular showing, which took the 800 employees of the Moscow House almost a year to complete, will be seen daily until June 8. Then a new fashion parade from Riga will move into Expo and remain till the end of July.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Ham and Cheese Sandwiches Popular Lunch Special

By MARY MOORE

Frank Campigotto, head chef at our local Chamber of commerce, described to my sister one of his most popular lunch "specials" — between face-offs in the second period of the lost Stanley Cup game, only half of one of my ears was cocked, eavesdropping on their conversation. I had to question both of them after my team won, about details.

This is a recipe for a ham and cheese sandwich dipped in egg and milk as for French toast and results in a mouth-watering luncheon dish you will make for your hungry bunch at lunch.

FRANK'S LUNCH "SPECIAL"
(Ham and cheese sandwiches — French toasted)

8 slices fresh bread (white or 60 per cent whole wheat
4 slices cooked ham (to fit bread)
4-6 slices ready-sliced Swiss or Cheddar cheese (sufficient to cover bread slices)
Mayonnaise (genuine — for spreading slices)
1 large egg
¼ cup milk
¼ tsp. salt
4 tbsps. butter.

Place the 8 slices bread in two rows on your counter. Spread half of them with mayonnaise. Cover each unspread half first with slice of cooked ham, then slice of Swiss or Cheddar cheese, cutting extra strips from another slice of cheese, to completely cover ham. Cover with spread slices and press together gently. Cut each in halves or quarters. In shallow bowl beat egg with milk and salt to mix. Dip each sandwich in egg - milk mixture for about 30 seconds, turning them over to soak each side. Have ready heavy or electric frying pan containing butter melted until pale gold (see below). Let dipped sandwiches drip a moment over bowl, then transfer to hot pan and fry at medium heat until rich gold on bottom. Turn over and brown other side. Serve at once.

NOTES: 1) Add 1 tbsp. butter to pan for each double sandwich.

2) This is an excellent luncheon dish for you girls who are forever asking "Whatever can I serve for lunch. My husband comes home every day-at noon."

3) I liked the white bread sandwich with Swiss cheese best. Next liked the white bread sandwich with Cheddar slices best.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Son: "You're absolutely wrong. You don't know what you're talking about. Just check the facts and you won't make such statements."

Father: "Don't you dare speak to me like that. If I talked like that to my father, he would have thrown me out of the house."

Today's teen-agers have definite views on world affairs and are likely to assert themselves strongly under stress. If they're not always wise and considerate, be patient. Their good training will come through as they mature.

Successful Living

Girl Wants Date with Sister's Ex-boy Friend

Dear Doris: My sister used to go with this guy. The trouble is I would like to go out with him and he won't let me if he could come down home Saturday night, but my sister is having her present boy friend down.

My sister would be awful mad at me. She would likely tell someone how awful I am.

This guy is going to phone and ask me again. What am I to do? Go out with him, or say no, I can't go out with you? — Troubled and Unsure

Dear Troubled: (1) How much older than you, is he?

(2) Do you care enough to stand any embarrassment which might be caused?

(3) Are he and your sister still friends?

I'd suspect he'd be better left alone. But if he is near your age, if you like him heaps and your sister no longer cares about him, why not talk to her about it?

Dear Doris: Having had a child out of wedlock, I thought I had a problem, until I visited some friends of mine — a married couple in their early 30's whom I hadn't seen for a few years. Whatever happened to those once good people, I don't know.

Now they are both alcoholics and she is taking drugs as well. They both work but are in danger of losing their house. Their children walk the streets and are exposed to awful language and behavior at home.

I'd like to help them but their problem is much worse than mine was, and I think they need a trained person. — Worried Friend.

Dear Worried: How right you are! Cravings for drugs or alcohol can't be settled by a well - meant kind word. These things are diseases, with both physical and mental health affected, radically.

What's more, the victims must reach the point where they ask for help before it can be given. But you can report neglected children to your child care service. In Belleville this is the Children's Aid Society of Belleville and Hastings County, 43 Moira Street West.

Dear Doris: Is it proper for a widow dressed in all black to wear a necklace of pearls at her husband's burial? How many strings may it contain? Please clear this up for me. — Many Thanks

Dear Many: Yes, one single strand of pearls is ok for wear with mourning.

Better still, to my mind, is our modern custom of wearing no black at all. Helps the mourner, as well as friends, to cheer up.

Confidential to "Herbert's Wife": If your better, is serious, I'd appreciate your signing it with your correct name and address, and enclosing a five-cent-stamped, self-addressed envelope for a private reply.

BOBBI CLARK

Do you wonder why the people you care about act as they do? Let Doris shed light on your particular human problem. And remember I like a stamped envelope!

Ann Landers

Husband's Boorishness Causes Embarrassment

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I just read the letter from the wife who felt "left out" because her husband refused to remove his partial plate in her presence. Please tell her to count her blessings.

ANN LANDERS

My husband has a bridge . . . three front teeth, right in the middle. Clyde will remove this any place, any time, in front of anybody. It doesn't matter if we are in a restaurant, at his boss's home or at the speaker's table honoring a distinguished member of the community. Whenever Clyde's teeth get uncomfortable he pops out his bridge, removes particles of food . . . and the rest of the world can go hang.

I've told him he presents a most unappetizing sight and to please cut it out. His response is, "If people don't like it they can look at something else." Will you kindly publish my letter. Maybe if my husband sees himself in the paper he will change his ways. — WIFE OF A PERFORMER.

DEA RWIFE: Don't expect miracles. If Clyde refuses to keep his teeth in his head for his wife, he surely won't pay any attention to me. An orchid to you, my dear, for your ability to tolerate his abominable manners. And skunk cabbage to Clyde for his boorishness.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am 22 years old, and have two small children. The problem is my lack of self-control. I crave the attention of every man who treats me halfway decently. Three wives and 1 wife and two were husbands of my close friends.

I am married to a wonderful guy who really does love me. We married young (I was only 17), which may be part of my problem. He would never stand for it if he knew what I was doing. Please help me before I end up on the street, with no husband, no children and no marriage. — AFRAID.

* * *

DEAR AFRAID: Yours is a pathetic story and one which I have heard many times before. It may be that you did not receive the parental love you needed as a child and these shabby love-substitutes are desperate attempts to be close to someone.

You are sick girl and I hope you will get professional help at once. Don't delay. The stakes are mighty high.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This is one letter I am going to mail. You have no idea how many others I have written in my mind, enumerating all the real and imagined injustices and indignities committed against me. These masterpieces to Ann Landers are usually composed during some exhausting or unsatisfying activity as washing a sink full of dirty dishes, bathing a herd of screaming kids, or preparing a feast for a pack of ungrateful in-laws.

All that adrenalin surging through my veins could be very damaging. But the therapeutic value of my mental letters to Ann Landers is incalculable.

Them, of course, when I read your column and see the tragic and heart-breaking problems other people are having, my problems seem insignificant by comparison, and I feel ashamed. So, thank you, Ann Landers. My heart is grateful. — MRS. D.

DEAR MRS. D.: Thank you. So is mine. Readers such as you give me a real lift.

How Many Times a Day Do You Say

PARDON?

The world is full of wonderful sounds. And full of people who miss them rather than admit that they're hard of hearing. They won't realize that they make their problem far more obvious by NOT wearing a hearing aid than by wearing one. Modern hearing aids can be made to tiny and so inconspicuous that no one need ever notice them.

If you even suspect that you may need professional advice — please don't wait. Your hearing is far too precious. We'll be happy to arrange an appointment for you any time and (should it be necessary) to show you a wide selection of modern hearing aids and modern, trouble-free batteries to power them.

The wonderful thing about Dry Rye is the fact that it makes every other ordinary rye taste unusual.

That's how different the taste of Grand Prix is.

You'll suddenly realize that Grand Prix is not an old whisky with a new slogan.

You'll know it is a new whisky with a new taste. A dry taste. A full rye with every shred of sweetness removed.

When you try Grand Prix it could make your favourite rye taste unusual.

Or: Grand Prix could become your favourite rye.

Arthritis Society Plans Spring Events

The Belleville Women's Auxiliary of the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society has held a series of meetings at the homes of Mrs. A. W. Hume, Miss Hilda Collier, Mrs. Francis Bennett and Mrs. W. A. Gault in preparation for their annual rummage sale. The event will be held at the Legion Hall, May 26. Mrs. Gault is convener and in charge of collection of donations.

Miss Gladys H. MacDonald, president, announced that a pair of Lofi Strand crutches had been purchased for an arthritic patient who has returned from the rheumatic disease unit at Wellesley Hospital, Toronto.

An important part of the Auxiliary's work is the visiting program. Mrs. J. N. Hartt has taken charge of visiting a family living in the country and was accompanied on her last visit by Mrs. J. D. Empson.

Mrs. Jessie David spoke of the work done by Meals on Wheels in providing a weekly hot meal for shut-ins in their homes and for those who can be transported to the luncheon club held in various churches.

The Auxiliary is planning an outing for the patients during the summer months.

TALKING IT OVER

DARTMOUTH, N.C. (CP) — Discussions on woman's role in the world were held at the April Baptist conference for women here. More than 280 delegates heard Mrs. Abner Langley of Moncton speak on the topic, which was followed by a "speak your mind" session.

June Callwood Speaks at Centennial Luncheon

A champion of the new morality mounted a blunt and breezy attack on Victorian conventions yesterday at the centennial dessert luncheon of Bridge St. United Church Women.

June Callwood, journalist, TV and radio panelist and mother of four, sent old concepts reeling as she told an audience of about 200 women in Bridge St. Church that:

This is an age of morality and teenagers are leading the way toward a better standard of values; fidelity after marriage is more important than virginity before; yesterday's virtue is a healthy state of mind; exhibitionists are un-Christian; most women's group ignore their community's most pressing needs.

"Teenagers today live a life of commitment," Miss Callwood said. "They are leading a moral revolution which permits dissent while deploring the casual bigotry of the adult world. The new morality depends on harmony and repose and demands a sense of self-worth. A person with no respect for himself feels none for others. Rules of behavior are contrary to morality.

"The biggest adventure is exploring yourself. Young people should opt out for a while to consider their values. Modern youth seeks beauty, unlike the older generation that has given up the battle."

For this reason, Miss Callwood assured her listeners, a sojourn in Yorkville is a harmless adventure "for those whose characters are not half dissolved before they go." At the same time she called for youth hostels as half-way houses for young adventurers fleeing the family nest.

The speaker called for a re-examination of conventional sex morality. Sex morality, she said, involves concern, sincerity, compassion and kindness. It is not a matter of popularity, release from anger or loneliness, or a way to spite mother.

"The promiscuous child comes from a home where she has been disregarded," she asserted. "For the unfound-raising groups" Miss Callwood goodly chided the majority of them for "areas of concern that languish because you don't know about them — you should be put in touch."

Most pressing community needs today, she said are day care centres for children of working mothers, youth hostels, prison reform, larger and improved parole, counselling and vocational guidance services. She proposed day care centres operated in high schools, where students could learn now neglected subjects like child psychology and informally relationships. A student given an opportunity to learn at first hand of the needs and responsibility of child-care will develop a new respect for her own sexuality.

Miss Callwood was introduced by Mrs. Gordon Lockhis and thanked by Mrs. Ralph Walsh. Mrs. D. G. Williams, president of Bridge St. UCW, was chairman for the event and Mrs. H. M. Davis said grace. Mrs. Dorador Maddocks was luncheon room convener, assisted by Mrs. J. C. Anderson.

Following the luncheon guests were invited to patronize the sweet shoppe convened by Mrs. James Loynes and the flea market in charge of Mrs. Roy Jeffrey.

Bit of Divine Truth in Women Says Pope Paul

SUDBURY (CP) — The national president of the Roman Catholic Women's League of Canada said Wednesday Pope Paul told her women have a particular mission to perform in the field of social action.

Mrs. H. T. Donihee, who had a private audience with the Pope last year, was speaking to the two-day annual convention of the league's Sault Ste. Marie diocese council.

Mrs. Donihee, of Cornwall, said the Pope urged her to tell Canadian women they are needed.

"The Pope closed his message by saying there is hidden in women a bit of divine truth and goodness and beauty needed by the world," Mrs. Donihee said.

Women's Institute

QUINTE WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The May meeting of the Quinte Women's Institute was held in the Memorial Hall, Madoc, by E. with a large attendance.

Mrs. Jack Parrott, president, opened the meeting in the usual manner with a cordial welcome to all.

Mrs. Archie Greatrix, convener for citizenship took charge of the meeting and opened with an appropriate reading. The motto "The past gives us a goodly heritage, the present a compelling horizon, the future a beaconing-horizon" was given by Mrs. S. Sandercock.

Mrs. Fleming gave an interesting paper on citizenship. She described the many traditions of Canada; also the hardships of the first settlers, and of how the groups of the different nationalities make their contribution to the culture of Canada. This Centennial year of Confederation gives everyone a chance to see the advancement of the Canadian down through the years.

Mrs. Greatrix asked the members to tell of something special that they remembered about their Mothers.

Mrs. E. Denyes spoke of her trip to the Expo during the past week.

Lunch was served by the committee, Mrs. A. Greatrix, Mrs. E. Denyes, Mrs. E. Sandercock, Miss A. Docter.

Leather Guild President Wins Award in Toronto

The ancient art of leathercraft, now enjoying an enthusiastic revival, has brought new honor to Belleville. Mrs. Dorothy Harwood, president of the local Leather Guild, returned from the recent International Assembly of Leather Craftsmen in Toronto with the first craftsman award to come to the city. She won with a black Morocco handbag, stiffened with split hide and lined with batik Morocco.

The bag was her first entry in international competition, but Mrs. Harwood is no novice at the craft. Her interest in leather work began about 12 years ago and she has gone on to become an instructor at the Belleville Recreation Centre. Ten members of the Belleville Leather Guild meet there weekly to exchange ideas and practise new techniques. Their chosen field is a broad one. Besides tooling and carving they learn inlay, filigree work and dyeing. Materials are as varied as the animals that inhabit the earth. Kangaroo, ostrich, calf, lizard, seal, walrus and shark are some of the hides tanned into exotic leathers for craftsmens' use.

The Guild has two male members, reflecting the interest the hobby holds for men as well as women. Mrs. Joe Miles, spokesman for the group says half the participants at the International Assembly in Toronto were men. They tend to specialize in camera cases and decorative boxes.

Ever since the cavemen began to drape themselves in skins, man has used leather in a bewildering number of ways.

"The early coats of mail were leather doublets upon which rings were sewn," says Mrs. Miles. "When Marco Polo visited India he discovered bed coverlets made of delicate leathers."

Fashion designers have rediscovered leather for high-style garments. Collecting with their renewed interest is the growth of hobby guilds to foster the artistry of handworked leather.

Mrs. Harwood has been the moving spirit behind the Belleville group, visiting exhibition and workshops and returning with slides and new knowledge to share with fellow enthusiasts.

His secret gin recipe isn't a secret anymore.

In 1769, a Highland Scotsman Alexander Gordon arrived in London. And started of all things, a gin distillery.

Soon Mr. Gordon was making the finest gin the English had ever tasted.

From a secret recipe known only to him. (And later, his ancestors).

200 years later, Gordon's Gin is still made exactly the same.

Only now, it's the largest selling gin in the world. Made in nine countries including Canada.

To make sure its wonderful taste never varied from place to place however, we had to let nine other people in on the secret.

We hope you won't hold it against us.

After all, Alexander Gordon didn't keep his secret either.

Professor Bell started our most precious tradition- helping people

Photograph by Gilbert H. Grosvenor, September 1916—©National Geographic Society

The photo shows Professor Bell 'communicating' with Charlie Crane, a Canadian boy both blind and deaf, who must talk with his fingers.

Today, you know Alexander Graham Bell as the inventor of the telephone. But to himself and his family, his profession was that of "Teacher of the Deaf."

In his search for better teaching methods, he probed the mechanics of speech. His investigation of the vibrations of the larynx — the creation and transmission of sound, of words — led him to invent what we now know as the telephone. It was only incidental to his real life's work.

This work was to help people — particularly the handicapped. And that is a tradition which we at Bell Canada, do our very utmost to keep alive.

You'll find evidence of it in special telephones for the handicapped, in an artificial larynx for people without vocal cords, and in everything we do to help you communicate with one another.

Mr. Meltzer on Real Estate
"What's Your Problem"

By BERNARD C. MELTZER

The column has received a considerable volume of mail from tenants who are complaining that they are unable to recover their security deposit. The writer has investigated and finds that in certain areas, this reprehensible practice is becoming common. Therefore, the writer is now recommending stronger measures as a cure.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I have a problem coming up and it will cost me $100. Apparently, I will be unable to do anything to prevent the loss.

When I signed a one - year lease last September, I gave the rental agent a one-month security deposit ($100) as required. In talking to other tenants, I find that they never get their money back. The agent always finds reasons for not returning the deposit.

His standard reply is, "If you don't like what I'm doing, you can sue me." As if to prove his point, he shows one of your columns wherein you advise that it is uneconomical and not prudent to sue for small sums of money.

Checking, I find that not giving tenants back their security deposits is quite common in our city. From your vast experience, surely you can think of some way of overcoming this reprehensible practice.—Mr. L.

ANSWER: Apparently, the practice of not refunding security deposits or partially refunding these deposits is becoming common in certain areas. The small sums of money involved make it difficult to take legal action.

It has always been my policy that when one anticipates trouble in negotiations, that switching to the offence is the best defence. Accordingly, I would advise clients faced with this problem to take the following action:

If, for example, one has given a one-month security deposit and intends to vacate the apartment at the end of the lease term, the rental agent should be notified at the beginning of the last month that the rent for the last month will not be paid as it is covered by the security deposit.

The shoe is now shifted to the other foot. It is no longer a question of asking for money back. If the rental agent thinks that certain alleged damages items should offset the deposit, he must now ask the tenant for the money and receive his approval.

The agent may bluster and threaten. Merely tell him that he has the rent for the month. If he should proceed to make an illegal levy on your personal property, or in any other way prohibit you from using or vacating the apartment, you are prepared to sue him for thousands of dollars which represent your estimate of the real and corollary damages result i g from his actions. Also, tell him you are prepared to file a complaint with the local real estate board.

My experience has been that the above course of action almost always works. The agent potentially now has much to lose. It is no longer a case of his facing an unimportant law suit for a small sum of money.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I needed a four-bedroom, two-bath house with a two-car garage. I asked a broker to find me such a property. After searching for three weeks, he found another broker was offering such a property for sale. I bought the property and moved in.

I thought I had cleaned up all the bills until I received one for $300 from the broker. When I inquired, he said the bill was for services in connection with his finding the house. Should I pay the $300? — Mrs. N.S.

ANSWER: I would say you don't owe the broker any finder's fee. According to real estate practice, the broker received half a commission as a co-operating broker from the sales agent. This is the customary method of reimbursing a broker. However, if the broker was acting as your agent only and did not participate in the sales commission, then he is entitled to his fee.

He should have specifically informed you of his relationship, and your obligation to pay such a fee, prior to your signing of the agreement of sale. I would say that this is simply a case of a broker trying to extract an additional fee.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: A contractor goofed! He was supposed to bulldoze trees from a lot in the next block. He confused the address and stripped my lot bare of trees. He was apologetic and told me to enter a claim with his insurance company. Please tell me how I fix the amount of money to ask for. — Mr. S.

ANSWER: The amount of money you should claim and to which you are rightfully entitled is the difference between the fair market value of your lot with the trees, before the contractor touched it, and the fair market value of your lot stripped clean of trees. A real estate appraiser can give you those two figures.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: The bank has the mortgage papers, which I signed, and I want them back. They won't give them to me!

When I settled for the house last month, I was confused and walked out without all my papers. I have since received my deed, my water sheets and other papers but not the mortgage.

When I went to the bank and asked them, they refused in give it to me. Threatened to sue, but even that did not produce any results. What else can I do to get the mortgage back from the bank? — Mr. E. R.

Mr. Meltzer welcomes your letters and comments. Unfortunately he is unable to enter into personal correspondence with readers, but will attempt to answer as many letters as possible through his column.

'All Systems Go' Deals With Canadian Aviation

OTTAWA (CP)—The government is determined Canada will be a country to be reckoned with in the aerospace future. For that reason it has spent $30,000-plus on the department's first promotional movie film.

All Systems Go is a quick, non-commercial survey of the current accomplishments of Canadian industry in the aviation, electronics and space field. It features bush-pilot and skit-wing aircraft, sophisticated navigation equipment, and even ends up with a pitch for the day when man lands on the moon—on Canadian feet.

The film will be shown at the Paris air show opening May 26. It was previewed Wednesday night for Industry Minister Drury and industry representatives taking part in the trade show.

The film, Mr. Drury said, shows the dynamism of the aerospace industry in Canada. He demonstrated capacity, sophistication, and range of facilities from aviation medicine to flose instrumentation.

David Golden, president of Air Industries Association of Canada, said the industry, employing 44,000 people and producing $800,000,000 worth of goods and services in 1966, must expand abroad in the years ahead.

The Canadian market is limited, but with lower tariffs promised by the Kennedy round of negotiations Canada's aerospace industry has a good opportunity to grow overseas if it shows the initiative.

More than a score of companies and government agencies will participate in Canada's exhibit at the Paris air show.

Mr. Golden said he had nothing to do with preparation of the film, but after seeing it he pronounced it excellent.

Four-year-old Death

Capital Murder Trial Witness Claims He Helped Dispose of Body

TORONTO (CP) — A witness at the capital murder trial of Wayne Ford testified Wednesday that four years ago Ford told him he had killed his mother.

Ronald Walter Wafli said that he and Ford, both 16 at the time, then bundled a woman's body into a crate in Ford's suburban Willowdale home.

Wafli, now 20 and married with two children, said Ford displayed a revolver and told him he would not hesitate to kill again if he did not keep his mouth shut.

Wafli and Ford were high school classmates at the time of mid-to-do Minnie Ford's disappearance four years ago, at the 1963 Victoria Day weekend. Ford was charged last fall after the finding in Lake Conchichimet of a woman's body claimed by the Crown to be that of his 55-year-old mother.

The husky 20-year-old went on trial for capital murder Wednesday but Crown counsel Lloyd Graburn told the all-male jury the evidence would be directed at a non-capital conviction. He said it does not disclose a sufficient element of planning or deliberation for a capital offence.

Mr. Graburn also told the jury the Crown alleges Ford killed his mother during an argument in their kitchen and held "a form of open house" in the home after he Wafli and another youngster dumped the crated body into Lake Conchichimet.

The prosecutor said they had carried the body to the lake in the family Cadillac which had been a "bone of contention" between the son and his widowed mother as the result of a series of accidents with Ford at the wheel.

However there was no direct evidence Wednesday as to how the mother had been killed or the body in the Willowdale home disposed of. Wafli was in the middle of his story when the Supreme Court under Mr. Justice D. R. Morand adjourned until today.

Testifying under the protection of the Canada Evidence Act—which means the evidence cannot be used against himself—Wafli said he and Ford were driving around in the Cadillac just before the 1963 holiday "looking for girls or something like that" when Ford suddenly told him he had "killed his mother and wanted me to help."

He said Ford reached under the seat of the car and showed him a .38-calibre revolver at which "I said something to the effect "all right."

Wafli said that in the kitchen he saw a body under a red-stained sheet and Ford asked: "You want to see her?"

"I said no but he walked over and pulled the sheet off anyway," Wafli said the woman's body in a plain grey dress had the head covered with a blue plastic or leather bag. He did not at any time identify it as Mrs. Ford's.

"I didn't feel very well" Wafli said "and I believe I was sick in the sink." Later he vomited again in the cellar sink after he and Ford had carried the body downstairs.

Wafli said Ford then got some scouring powder and the two cleaned the kitchen floor and the stairs. Ford took off a pair of white pants he was wearing over his jeans and wiped the floor with them then put them under a dresser.

Wafli said Ford put a doormat in the bottom of the plywood box "to soak up any blood" and the two put the body in folding up the knees and bending the head down to make it fit. Ford threw in the blood-stained sheet and then put a 10-foot length of clear green plastic garden hose and tied up the box with it.

"We went upstairs into Wayne's bedroom" Wafli continued. "He said me I'd better keep my mouth shut and if I didn't he'd drag me in all the way up to my neck and he's already killed once and wouldn't hesitate to do it again."

"I gathered he meant what he was saying and wasn't fooling around or kidding" Wafli added.

Another Wednesday witness Mrs. Meikam Bred sister of Mrs. Ford said: "Wayne was a weakness with her."

The sister said Mrs. Ford had been married for 10 years and had given up hope of having children. When Wayne was born she was 39.

"If she had had other children it might have been different" the sister added.

Absentees Enable Liberals to Survive Attack on Government's Milk Policy

OTTAWA (CP)—The minority Liberal government won its fourth non-confidence vote of the new parliamentary session Wednesday against opposition ranks depleted by absentees.

The count was 107 to 90 on a motion by Lewis Brand (PC—Saskatoon) criticizing the government for not guaranteeing farmers the $3.10 a hundredweight for manufacturing milk demanded by farm organizations. The subsidized price now is $4.75.

Among non - Liberals, only H. A. Olson (SC—Medicine Hat) and independent J. A. Mongrain (Trois-Rivieres) voted with the government. Against the motion were 67 Conservatives, 18 New Democrats, six Creditistes and independent Maurice Allard (Sherbrooke).

Although it was a Conservative motion, 25 of the official Opposition's 95 MPs were absent for the government-leaning vote.

Five of the 21 New Democrats were absent as were four of the five Social Credit MPs and two of the eight Creditistes. Liberals hold 127 seats in the 265-member house. There are three independents and six vacancies.

The vote came on the sixth day of the throne speech debate, which must end by Friday, according to house time rules.

The government's dairy policy has been bitterly criticized for months in the Commons and the Conservative motion was expected to get substantial opposition support for the vote. An administration loss might have forced an election.

In debate before the motion was put to a vote, Jack Horner (PC — Acadia) said farmers have proven their efficiency has increased at a greater rate than any other sector of the economy but that they lacked bargaining power at the marketing place.

"We find ourselves in an affluent society, at a time when our economy is booming, and yet every segment of the agricultural industry is dissatisfied," Mr. Horner said.

Mr. Horner also criticized the government for failing to enact in full the massive transportation bill passed at the last session of Parliament.

Davie Fulton (PC—Kamloops) said the average Canadian feels is "crushing weight of government on his back," principles him down and freezing him in his present position.

The government had not established priorities and acted on such modern problems as delinquency, lack of housing, transportation and pollution.

It also had made a mess of everything it touched, Mr. Fulton charged. Most recent case was in the cabinet where public statements by Privy Council Walter Gordon had been in conflict with stated government policy on Vietnam.

Debate on the throne speech also continued Wednesday in the Senate.

Wallace McCutcheon (PC—Ontario) said implications of the government's legislative plans set out in the throne speech frighten him.

The speech showed that the government planned to intrude into almost every area of human endeavor, Senator McCutcheon said.

He said many of the ideas in it were warmed over and that one "old corpse" dug up was the earlier - suggested Canada development corporation.

The Ontario senator, a party leadership candidate, called on the government to aim at reducing taxes although "absolute reduction of taxes is probably impossible in a growing country."

PM Spars With Diefenbaker, Lewis Over Gordon's Views

OTTAWA (CP)— Prime Minister Pearson said his ministers have reaffirmed at a cabinet meeting their confidence in the wisdom of the government's Vietnam policy.

The prime minister sparred for several minutes with Opposition Leader Diefenbaker and David Lewis (NDP — York South) about the cabinet's consideration Wednesday of a breach of cabinet solidarity on Vietnam policy by Privy Council President Walter Gordon last weekend.

Mr. Pearson said the cabinet ministers not only reaffirmed their confidence in the Vietnam policy but agreed to do or say nothing to make the objective of the policy more difficult to achieve.

In a speech last weekend, Mr. Gordon criticized the U.S. policy on Vietnam, thus going against the government's policy of not condemning or supporting either side in the war.

Mr. Diefenbaker initially protested against Mr. Pearson taking the "unusual" step of telling reporters what took place in Wednesday's cabinet session, called to consider Mr. Gordon's breach of the traditional cabinet solidarity on policy.

Speaker Lucien Lamoureux stopped the Opposition leader from reading into the record quotations from Mr. Pearson's statement to reporters after the cabinet meeting.

Mr. Diefenbaker maintained Mr. Pearson's action was contrary to constitutional practice. The prime minister retorted that there were plenty of precedents for a prime minister revealing the subject discussed in cabinet, though not the details of the discussion.

He then reported cabinet agreement on Vietnam policy, adding that Mr. Diefenbaker would be the first to congratulate the government in the reaffirmation of cabinet solidarity.

Mr. Lewis asked whether the cabinet's action meant Mr. Gordon had been repudiated by the cabinet.

Mr. Pearson said Mr. Lewis can draw his own conclusions.

Mr. Pearson agreed, at the request of Eric Winkler (PC—Grey North), to table in the Commons copies of his statements to reporters after the cabinet meeting.

Dief Says Tories Have Suicidal Urge

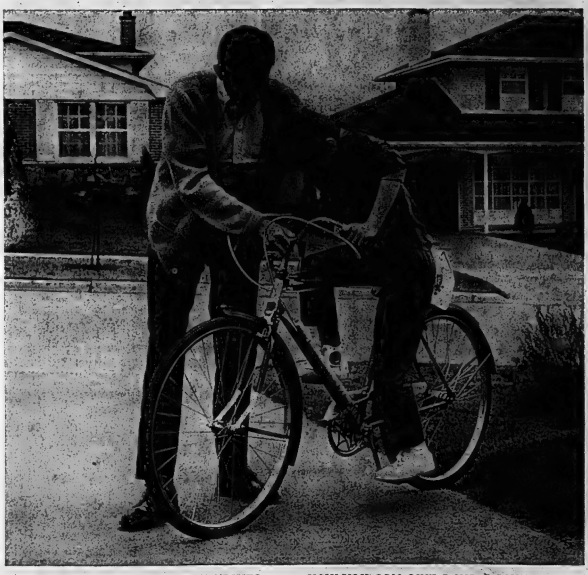
OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Diefenbaker says the Conservative party must find a solution to its tendency toward self-destruction.

In a speech Wednesday to a Conservative women's club in suburban Rockcliffe Park, Mr. Diefenbaker referred briefly to the party's leadership convention set for September at Toronto. He did not say whether he would be a candidate.

"The Conservative party must find a cure for its incorrigible capacity for self-destruction," the national leader said.

Mr. Diefenbaker did not elaborate but he apparently was referring to divisions in the party on the leadership question.

He told the women also that Privy Council President Walter Gordon should have been removed from the cabinet over his statement last weekend on Vietnam.



"Gordon should have been fired as soon as he made his statement last weekend on Vietnam."

"The Conservative leader has said in the commons, as well as outside, that Mr. Gordon was breaking cabinet solidarity by expressing views opposed to government policy.

Mr. Diefenbaker charged also that the Liberal government is leading Canada toward a republican form of government.

"The culmination of present Liberal policies is a republic," he said. Removal of the red ensign, unification of the armed forces, permitting the provinces to opt out from federal programs were moves in that direction.

Because of a trick of nature which causes some kinds of fruits to mature at the same time, the Indian population may be knee-deep in mangoes, bread-fruit or bananas for a few days, unable to eat all the food. Nixon Says Education Ministry Costly Bureaucratic Nightmare

TORONTO (CP) — Liberal ease municipal taxation.

Leader Robert Nixon said Wednesday William Davis could have saved the legislature a lot of time if he had tabled his speech introducing education department spending estimates.

Mr. Nixon said the speech that took the education minister one hour and 50 minutes to read could have been tabled as part of the department's annual report.

Mr. Davis triple - spaced speech covered 115 pages.

Despite its length, Mr. Nixon said the speech did not discuss the most important issue — the equitable distribution of education costs.

Mr. Nixon has maintained the provincial government should pay 80 per cent of the costs of secondary education instead of about 50 per cent to

Mr. Nixon charged that the education department was "a bureaucratic nightmare, a self-enlarging organization that is adding to costs."

He also accused the New Democratic Party of misleading the public by implying that much of the revenue needed for the province to assume more education costs could come from a new resources tax.

Premier John Robarts asked Mr. Nixon where he would get the needed revenue.

"I just want to know where the 80 per cent is going to come from . . . I've been hearing about it for months and I still haven't found any solution," said Mr. Robarts.

Mr. Nixon replied that the natural growth of the province would provide the needed revenue even without structural tax changes.

In other legislature developments:

—Energy Resources Minister John Simonett announced the government will pay half the cost of removing a sand bar in the Beaver River blamed for flooding that caused widespread damage in the Thornbury area this spring.

—Mr. Simonett said Attorney-General Arthur Wishart has asked Ottawa that a hearing into a Trans - Canada Pipe Lines Ltd. application for permission to build a second natural gas pipeline through Northern Ontario include consideration of a routing along the north shore of Lake Superior.

—Rene Brunelle, lands and forests minister, said the government has been negotiating with the Algoma Central Railway toward purchase of two townships in the Wawa area now owned by the firm.

—Commercial Affairs Minister Leslie Townzen said the Ontario Securities Commission was not consulted before the Toronto Stock Exchange announced an increase in commission rates Tuesday.

2 SERVICEMEN KILLED

ADEN (Reuters)— Two British armed servicemen were killed and six others injured in a fresh outbreak of anti-British violence in Aden Wednesday. An Arab was shot to death by British troops. The two servicemen killed were shot as they walked through the Crescent area of this British colony in South Arabia while off duty.

Bishops Can Guide Catholic Press But Must Not Get Control—Editor

TORONTO (CP)—Douglas J. Roche, editor of Edmonton's Western Catholic Reporter, said Wednesday Roman Catholic publications show a new willingness to tackle controversial issues and this sometimes brings them into conflict with bishops who want to control what is printed.

"To the bishops we must say: Guidance, yes; control, no," Mr. Roche told delegates to the Catholic Press Association's annual convention.

Catholic journalists must persuade church leaders that full press freedom will contribute to the ultimate good of the church, he said.

"We must help those in authority so become as convinced as we are that the proper functioning of the press requires a degree of liberty and discretion of editors that is foreign to many of the traditional attitudes of Catholic leaders."

James A. Doyle of New York, executive director of the association, told the convention that a paradox has been created by increase in in-depth reporting and more probing of issues in church publications.

Msgr. J. G. Hanley of the Canadian Register agreed.

"Too many people formed the impression that a Catholic publication was a house organ that went in for apple-polishing and swept everything unfavorable in the church under the rug," said Mr. Hanley.

"When we publish the far-out views of some individual—views which we don't necessarily endorse but feel we should report —some readers get very upset and cancel their subscriptions."

Landreville Decision Is Likely Next Week

OTTAWA (CP)— Prime Minister Pearson said he hopes there will be an announcement next week on whether the government will act to remove Mr. Justice Leo Landreville from Ontario Supreme Court.

Replying to a Commons question Wednesday from Opposition Leader Diefenbaker, the prime minister said the government this week has been considering the case of the former Sudbury mayor, whose dealings in shares of Northern Ontario Natural Gas in the mid - 1950s have been severly criticized.

Although he was acquitted of municipal corruption charges, the Ontario Justice's conduct was seriously questioned by the Law Society of Upper Canada, the body that governs the province's legal profession, and a judicial inquiry.

A parliamentary committee studied the Landreville case and recommended the judge's removal from the bench.

Provincial high court judges are appointed by Ottawa and hold office "during pleasure." They can be removed only by an address from both the Commons and Senate to the Governor - General.

Mr. Justice Landreville has asked to appear at the bar of the Commons to defend himself.

Mr. Diefenbaker has accused the government of delaying a decision because of the May 29 federal byelection in Sudbury.

Portuguese Gunmen Rob Bank of Million

LISBON (Reuters)—Four gunmen pulled off a million-dollar bank robbery Wednesday and cut telephone lines to delay word of their crime.

The gunmen got away with 29,000,000 escudos (about $1,080,000) from a seaside resort branch of the Bank of Portugal at Figueira da Foz, about 124 miles north of Lisbon, as it was about to close, police said.

SPORTS SLICES

By Geo. H. Carver
Sports Editor

Down Boston way the buffs of the hockey Bruins are atingle with the news. A new conversational piece will garnish the Saturday night binges of baths, brown bread and baked beans.

Even the bayshore lobsters are all cracked up over it.

It has seeped into the confines of Nob Hill where the Cabots and Lodges only speak to supernatural beings. The pretty boys on the Common are giggling over it.

For "Fast Eddie Shack, baby" is coming to town. The erstwhile darling of Toronto fandom has doffed the blue-and-white for the bonrahis of the Bruins. He is one of the big foundation blocks of a hoped-for new Boston team now being built by master mason Milt Schmidt.

It is not to tumble-down for the colorful Shack. Apparently he is delighted with the move for he told Coach Harry Sinden at the recent Oshawa Sports Celebrities dinner while some 1,200 listened:

"Harry, boss," he gurgled, "When I was with the Leafs they won four Stanley Cups. Tell Boston I'm coming and to get the cup manila ready."

The move means new life for Shack at least in the Big Six. It is no secret that Punch Imlach would not protect him. And Fast Eddie will be perfectly at home in the Boston Garden where the rabble-rousers are kings.

Earlier in a surprise deal Schmidt acquired Phil Esposito, Ken Hodge and Jack Bownfield from the Black Hawks for the Bruins husky defenceman Gil Marotte, Pit Martin and Jack Norris, a goalie.

The deal breaks up the Hawk line of Bobby Hull, Chicas Maki and Esposito but rumors out of Chicago that all was not honey and roses between the Hawks general manager Tommy Ivan and Esposito. It was stated that Coach Billy Reay was displeased with him, too after the Hawks bowed to the Maple Leafs in the Stanley Cup semi-final.

With the acquisition of Marotte, the Hawks are bulging behind the blue-line. The hiff-hash-and-bang brigade now includes besides Marotte, Pierre Pilote, Pat Stapleton, Doug Jarrell, Matt Ravlich and Ed Van Impe. They're sure to protect the first three and possibly five.

But the snag here is that clubs can only protect 11 players and a goalkeeper. So if the Hawks guard five defencemen that leaves only six forwards.

A Montreal columnist guesses the Hawks will protect Stan Mikita, Bobby Hull, Ken Wharram, Doug Mohns, Eric Nesterenko and either Dennis Hull or Chicas Maki. But Lou Angotti is very popular with Chicago fans and they may decide to protect him. What then happens to Pit Martin?

While the Boston fans are agiee over the Shack news, some wonder why Schmidt let Marotte go. The pre Bruins G.M. explained: "We hated to part with Marotte but to get something good you have to give something good. We're not worried about the Bruins defence. We have three youngsters in Oklahoma City who are only a year away from the NHL."

In Toronto the Leafian brass feel, the Shack for Murray Oliver trade is a good one for the club. While Oliver was no great scoring shaker with the Bruins he has a fine record and should be good hockey clay for that master potter Imlach, since Red Kelly is retiring.

In answer to a number of readers' queries here's how the draft works. After a club protects 11 players it loses its 12th in the draft, but can protect its 13th. Then it loses its 14th but protects the 15th. Numbers 16, 17 and 18 are lost but 19 is protected. Then the club loses its 20th but protects the 21st. From then on its add one and lose one.

Birds, Bosox Bats Blast Ten Homers

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

Boog Powell is building up a following as a philosopher.

"Just swing, that's my philosophy," the Baltimore first baseman said Wednesday night.

FRANK ROBINSON

"But swing hard in case you hit it."

Well, the boys were swinging hard in the Oriole-Boston Red Sox game, and they were hitting it.

Ten home runs sailed out of Fenway Park — seven by Baltimore and three by the Red Sox—in the game won 12-8 by the Orioles.

The 10 homers were one shy of the major league record for two teams in a game; Baltimore's four blasts in the seventh were one short of the mark for homers by a team in one inning and the total of five in seventh tied the record for homers by two teams in an inning.

In all, there were 21 homers hit in the American League Wednesday night, with five coming in Cleveland Indian's 8-7 victory over New York Yankees. Detroit Tigers crushed Washington Senators 8-1, California Angels topped Kansas City Athletics 7-3 and Chicago White Sox edged Minnesota Twins 5-4 in other AL action.

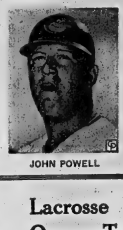
There was a stiff wind blowing out generally from home plate in Fenway. The homer blaze started in the very first inning when Paul Blair of the Orioles hit a solo homer and Boston's Don Demeter connected with two on.

Brooks Robinson homered with none on in the second and team-mate Frank Robinson did the same in the fourth. Carl Yastremski belted a two-run blast in the Boston fifth.

Then came the wild seventh. Andy Etchebarren hit a three-run shot and pinch hitter Sam Bowens followed with a solo belt. After another run scored on a pair of doubles, Powell connected with two aboard and Dave Johnson followed with another solo shot.

Yastremski concluded the barrage by homering with one on in the bottom of the inning.

Cleveland built up an 8-2 lead behind Leon Wagner's grand slam and Fred Whitfield's three-run homer and then held off the Yankees. Yanks got a three-run homer from Tom Tresh and a basel oaded walkup by Mickey Mantle, his 501st.



Willie Horton drove in three runs with a pair of homers and Jim Northrup hit a grand slam in leading Detroit past Washington.

California snapped a six-game losing streak with its victory over Kansas City. Rick Reichardt and Don Mincher each drove in two runs for the winners.

The White Sox beat Jim Kaat for the first time in 10 decisions dating back to Sept. 10, 1964.

Joel Horlen ran his record to 5-0 although he needed relief help.

Chicago wrapped up the game with three runs in the fourth. Harmon Killebrew drove in two Minnesota runs with a double and homer.

Fought From Memory

MONTREAL (CP)—Featherweight Wayne Boyce of Vancouver fought from memory for a half round Wednesday but recovered to score the most surprising win in 20 amateur boxing matches at the, Canadian championships.

The three - day tournament ends Friday with the crowning of champions in 10 weight classes and the selection of Canada's boxing team for the Pan American Games. Sixty competitors have entered from seven provinces.

Boyce, 17, seeking the 125-pound title his older brother Tommy won in 1965, was dropped to the canvas in the first round of his match with Ernie Leblanc of Moncton, N.B.

Boyce beat the count, rallied in the second then stopped the New Brunswicker with a volley of punches to the head and body early in the third and final round.

Tiger-Rouse Bout Assured

Garden Won't Bar Puerto Ricans

NEW YORK (AP) — A Dick Tiger-Roger Rouse light-heavyweight title bout was virtually set for September in Madison Square Gardens today as an arena official promised to bed up the special police dress for boxing shows considered controversial.

Matchmaker Teddy Brenner assured the champion from Nigeria at least $75,000 for the defence against Rouse, the No. 1 contender from Anaconda, Mont. Rouse had been guaranteed the next shot at the winner of last Tuesday night's Tiger-Jose Torres return.

Torres won a very close, split decision which touched off a 15-minute riot in the Garden.

In the aftermath of the bottle-throwing outbreak Tuesday in which 11 persons were injured, chairman Edwin B. Dooley of the New York athletic commission declared Wednesday "the Garden owes it to the public to give adequate protection to the public if it is to remain in the business of promoting fights under the commission's jurisdiction."

After talking to reporters, Dooley left to see Gov. Nelson Rockefeller. Dooley said the governor had requested a factual report of the riot, the second in 10 weeks and the third in 21 months in the famed arena following a main event featuring Puerto Rican - born fighters.

"We had extra police and we thought it was adequate based on 40 years of experience in the Garden," said Harry Markson, the Garden's director of boxing. "But if we need more we'll add more."

He denied a report that the Garden will bar Puerto Rican fighters from main events for a cooling off period. The AP had learned from a Garden source that this was planned.

"We're negotiating right now for a title fight between lightweight champion Carlos Ortiz and Ismael Laguna."

College Athletics

Grid Group Increased

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The Ontario - Quebec Athletic Association's football grouping will increase to six teams, largest in the college league's history, with the admittance of McMaster and the University of Waterloo in the fall of 1968.

Among other changes announced Wednesday by John Metras, chairman of the O-QAA's administrative council, is the addition of the University of Windsor to the hockey grouping and a realignment of the two basketball divisions, both effective in the 1968-69 season.

McMaster and Waterloo, now members of the 13-team Central Canada Intercollegiate Football Conference, will join Western, Toronto, Queen's and McGill in the O-QAA football League.

It is the first change in the O-QAA football grouping since 1953 when McMaster made a brief one-year's appearance.

Both McMaster and Waterloo will play in the newly-formed CCIFC during the 1967 season before joining the O-QAA football group the following fall.

With the addition of the University of Windsor, the O-QAA's hockey grouping will grow to 10 schools. Starting with the 1968-69 season, the 10 teams will be divided into two divisions.

The western division will be composed of Windsor, Western, Guelph, McMaster and Waterloo. The eastern division will consist of Toronto, Queen's, McGill, Montreal and Laval.

Braves, Cards

Catchers Connect For Win Clouts!

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Probably the guy on whom an extra inning baseball game is toughest is the poor catcher going up and down behind the plate, wearing all that heavy gear.

So Joe Torre and Tim McCarver, a couple of receivers, decided they'd rather not stick around for more than the regulation nine innings.

Torre, Atlanta's all - star catcher, cracked a leadoff homer in the bottom of the ninth, lifting the Braves to a 4-3 victory over New York Mets Wednesday night and McCarver came off the St. Louis bench and socked a leadoff homer in the ninth for a 3-2 triumph over Philadelphia Phillies.

For Torre it was home run No. 9 this season, tying him for the major league lead with team - mate Hank Aaron, who had a two-run shot against the Mets earlier.

McCarver's clutch hit shot was his third of the year and raised his batting average to .318.

In other games Wednesday, San Francisco Giants topped Chicago Cubs 4-3, Cincinnati Reds took Pittsburgh Pirates 3-1 and Los Angeles Dodgers zapped Houston Astros 7-0.

Aaron's two - run shot in the sixth inning had tied it for the Braves against young Tom Seaver, who bolped his own cause by driving two New York runs with three straight hits.

Left - handed hitting McCarver was on the bench today, the Preakness will have a record gross value of $182,000.

Post time Saturday will be 5:30 EDT with the race televised by the CBC and CBS from 5-5:45 p.m.

Left - handed hitting McCarver was on the bench against Southpaw Chris Short, who cruised through the first five innings, retiring 13 straight batters. But when right - handed Dick Farrell came on in relief, McCarver batted for John Romano opening the bottom of the ninth.

JOE TORRE

TIM McCARVER

Tito Fuentes two - out two-run double in the sixth inning carried the Giants past the Cubs. Mike McCormick won his fourth for the Giants with late hitting help from Frank Linzy. The first - place Reds won their fifth straight with Tony Perez driving in two runs and Sammy Ellis going all the way for his fourth victory.

The Dodgers run up a quick seven - run lead against Houston and it was more than enough for Don Sutton, who won his first game after four straight losses.

The Preakness

Proud Clarion 3-1 Second Choice!

BALTIMORE (AP) — Training race horses is nothing new for 53-year-old Jim Mahoney.

He's been around thoroughbreds about as long as he can remember—but he admits he's nervous.

The reason is, he is filling in for the ailing Loyd (Boo) Gentry as trainer of Kentucky Derby winner Proud Clarion.

Proud Clarion, who paid $62.20, for $2 after his one-length triumph in the Derby, is one of nine three - year - olds pointing for Saturday's 93rd running of the $150,000 - added Preakness, second and richest of the Triple Crown series which also includes the Derby and Belmont Stakes.

Gentry, who brought the Derby Dan Farm colt to his perfection for owner John Gelbraich, is in a New York hospital recovering from pneumonia. He won't be here for the 1 3-16 mile race which could mean $139,500 to the winner.

"I talk with Mr. Gentry every day and he tells me what he wants done with Proud Clarion," said Mahoney. "But I'll have to admit it's a bit nerve wracking to be personally responsible for such a good horse.

Despite his Derby-Victory, Proud Clarion was made the 3-to-1 co - second choice in the first betting line made by the track handicapper. He also quoted Damascus, the beaten Kentucky Derby favorite, at 5-1.

At the top of the list at 3-to-1, Pimlico's Blair Willkinson placed Mrs. Frances A. Genter's reconsible for such a good horse.

The Tracks

TORONTO (CP) — Speedy Lamest, winless in three starts this year after a brilliant season last year, won the featured Flying Ace purse by half a head over So War at Woodbine Raceway Wednesday.

With Frank Barroby riding, the six-year-old mare won a photo call with So War and Margabella to return $3.90 for a win ticket in a time of 1:10 3-5 for the six-furlong race.

It was Barroby's last race before serving a 10-day suspension for careless riding.

Commercial Ready To Go

The Belleville Commercial softball League met with the city Parks Board last night and settled the rental for Alemite Park to the satisfaction of both parties, according to a statement released by league president Bill Wallace this morning.

The two parties have been making offers and counter-offers for almost two weeks following the announcement of prices for use of Alemite Park this season. Rental of $8 for daylight and $16 for night games was the original rental ask.

Wallace's statement this morning says that the Commercial League will use the Park three nights per week. A single game will be played beginning at 6.30 each Monday and double-headers will be played each Tuesday and Wednesday, also beginning at 6.30.

This will be the only park used by the league in the city this season but two league entries from across the bay will play home games at Ameliasburg each Monday and Thursday. Game times there will be 8.00 p.m.

Despite the delay in being able to complete plans for the season, the Commercial League will open its schedule on Tuesday, May 23 with a 7.00 p.m. game.

The defending champion Stewart Warner team will play host to Black Diamond Glass in that game.

Pre-game entertainment is being planned for the opener and includes the A.N.A.F. Pipe Band and Gail Chapman's Majorettes. There will also be free gifts for the children and ticket draws.

The league has a meeting scheduled for the Armouries tonight at which time a schedule pick-he draws and other plans completed.

Letter to the Sports Editor

This, I am sure, is not the first nor will it be the last letter you will receive from your readers if your staff is allowed to write such articles as "Pinch Hitting" which appeared in your issue of May 16. I also don't doubt that I am one of the so called clique referred to, as I too round Mr. Ellis as one of my associates.

Unfortunately, the article is full of contradictions. Not have any one had been involved with all the facts, I have to use the article as my First it is highly inconceivable that one reporter could control an executive so no reason for poor.

To start with, I can't see anyone locally compromising Bob Temple. I think he gave two very good reasons for dropping his team: first, he had just got over a hectic hockey season and was weaned of any desire to be involved but, more important, he couldn't get the necessary players, having let it be handed worse out of town players who were not available.

Now he mentions six out of town games. This to me gives the majority of votes regarding any talent to the out of town teams. Consequently, any statements made by them regarding returning to B and D league, I have to feel, was not for the reasons stated in the article and after witnessing a few of the games last season, would be more apt to say that the off - casting more than left a taste to be desired, plus the fact that your paper has made quite an issue this past couple of years over the two local groups of officials locally is laughable.

About the Executive — may I suggest that the B and D is not the only group which has problems in the area. This is typical in all sports organizations. Everyone wants to play the game but no one wants the work of organization and, may I suggest, the reason for this lack of organizers is the fact that they do not get reimbursed for their labour and the abuse they are bound to take.

With all due respects to Harry Rollins, who obviously accepted the presidency as an afterthought, the towns attended the annual meeting with no prior thoughts to its elections and, consequently, had no recommendations to put forward. I'm assuming this again from the article, as I'm sure the reporter did, as I doubt if he attended this meeting either.

The fact that there is no liaison between the press and the B and D should be quite obvious. To start with the replacement last summer of Mr. Alexander as chief scorer and announcer at the Alemite Field culminated a private feud that had been going on for some time.

Being the kind of person Mr. Ellis is, there is not much in the way of sport he is not connected with especially in the minor brackets.

Getting back to league and sponsors; it should also be quite obvious that Belleville is not alone when a centre such as Tilgston obviously cannot have the necessary teams to form a league and should want to amalgamate into one league with Belleville. I would suggest that the first problem here is sponsorship. It's possible to count the old reliables on one hand and I get the impression that this is more of a Belleville problem. You only have to go a long way to dig up any more probables and this is not surprising with editorials such as the one in question.

Secondly, and I now refer to the statement from Bob Temple, if he found it necessary to try to import players, it must be very obvious there are not enough high calibre players in the city or, if as suggested, they are all part of the clique, may be Mr. Ellis will enter more than one team, although I doubt this, but remind you that the Zellis team which has been known as the juniors up until this year will not have the known his sponsorship for years, right up through the minors.

Consequently, I would like to suggest to you, articles concerning established players coaching in the minors to develop talent for our senior leagues would be more in line than this. If you could get the message to the over thirties that they have had their day, then I am sure we would have lots of players, organizers and, consequently, sponsors.

I would like to put the record straight, Mr. Ellis puts in hundreds of dollars each year into sports in this city; he puts in hundreds of hours annually acting in the following capacities: sec. treas. of the Belleville Minor Sports Association; a member of the Arena and Recreation Committee; he was more or less the mover in getting the Alemite Ball Field into what it is today; he sponsors junior softball, minor baseball, minor hockey and senior hockey; his business is a meeting place for all and sundry; and he is also a soft touch when his business can help in any way. How (a) person like this can be as he is the article makes him out to be, beyond me.

This brings to mind a saying I was brought up with, "If you can't say something good about a person, don't say anything."

Yours for Good Sport,
Fred Jones.

Leafs Stop Wings 6-2, Suns Split

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

While Toronto Maple Leafs and Rochester Red Wings split their International League doubleheader Wednesday, Buffalo Bisons edged a half-game closer to league-leading Rochester by nipping Syracuse Chiefs 3-1.

The Leafs won the opener 6-2, but faltered in the second game as Gene Brabender threw a seven-hitter at them and Dave May lashed his second home run of the season in a 3-2 Rochester victory.

In other action, Jacksonville Suns split a twin bill with Toledo Mud Hens, winning 4-3 before losing 6-5 and Columbus Jets bunched their hits early to defeat Richmond Braves 6-3.

Percival--AAU

Libel Suit Goes To Court

TORONTO (CP)—The dispute between Lloyd Percival, former director and head coach of the Don Mills Track Club, and the registration committee of the Amateur Athletic Union in Ontario moved into court Wednesday.

Percival, 53, began a libel action against the five AAU members, who form the committee, for their allegations that he gave stimulants and sedatives to his athletes to improve their performances.

He has charged the five with embarking lightly and indifferently on a phony trial and producing a false verdict that damaged his character and reputation.

The defendants are Fred Foot, coach of the East York Track Club, George Dennison, Jack Bradfield, Doreen Davies and Jesse Lightwood.

George Finlayson, Percival's lawyer, said Percival was not a member of the AAU and was subject to its jurisdiction. In any case, Percival denies ever giving any of his athletes drugs.

Lloyd D. Cadsby, counsel for the defendants, said he will try to prove Percival gave stimulants and sedatives to shot-putter Nancy McCredie, Canadian pentathlon champion Jenny Wingerson, runner Robert Medrum, high-jumper Susan Nigh and hurdler Peter Boag. All are former members of the Don Mills club.

The dispute began when runner Bill Crothers alleged in a letter sent March 31, 1966, to the secretary of the Central Ontario Track and Field Association that Percival was giving his athletes stimulants and sedatives.

The case is continuing before Mr. Justice Alexander Stark and a civil jury of four men and two women.

KNUDSON'S WORLD OF GOLF

By GEORGE ENUDSON

A not-so-funny thing happened to me last year at the Masters—I choked.

First of all, you have to know what the Masters means to me. To win it would be the culmination of a lifetime of golf.

The year before, in my first appearance at Augusta, I had tied for forty-10th place.

Now I stood on the 12th tee in the final round. I looked at the scoreboard and saw where I stood.

It's a par - three hole, a difficult six - iron shot over water and I figured I had to make it in two.

I know what holes were left—the par - five 13th and 15th which were birdie holes — and knew who the other contenders were — Jack Nicklaus, Gay Brewer and Tommy Jacobs — and what they might do.

I figured a birdie on that 12th and I could win the tournament, especially because I would be in ahead of them, which would add to their pressure.

All I could see as I went up to hit was somebody putting that famous green jacket on me which they present to the winner.

But then something happened that had never happened before. My legs started to bounce, literally bounce as if I were standing on an earthquake.

I didn't think a person could get so nervous that his legs would start jumping like that. It could only happen in a tournament like the Masters, the U.S. Open of the PGA championship.

The crowd was excited and I had absolutely no concentration whatsoever.

"Just hit it," I told myself.

But I couldn't stop shaking and tried to hit it between the bounces.

I hit into the water and took five.

I birdied the 13th, missed the birdie on the 15th, but hit a good golf shot to birdie the 16th to finish in a sixth - place tie with Don Januery.

Later, while removing my shoes in the clubhouse I said: "Son, you almost won the Masters."

Arnold Palmer walked in a few minutes later and for the first time since we've both been on the tour, and for almost two hours and had a long talk. It was a rare occasion, the first time I've ever seen Arnold sit and spill everything.

I told him what had happened and how dejected I was, then he gave me the biggest lift I've ever had.

"The first year I won the Masters, in 1958," he said "I was that way for the entire round."

My advice to you is, never hit a shot unless you are concentrating.

If you start to feel pressure as you stand over the ball, or something happens that distracts you, step back from the ball regain your composure, then step up and hit it right.

Not doing this cost me, among other things, a nice green jacket.

Walker Cup Matches

British Even Money To Win -- Carr

SANDWICH, England (AP)—John Jacobs, Britain's pre-eminent golf teacher has sounded a warning to the United States: American domination of the Walker Cup matches is nearing an end.

"We're learning and we're catching up," said Jacobs, a former Ryder Cup player and the man the English professionals seek out when their game goes sour.

And Joe Carr, the British captain, said the Americans "look extremely good, but I think we are even money to win."

Carr, 45, a three - time British amateur champion, had been listed as non - playing captain, but changed his mind Wednesday.

"I will play," Carr said after an excellent practice round. He has outplayed all other members of the British squad in the early trials for the Friday-Saturday competition on the 6,748-yard, par - 71 Royal St. George course on Pegwell Bay.

Carr guided the British to a five to two rout over the United States. The United States has won the Cup 18 times and lost only once, in 1938. The 1965 match was the only tie.

The matches are held every two years, matching the best amateurs of each country in a hotly contested two days of nerves, worry and energy.

The matches involve four foursomes Friday morning followed by eight singles in the afternoon. The same program will be repeated Saturday.

Britain's regal bookmakers have the United States a 2-1-1 favorite. "We're catching up and we've taken a little while," Jacobs said in between sessions as an unofficial coach and adviser to the British team.

He said he was basing his hopes for an upset on a new British approach to the game, which he described this way:

For years British amateur players came along and if good enough "made the team." But nobody did anything else about it.

Now, leading clubs in Britain are searching out youngsters and sending word along to the control organizations. Thereupon, men like Jacobs are brought in to teach the youngsters.

The result has been that an ordinarily good youngster suddenly becomes somebody like Clive Clark or Peter Townsend, both of whom recently turned professional.

Would Prohibit 'Rigging'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Representative Richard L. Ottinger said Wednesday he is drafting legislation that would prohibit rigging of professional sports events to prevail scheduling of radio or television commercials.

Ottinger, a member of the House commerciallaws and power subcommittee, said the bill would extend to professional sports events a provision of existing law making it illegal to "rig contests of intellectual knowledge, intellectual skill or chance."

The New York Democrat added in a statement he hopes his proposal will spark an investigation "of the extent to which the radio and television networks are influencing the conduct of professional sports at the expense of the viewer or listener."

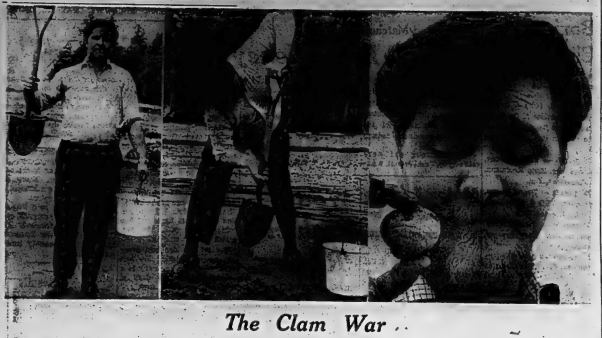
Baby Boom, Birth Control Pill, Help Ontario Education Officials

TORONTO (CP)— The baby boom that followed the Second World War and a decline in the birth rate that followed introduction of the birth control pill a few years ago may solve two problems that have been nagging Education Minister William Davis—shortages of teachers and classrooms.

Mr. Davis said in the legislature Wednesday the first of the schools built after the war now have been paid for.



"Every year from now on will be a 20th year, marking the end of another series of school debentures, and the cost of each school built at the earlier date will cease to be a capital charge.

"With the leveling off of the birth rate, within a few years we shall probably be coming to the place where we can live within the capital investment we have already made in schools."

Mr. Davis made the remarks on introducing his spending estimates for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1968, that envisaged a marked $675,000,000, an increase of about $79,270,000 for public-supported education.

He said that between 1946 and 1966 space was added for 1,110,775 elementary pupils and 360,000 seats were provided for 200,000 new secondary school students. The total construction cost was $1,656,869,000.

Value Drops From $400 to $150

Disappearance of Departmental Exams Causes Reduced Student Scholarships

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario government scholarships for Grade 13 students will drop in value to $150 from $400 next year, with the disappearance of departmental examinations, Education Minister William Davis said Wednesday.

He told the legislature the reduced scholarships will be awarded on the basis of student performance as judged by their teachers.

To qualify, the students must obtain an average of 80 per cent in seven subjects required for the honor graduation diploma. At present, the $400 awards are made to students obtaining an 80-per-cent average in eight departmental examinations.

Dr. J. R. McCarthy, deputy minister, said the scholarship program is being revised with the government's student aid program and that no student will suffer because of the $250 reduction in the scholarship's value.

Some 1,950 students qualified for the scholarships in 1966.

Mr. Davis's announcement was made during a statement in which he outlined his department's plans for Grade 13 in the 1967-68 school year.

He said teachers' groups have been unanimous in approving the decision of 1966 to abolish the departmentals.

Mr. Davis said standards of instruction and achievement will be safeguarded by provision of standard entrance examinations for Ontario universities, continuation of Grade 13 courses of study and close cooperation between his department and teachers in curriculum reassessment and development.

He said the department and the teaching profession will also set up a consultative service under which experienced teachers will help other teachers determine course content and measure student progress.

Under the new program statements on Grade 13 standing based on the entire year's work will be issued by school principals at the end of the academic year, Mr. Davis said.

"The department will award the secondary school honor graduation diploma on the recommendation of the principal."

Ont. Will Soon Require TV Production Facilities

TORONTO (CP)— Education Minister William Davis said Wednesday Ontario will soon need its own facilities to produce educational television programs for a province-wide network.

He told the legislature the federal government confirmed May 8 it will provide transmission facilities for programs produced by the province.

Programs conceived by the department now are produced by the CBC and private stations and are shown by those stations.

"It is becoming apparent to the department of education that within a short time, the limit of participation that can be expected from other broadcast interests will have been reached.

"The needs of education will, however, continue to expand.

"As a consequence, the government's intention to establish an educational television network throughout our province will be implemented by the . . . department of education in conjunction with the government of Canada.

New Program Devised For Deprived Children

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's department of education is organizing an experimental program designed to help culturally-deprived children fit into school system.

Education Minister William Davis told the legislature Wednesday the department "will seek to identify some of the causes and materials by which parents, social agencies, educational institutions and particularly local school authorities might develop pre - school programs."

"Such programs would attempt to provide some of the compensatory cultural experiences that would enable the disadvantaged child to enter the public system at a level more nearly comparable with that of other pupils."

Mr. Davis said the department has been considering the Headstart program instituted in the U.S. less than two years ago. That program established pre-school classes for children from slum areas to try to provide them with the variety of cultural experiences they needed before entering the regular school system.

Community Colleges Not Needed

TORONTO (CP) —Education Minister William Davis said Wednesday Ontario has no need for "community colleges like some in the U.S. which provide students with a direct route to university.

He told the legislature any student who wants to go to university can get there through normal routes.

Mr. Davis denounced opposition proposals that the new colleges of applied arts and technology should offer university-level courses and provide direct entry into university.

"For those who wish to undertake a university education, there is the normal route through secondary school and Grade 13. There are, or will be, upgrading courses in Grade 13 subjects in the new colleges, for persons beyond high school age, or there are facilities in most universities to accept older persons as mature students, often with less than a full Grade 13 standing."

Tory Minister Questioned

TORONTO (CP) — Development Minister Stanley Randall, involved Wednesday in a series of questions fired by Eddie Sargent (L — Grey North) in the legislature, amiably termed the question period "Eddie's happy hour."

Mr. Sargent accused the minister of describing a Toronto housing project in a speech before public announcement of the project, and then changing knowledge of the project.

Mr. Randall said that is the position he had and that the project was under study, not that it definitely would be undertaken.

"That's a measly - mouthed evasion," shouted Vernon Singer, (L — Toronto Downsview) "You misled the house deliberately, that's what you did."

Mr. Sargent also asked whether the minister planned any changes in the Home Ownership Made Easy (HOME) plan in view of the recent federal throne speech.

The minister replied that no changes were planned since the throne speech's only references to housing problems amounted to a "complete endorsement of the HOME plan."

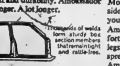
Got 3 minutes? We'll show you how Ambassador gives you more car for your money.

(Worthwhile reading for anyone about to spend around 3 grand on a standard-size car.)



Ambassador DPL. One of 9 Ambassador models.

Ambassador is more car. In these ways.

The way it's built. The way it's big. The way it performs. The way it's comfortable.

The way it's built.

Tight. Rattle-free. Rustproof. Beautifully finished. It's Single-Unit Construction with Unisde. All of the body parts are welded together into one solid, single unit for greater strength and durability. Ambassador lasts longer. A lot longer.

Thousands of welds form sturdy box section members and instrument panel and rattle-less.

The entire assembled body goes through seven rustproofing baths. We dunk the body right to the roofline. Every nook, every cranny gets the treatment. Deep-dipping is far superior to the spraying used by many manufacturers. Look. Two practice golf balls. One sprayed. One dipped. Cut open:

Sprayed ball has a pretty appearance inside.

Dipped ball is completely coated. Inside and out.

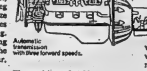
We paint Ambassador with a harder, longer-lasting acrylic enamel. It stays bright. It resists fading.

We can show you the same kind of protective care a hundred times before Ambassador is completed. Here are just three. A corrosion-armored muffler and exhaust system that resists corrosion. Double weatherproofing door seals to shut an end to drafts and dust and seeping water. Plastic kick panels to guard and beautify the interior.

The way it's big.

More room where you want it—inside. More maneuverability where you need it—outside.

Ambassador sits six in all-day comfort. Three in the back can stretch legs, move elbows and generally spread themselves around. In fact, Ambassador has more rear seat leg room than any other standard-size car. The trunk is full-size, too. It takes an honest 18.2 cu. ft. of anything. Outside, Ambassador has a turning radius of 39'. It parks easily. It's the most maneuverable standard-size car. The way it performs.



With class. With less gasoline. With your choice of engines. With a great transmission.

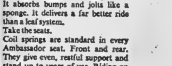
You get your choice of the industry's newest and most modern engines. Engines designed to fit your kind of driving. But these engines have a practical side, too. They're all of lightweight construction so they don't add needless extra pounds to the weight they have to pull. There's less power loss.

The top performer is Ambassador's 280 hp, 4-barrel V-8 option. Other options include 2 V-8's and 2 high performance Torque-Command 6's. Ambassador's automatic transmission has an advantage: a 3rd speed, so the engine operates closer to peak performance for better passing power. Transmission options include Shift-Command, for manual or automatic shifting and 4-on-the-floor.

Ambassador Typhoon V-8. Precision cast thick block cylinder walls with extra weight.

Automatic transmission with three forward speeds.

The way it's comfortable.



Coil spring ride. Coil spring seats. Less driver fatigue.

In any car, there are two primary comfort systems: suspension and seating.

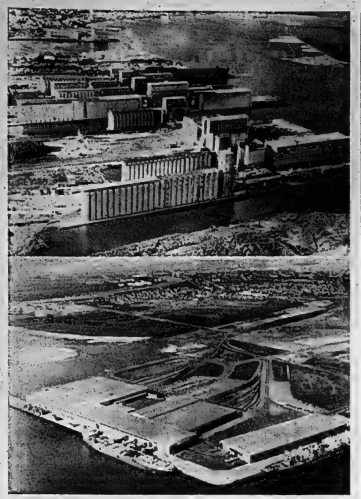
Take the coil spring suspension. One coil spring sits over every wheel. It absorbs bumps and jolts like a sponge. It delivers a far better ride than a leaf system.

Take the seats.

Coil springs are standard in every Ambassador seat. Front and rear. They're even, restful support and stand up to years of use. Riding on seats this well made can actually reduce driver fatigue.

Coils have an individual action that provides even, restful support.

Reclining and adjusting all the way back.



But Ambassador seats go beyond the basic (our idea of basic) comfort requirements—all the way to an optional reclining seat with safety headrest. It's one of many small points about Ambassador that you just won't find on other standard-size cars. And when you add them all up, they're what make Ambassador a better car; more car for your money.

Worthwhile thinking about before you buy a standard-size car? You bet your lifetime satisfaction it is!

Nine Hurt in Campus Melee

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rioting after a campus rally had been staged by a group favoring Ian Smith and his white supremacy government of Rhodesia.

Leslie Otis, a member of the group, announced that two flags would be burned and "maybe a third." The flags uncovered were those of the Soviet Union, the Nazi Third Reich and the United Nations.

But a rumor swept the campus that the Stars and Stripes might be burned.

The tensions mounted as speakers called UCLA students "liberal swine."

Charles Becomes Prince of Wales in '69

LONDON (CP) — The Queen put an end to a long-standing "mystery" game by announcing that her son and heir Charles will be invested Prince of Wales in the summer of 1969 at ancient Caernarvon Castle.

Charles's uncle Antony, the Earl of Snowdon, will be involved in arranging the first such ceremony since 1911 when the present Duke of Windsor was invested Prince of Wales at age 17.

Snowdon, Princess Margaret's Welsh photographer husband, is involved as constable of Caernarvon Castle, an honorary office bestowed by the Queen in 1963 on the government's advice. The Duke of Norfolk, as earl marshal of England, will be in charge of planning with the help of Snowdon and Cledwyn Hughes, secretary of state for Wales, the Queen announced Wednesday. Precise date will be fixed later.

The timing of the investiture has been a minor puzzle for British gossip columnists since the Queen created her son Prince of Wales in an announcement July 26, 1958, at the close of the British Empire Games in Cardiff, capital of the principality.

A Buckingham Palace spokesman explained that Wednesday's announcement was made because "people have been asking—the Welsh have been asking tremendously — when the prince would be invested."

The spokesman said the ceremony was being delayed until 1969 so Charles can complete two years at Cambridge University. Now finishing preparatory school at Gordonstoun in Scotland, Charles will enter Trinity College, Cambridge, in the fall.

The heir to the throne will be just short of his 21st birthday Nov. 14, 1969, when he is formally presented to the Welsh people as their 21st English prince. Hughes said Wednesday a year of national celebration is planned in Wales. Reports say that in the interim Charles will study the Welsh language.

Investiture practice has varied. Edward VII was an infant when he was invested in 1841, George V was 35 at his investiture in 1901. While the link with 1969 in Caernarvon goes back nearly 700 years, only one investitures has been held there—that of the present Duke of Windsor, who resigned briefly as Edward VIII.

Wales was ruled by sovereign princes from ancient times until the death of Prince Llywelyn ap Gruffydd ap Llywelyn in 1282. The first English prince was the son of Edward I. The prince, later Edward II, was born at Caernarvon in 1284 and according to legend was presented to the conquered Welsh chieftains as their native born prince. However, he was formally invested at Lincoln in England in 1301.

Charles has yet to be invested with another honor his mother bestowed in 1952—Knight of the Garter. The prince has been eligible for investiture as a garter knight since his 18th birthday last November.

He has acted on another right of royal adulthood in appointing Sqdn.-Ldr. David Checketts his equerry, or personal aide, three months ago. But he has not taken up another privilege, to name a personal secretary.

Heath Won't Forecast Decision on Euromart

TORONTO (CP) — Britain's Conservative party leader, Edward Heath, Wednesday refused to forecast whether Britain will be admitted into the European Common Market.

But, in an address to the Empire Club, he said British membership is a long-term policy to which his party is committed.

"Europe must draw closer in order to gain greater economic and political strength, and so help redress the balance of power on both sides of the Atlantic."

At a news conference later, he said Britain was determined to eventually enter the ECM.

He denied a suggestion made by French President Charles de Gaulle at a press conference Tuesday that Britain's entry into the economic community could open the door to greater American influence in Europe.

Britain wanted to become a part of Europe to strengthen Europe and at the same time strengthen Britain's role in world affairs, Mr. Heath said. The French leader said Britain must undergo a "profound economic and political transformation" before being accepted in the ECM.

Mr. Heath refused to comment directly on President de Gaulle's statements.

But he scoffed at Gen. de Gaulle's suggestion that Britain's balance of payments would collapse if she joined.

"The effect on the balance of payments would depend on the length of the transitional time allowed for Britain to become a full member," Mr. Heath said. "But of course they wouldn't collapse."

Law Student Continues Fight

KINGSTON (CP) — Matthew Hudson, 24-year-old law student at Queen's University, said in court, Wednesday he will continue his battle against Kingston Parking Authority.

He gave notice to Magistrate P. E. D. Baker of his intention to fight 14 overtime parking tickets and was remanded until May 24.

He received the 11 tickets while an appeal by the authority was pending on the dismissal of two parking violations against Hudson March 15. At that time Hudson based his defence on the Canadian Currency Act and a Kingston parking bylaw.

Magistrate Baker has since been instructed by the Supreme Court of Ontario to find Hudson guilty of the two offences and sentence him.

Hudson pleaded guilty Wednesday to nine other parking violations committed before March 15 and was fined $97.50 for the 11 offences.

But he said he will fight the 14 tickets received after March 15. He said he will base his defence "on a purely legal argument."

First Appointments July 1

Order of Canada Nominations Now Open

OTTAWA (CP) — Governor-General Michener Wednesday night announced the establishment of an official secretariat at Government House for the new Order of Canada, of which he is the chancellor.

The order, to be awarded outstanding Canadians for courage and service, was announced a month ago by Prime Minister Pearson.

Esmond Butler, official secretary to the Governor-General, will be secretary-general of the order.

Tuesday's announcement said nominations for awards now should be sent to Government House. Awards will be made on the recommendation of an advisory council headed by the chief justice of Canada, Robert Taschereau.

"Nominations, which may be made for exceptional service to Canada in any field of endeavor, should be submitted with relevant supporting material to the secretary-general of the order at Government House in Ottawa," the announcement said.

"To ensure that all deserving candidates will be brought to the attention of the advisory council, any organization or individual who wishes to nominate one or more Canadian citizens should feel free to do so."

First appointments to the order are to be made July 1, the 100th anniversary of the coming into force of the British North America Act.

The order will have companions and medal-holders for courage or service. Companions of the order will be entitled to wear a neck ribbon of red and white with a white - enameled gold pendant bearing a red maple leaf.

Fifty companions of the order may be created this year, but no more than 25 a year thereafter. There will be 4 limit of 150 at any time.

Companions will be selected for "merit, especially service to Canada or to humanity at large," according to the Queen's letters patent creating the order.

Acts of conspicuous courage in circumstances of great danger will be recognized by medals for courage, which may be given to non-Canadians as well as Canadians. There is no limit on the number.

Medals for service will be awarded in different categories than for companions. No more than 50 medals will be given a year.

Fluoridation Said Still Best Find

TORONTO (CP) — A U.S. dental expert told the annual convention of the Ontario Dental Association Wednesday that fluoridation is still the most exciting discovery in the prevention of dental cavities since the beginning of dentistry.

Dr. Gordon Nikiforuk, chairman of the oral biology division and professor of children's dentistry at the University of California, said fluoridation is preventing two out of three potential cavities in children's teeth.

"With even more effective fluoride compounds to be expected from chemical science I believe fluoridation will be 80 per cent effective—that fluoridation will create a condition where dental cavities ceases to be a public health problem within a decade."

He said other dental problems such as gum diseases, root canal ailments and irregular tooth still require dental care.

Jobless Number Cut, Stays Above Last April

OTTAWA (CP) — Unemployment dropped by 39,000 between March and April to 365,000 but remained 67,000 higher than in April of last year, it was reported today.

The jobless in April represented 4.9 per cent of the total labor force, compared to 5.3 per cent in March. In April of last year unemployment was at 4.1 per cent.

A joint report by the manpower department and the Dominion Bureau of Statistics estimated the number of job-holders in the country increased by 36,000 between March and April to 7,125,000. But this rise was "somewhat smaller than is normal for the time of year."

The job picture, in brief, with estimates in thousands:

	April	Mar.	April
	1967	1967	1966
Labor force	7,490	7,489	7,348
Employed	7,125	7,089	8,950
Unemployed	365	400	298

The year-to-year rise in jobs was 175,000 but this was outpaced by an increase of 342,000 in the labor force. Most of the new jobs — 102,000 — were for women. Employment of women was up 4.8 per cent to 2,221,000 while men at work rose only 1.5 per cent to 4,904,000.

The national unemployment figure represented 2.9 per cent on an adjusted basis, discounting seasonal factors.

Regionally, the Atlantic area's unemployment worked out to 3.9 per cent of the labor force, down from 10.6 in March.

Quebec had 6.1 per cent of its workers out of jobs, an improvement from 7.2 per cent in March while Ontario's rate dropped to 2.6 per cent from 3.5.

Prairie unemployment remained at 2.7 per cent while British Columbia's eased to 5.5 per cent from 5.7.

Of the total unemployment, about two-thirds had been jobhunting for under four months. The hard core of unemployment, those out of work seven months or more, was at 35,000.

Hydro Quebec Strikes Continue

MONTREAL (CP) — Hydro-Quebec employees in the Matapedia region of Quebec struck at midnight Wednesday and employees in the Abitibi region in the northeastern district of the province were expected to walk out at noon today as the rotating strike by company employees entered its 11th day.

About 400 employees in the Matapedia region walked off at midnight Wednesday for the second time since the staggered-area strike began May 8.

Meanwhile, power failures were reported in the St. Maurice and Montmorency regions Wednesday where 1,850 Hydro-Quebec employees staged a 24-hour walkout.

The Montmorency region takes in part of Quebec City and the legislature assembly was forced to adjourn at 5:30 p.m. when a power failure made it almost impossible for Hansard reporters to record exchanges across the chamber.

A union spokesman said the power line break in the St. Maurice community of St. Theophile, where the failure occurred, was inspected by engineering crews. It was not regarded as an "emergency" and repairs were not made until the 750 workers returned at midnight.

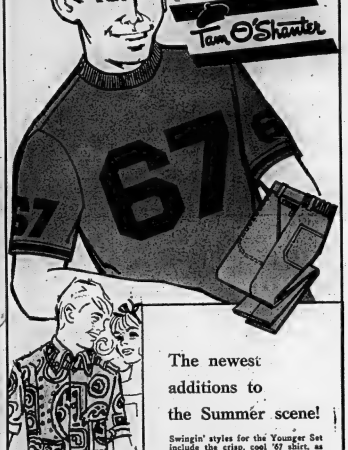
Cuba's Communists Back Captured Guerillas

HAVANA (Reuters) — Cuba's Communist leaders today defiantly backed three Cubans who landed on the Venezuelan coast last week to join guerrillas operating there.

The central committee of the Communist party, headed by Premier Fidel Castro, also proclaimed its determination to "wield its duty of solidarity" with revolutionaries around the world.

But it denied the captured Cubans were army regulars or that they had a Soviet - type rifle from Cuba, as Venezuela charged.



Venezuela announced Friday night that its troops shot and killed one Cuban Army officer and captured two other Cuban soldiers coming ashore 80 miles north of Caracas May 8 to join guerrillas.

The Venezuelan defence ministry said another Cuban was drowned during the landing attempt, and eight Venezuelans in the party escaped.

Youngsters Crowd BCI Auditorium for Children's Play

Splendid Show

'The Tinder Box' Delights Youngsters

The Tinder Box, a matchless little piece of children's theatre played Belleville yesterday and struck a lightning response — from nearly 2,000 youngsters.

That evening it repeats itself — before another 1,600 — and a second success is as assured in advance as the name author of seats sold.

Sponsored by the Belleville Theatre Guild the intimate lissle frolic by the Toronto Museum Theatre, was cast out well in advance of its appearance.

Hence the need for four performances here — two yesterday in Belleville Collegiate, the remainder this evening at Centennial Secondary School.

A good thing too, since the audience is an integral part of the production.

The original fairytale by Hans Christian Andersen has all the classic ingredients of the child's uncomplicated world of romance: the fight between good and evil, respectively personified by handsome heroes and ugly witches, with virtue — typified by a princess — at stake, and bags of magic and comedy thrown in for good measure.

As adapted by Dorothy Jane Goulding, The Tinder Box not only retains the recipe, but expands it, thanks to that peculiar kind of magic only theatre can impart.

The young audience is part of that alchemy and "drawn into the presentation right from the moment the curtain goes up and the actors stride on to introduce themselves.

Then, when one of the youngsters is invited to replace one of the adult actors onstage, dress in his costume and share in the joke to the consternation of all the other grownups, the audience is thoroughly warmed to its role.

From then on its acts the part of most confidante, warning their favorite characters what the shifty ones are up to, cheering on the heroics, wholeheartedly booing the underdealers.

Rapport is the key element in such a production, intimacy the environment in which it flourishes.

In this way the adaptation is painstakingly ingenius.

It uses a cast small in numbers — eight in all — but lilis the stage with characters.

This is based on quick-change technique for four of the most hard-working actors on the road this year.

The quartet, supporting the lead roles, double and triple as soldiers, ladies-in-waiting and servants.

This, and the fact that their changes are made in full view of the audience assures the continuity of intimacy and identity between audience and actors.

For Belleville public-school age youngsters The Tinder Box probably was one of their own public Centennial Year highlights.

However, marshalling them out for the performances, ensuring their prompt arrival and well-being was in itself an organizational achievement for Theatre Guild workers.

Playing the good people of the tale were William Copeland as the hero soldier; Marylu Moyer as the Princess and Robert Aaron as the dog whose bark was worse than his bite.

They were assisted in their fight against malefaction by the quick - changing talents of Hamish Robertson, Greg son Winkfield, Jim Timmins and Richard Ayres.

Plotted against them as the witch was Patricia Grant who also — poor woman — had to combat 1,000 hissing, yelling Belleville public school youngsters. Wickedness never had it so rough.

Fatigue Indicator Will Guard Planes

OTTAWA (CP)—A relatively simple and inexpensive fatigue indicator now being developed in the U.S. may provide a new safeguard for the larger and faster aircraft of the future.

Development of the fatigue sensor was outlined Wednesday at the spring meeting of the Society for Experimental Stress Analysis by Robert S. Horne of the Lockheed - Georgia Co. of Marietta, Ga.

About 250 scientists from Europe, Japan and North America are attending the three-day meeting — the first time the society has met outside the U.S.

Mr. Horne said the sensor is a fatigue damage information system to tell "when an aircraft's useful life has been exceeded."

Sensors installed in the aircraft during its fabrication would allow measurement at an airport with electronic gear.

While the ground equipment and special laboratories to provide comparison data would be expensive, the individual sensors—maybe 150 in each aircraft—would cost about 50 each, a relatively small investment for a multi-million dollar plane.

Now That Code Relaxed Movie Nudity Growing

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Movies are nuder than ever, and no one knows exactly where the trend will end.

Until five years ago, the major Hollywood film companies did not even allow navels to be seen on the screen.

All that has been changed. The new film era of exposed skin was heralded a decade ago by Brigitte Bardot, whose cavortings in and out of towels attracted the interest of audiences everywhere.

European film makers, notably the uninhibited Swedes, saw the value of stripping their stars. American producers, still wedded to the Puritan tradition, held the line. The production code decreed: "Complete nudity, in fact or in silhouette, is never permitted, nor shall there be any licentious notice by characters in the film of suggested nudity."

Three years ago in The Pawnbroker, which was certainly not a girlie film, bare - breasted women were shown as evidence of the depravity of a Nazi concentration camp.

The sponsors of The Pawnbroker would not remove the nude scenes, and the film received a condemned rating from the Catholic Legion of Decency, which has been superseded by the National Catholic Office for Motion Pictures.

The advent of Jack Valenti as president of the Motion Picture Association brought a much less specific code which eliminated the prohibition against nudity.

The makers of Hawaii were permitted to depict Polynesian maidens in the topless fashion they enjoyed before missionaries came to the islands. John Huston was allowed certain illusories in portraying Adam and Eve in The Bible. Most of the time they were filmed from the rear or face-on from the waist up, with Eve's long tresses covering most of her bosom.

More nudity is coming. The latest issue is a bath scene by Hayley Mills in The Family Way.

Only 3 Canadians Active This Year In Baseball's Major Leagues

By JOHN SHORT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canada has produced only three players active this season in baseball's major leagues but at least 13 on big league rosters received part of their development in this country.

Three right-handed pitchers —George Korince of Detroit Tigers, Claude Raymond of Houston Astros and Ferguson Jenkins of Chicago Cubs—remained the only Canadians active after Ron Taylor of New York Mets was placed on the injured list.

Jenkins, a promising starter, and relief hurlers Raymond and Korince will be used this season by many American graduates of the Western Canada Baseball League.

Another major league claims a Canadian affiliation of a different variety. Dennis Ribant, slim right - hander with Pittsburgh Pirates, played virtually all his baseball in the United States but spent some time in Canada as a junior hockey forward with Hamilton Red Wings. Ribant, who last season became the first New York Mets' starter to post a winning record, is a Detroit native.

Raymond was born in St. Jean, Que. Jenkins was born and raised in Chatham, Ont., and Korince got his minor baseball start in St. Catharines, Ont.

The WCBL, a currently inactive circuit that operated at various times in Alberta and Saskatchewan, was a testing ground for university and college standouts. Some received substantial bonuses to sign with big league clubs.

Probably the most prominent of the WCBL graduates is Ron Fairly of Los Angeles Dodgers. Fairly received an estimated $65,000 to sign after spending a summer with Edmonton Dodgers in the late 1950s.

The National League also claims most of the other WCBL graduates currently active.

Included are pitchers Nelson Briles and Ray Washburn of St. Louis Cardinals and Don Schneider of Houston, catcher Tom Haller of San Francisco Giants, infielders Gary Sutherland of Philadelphia Phillies and John Werhas of Los Angeles Dodgers, and utility - man John Boccabella of Chicago Cubs.

In the American League, the Chicago White Sox' double-play combination, Don Buford and Jerry Adair, are joined by outfielder Len Gochrieland utility-man Tom Satriano of California Angels and infielder Tim Cullen of Washington Senators.

The WCBL folded most recently in 1964 after major league sponsors pulled out. Edmonton was supported by the Dodgers, Calgary by the Giants, Saskatoon by the Cubs and Lethbridge by the Cardinals.

At various times, the league also had teams in Lloydminster, Sask., Medicine Hat, Alta., and Regina.

An Edmonton insurance agent, John Ducey, has started a movement to encourage the Alberta government to build domed stadiums at Calgary and Edmonton with a view to joining the Pacific Coast League.

Ducey claims, and experts agree, that further major league expansion is inevitable. He also maintains the PCL cannot continue to pay outrageous amounts for travel in the 12 - team circuit that spawns from Hawaii to Indianapolis.

Ducey, a former professional umpire who was born in Buffalo, N.Y., points beyond the list of current major leaguers to bolster his statement that baseball can prosper in Canada.

Almost every minor league shows at least one graduate of the circuit he helped organize. Vancouver and Toronto, the only professional franchises operating in Canada this season, both have had players schooled in the WCBL.

Infielder Ernie Fazio played in Vancouver last year on option from Kansas City and pitcher Schneider toiled with Toronto a few years ago on option from Milwaukee Braves.

Despite continuing apathy by fans in Toronto, Ducey says, a major league franchise is possible there when and if a suitable stadium is provided. He looks forward to the day a graduate of the WCBL plays with a Canadian major league club.

Prince Edward Island

Hockey Roses Bloom In Garden!

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP)—Garden of the Gulf is the sobriquet fondly applied to verdant Prince Edward Island. But a lot of seed from Canada's smallest province has blown over the fence and is blooming in somebody else's backyard.

No fewer than 13 players from P.E.I. were involved in starring roles in junior A hockey league or inter-league playoffs in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick this spring.

When Halifax Canadiens and Moncton Seals met in the Maritime final for the right to advance into the Memorial Cup playoffs, six islanders were in the lineups. Canadiens had five and Seals had one—slick Billy Weatherbie, one of the reasons for their five-game upset over the favored Fredericton Red Wings.

Strong for Red Wings in that series were right-winger Joe Brown and centre Cecil MacDonald, both from Charlottetown.

Canadiens' array of Islander talent was led by centre Bobby Whitlock who scored 52 goals and 70 assists in 50 exhibition games with the league-less Halifax club.

Other islanders with Canadiens, a St. Louis NHL affiliate, are centre Jamie Kennedy and defenceman Kevin Smith, both of Charlottetown, left-winger Errol Thompson and defenceman Bill Dickie, both from Summerside.

Canadiens coach Phil Daigleish, 41-year-old Montrealer, rates Thompson, 16, the best pro prospect, and adds that Whitlock, now 18, could also make it although "he needs a little push now and then."

Daigleish says it's evident why P.E.I., with a population of only 107,000 and five artificial rinks, is producing so many players-for-export.

"Their minor leagues are organized differently. Here it's a recreation. There it's a sport. They give the kids more ice time, good administration, good coaching, and pay attention to them when they're really young in years."

Wes (Buckie) Trainor, 45, manager of the Charlottetown Forum for the last four years, agrees and adds that parental interest is also a factor.

"We have lots of volunteer coaches, many of whom played topnotch senior hockey."

Trainor says minor leagues are divided into groups as low as mosquito and termite, and each division has an administrator of its own with hockey experience.

Trainor, a former centre in the United States, Allsrican and National leagues—he was with New York Rangers in 1948-50—played and coached in the 1950s with senior clubs in the Maritimes and Newfoundland.

"I take a turn coaching the kids or just generally helping out when time permits," he says.

He isn't unhappy about players being noticed away after going through the development stage at home. Bigger and better leagues, stiffer competition and diversified coaching just bring a chance for the big time that much closer, he says.

And it seems just a matter of time before someone follows in the footsteps of such Islanders as Forbes Kennedy, who played with Chicago, Detroit and Boston and now is with California Seals of the Western League, or Billy MacMillan, a star with Canada's national team.

Welfare Work Said Threatened 'By Soul-destroying Meanness'

TORONTO (CP)—A Winnipeg welfare official Wednesday accused health and welfare workers of fighting one another while emotionally disturbed children go without treatment.

David Critchley, executive director of the Children's Homes of Winnipeg, told the annual conference of the Ontario Welfare Council that in all levels of health and welfare work there is "soul - destroying mediocrity and meanness," disguised by "surface politeness. It's no less vicious, and it's probably more destructive than any carper that any teen gang has been a party to."

"The antagonism and lack of communication and collaboration between health and welfare, or more particularly between social workers and psychiatrists, is especially pronounced."

Mr. Critchley suggested that health and welfare workers themselves may be emotionally disturbed, and he blamed this on North American child - raising methods which turn children into "self-doubting, anxious, angry, sin-ridden, insecure adults."

Delegates to the conference considered several resolutions, including one which asked that welfare recipients not be under the threat of having to repay their allowances in the event they inherited money.

The resolution, presented by Peterborough delegates, urged repeal of the seldom-used section 38 of the General Welfare Assistance Act, which allows municipalities to demand their money back. The resolution was approved.

Another resolution approved by delegates called for social Christmas holiday payments for welfare recipients.

The resolution was presented by the Hamilton and Toronto social planning councils.

Mrs. Ann Lewton, vice-president of the Jewish Family and Child Service, Toronto, introduced a resolution calling for a study to determine the extent of need for protective services for elderly people who often starve, fall ill and sometimes die alone.

Dr. Gordon Ashwith, executive director of the Halton County Children's Aid Society, told the conference that some troubled families should be forced to seek psychological help.

However, Dr. Nathan Epstein, chief psychiatrist at the Jewish General Hospital in Montreal, warned that the authoritarian approach should be used with care.

Municipalities Lack Power, Cash

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) —Ontario's 976 municipalities, complaining they are plagued by financial problems, have asked for a showdown with the provincial government.

The Association of Ontario Mayors and Reeves—the voice of the province's municipalities —called for a conference, with the Ontario government, scheduled for early in May. The local councils have neither the power nor money to carry out the work people elect them to do.

The association decided at its three-day annual meeting that it wants to discuss its problems with the Ontario government, which controls much of the money received by municipalities and controls how much authority they should have.

Mayor Lester Cocke of Barrie, retiring president of the association, said the organization is tired of passing annual resolutions on to the provincial government with apparent futility.

He said many municipalities are on the verge of bankruptcy because of the increasing services they have to finance with the property tax. He said the conference would be the best means to meet once and for all the responsibilities of the municipalities and their financial means.

A resolution passed during the annual meeting asked for municipal councils to be given back control over welfare and child-care programs as a means of stopping the trend toward control of citizens' welfare by non-elected bodies.

The organization also passed a resolution authorizing its executive to oppose a bid by the Bell Telephone Co. of Canada to extend its operations. It said telephone subscribers would suffer if Bell lost money in a move into radio, television and telecommunications.

Mayor Saul Laskin of Port Arthur, the association's new president, said that beyond their basic responsibilities of supplying services such as water, sewerage and streets, the public is demanding of municipalities programs of health, welfare, education and recreation.

"People are not satisfied with the status quo," Mayor Laskin said. "They want more and more services and they become more difficult to assess what are the priorities."

The association refused to deal with a resolution calling for financial aid to police Indians at Kenora, Ont., where Mayor Ernest Cartier said the 2,500 Indians require extensive policing when they enter town.

Workers Think Law Favors Employers

TORONTO (CP)—The United Auto Workers say recent picketline disturbances resulted from a belief by workers that "the law is loaded in favor of management."

A union brief submitted Wednesday to the Rand royal commission inquiry into labor disputes said labor injunctions imposed by the courts often violate the principle that "the law should scrupulously avoid conferring an advantage upon any of the parties to a labor dispute."

"In many situations, the injunction confers a distinct advantage upon the employer and the union is not justified by any public interest," the UAW delegation told Commissioner Ivan C. Rand, a former justice of the Supreme Court of Canada.

"Contrary to the conceptions contained in the Criminal Code, picketing is not designed merely to communicate and receive information. Picketing is also designed to persuade prospective employees and customers to refrain from any activity which would maintain the employer's operations.

"Labor strikers' objective is to confront the picket line interloper with their collective censure.

"The labor injunction, in eliminating or reducing the picket line to a token four to six pickets per gate, is necessarily weakening the strikers' ability to heap social pressure upon the person who would enter the struck premises."

Hungarian Diplomat

U.S. Silent on Latest Defector to West

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mystery surrounded the whereabouts today and motives of the highest-ranking Communist diplomat ever to defect in the United States.

State department officials said Janos Radvanyi Hungarian charge d'affaires who sought and received refugee here has asked that his decision be attributed to personal reasons.

But the state department refused to go into any further detail at this time including where he is or when he may give out his story.

Robert McCloskey the state department's press officer announced Wednesday night that Radvanyi the senior diplomat at the Hungarian embassy here told U.S. officials Tuesday night he wants to live in the United States permanently and is sending his government a letter of resignation.

The envoy 45 thus became the first chief of a Communist diplomatic mission in Washington to defect. He had been due for promotion to ambassador here.

Also granted asylum were Radvanyi's wife and their son who has been attending a District of Columbia public high school. A married daughter lives in Hungary.

Informed sources suggested that besides any personal motives Radvanyi had become fed up with Communist rule and life, as many Hungarians before him decided to flee to the West.

Radvanyi's was the second spectacular Communist defection to the West this year. Svetlana Alliluyeva daughter of former Soviet dictator Joseph Stalin arrived in the U.S. last month after deciding in India against returning to her homeland.

Tough Views Criticized At Quinte Conference

KINGSTON Ont. (CP)—Rev. Harold A. Bosley minister of Christ Church Methodist in New York City criticized Wednesday what he called the tough-old age in which we live when "mercy and tenderness is akin to womanly weakness."

Mr. Bosley told the annual Bay of Quinte conference of the United Church of Canada that the tough approach started between the 14th and 18th centuries when humility demeaned and man began to admire himself before God with the result that pride became a virtue.

He said the hardening process was furthered by the 19th century German philosopher Nietzsche who foresaw a super race of humans once the old sentimentalities were discarded. He said Nietzsche advocated an unfettering of the wish for power.

"It goes without argument that most of us idolize power."

"Until we learn how to pray for those who hate us and strike us we have not attempted to scale the summit of Christian faith. Mercy if practised can bring men together in a relationship of confidence and trust."

Nine men were ordained Wednesday night at the annual conference ordination service.

The new ministers were: Sidney Ernett Bates Perth Ont.; Alden Millward Croft Dartmouth N.S.; Gerald Herbert Day Preston Ont.; Robert Earle Hetherington Pembroke Ont.; George Hamilton Lavery Montreal; Donald Leonard Nicol Brockville Ont.; Robert Douglas Pickering Picton Ont.; Eric Bruce Ross Lancaster Ont.; and Gary Wade Stokes Brockville.

Designated as a United Church deaconess was Miss Marilyn Grace Vrooman of Odessa Ont.

The oldest of the newly-ordained ministers was 55-year-old Sidney Bates father of two and a former jeweler until his decision to enter the ministry.

For the first time in the 43-year history of the Bay of Quinte conference an Anglican clergyman participated in the annual ordination service. Rev. Harold Murray of Wolfe Island near Kingston took part in the ceremonies at the request of a friend and one of the ordinands Gary Stokes.

Court Martial of U.S. Army MD May Become War Crimes Trial

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP)—The court martial of army Capt. Howard B. Levy on disloyalty charges may in effect turn into a trial of the United States on charges of committing war crimes in Vietnam.

Col. Earl V. Brown, law officer at the Levy court martial, has ruled that defence lawyers may try to show that U.S. Army Special Forces troops operate under a policy of liquidating South Vietnamese natives whom they cannot "cure" politically.

Levy, 30, an army doctor from Brooklyn, N.Y., is accused of disobeying an order to teach medical skills to Special Forces medics and with making disloyal statements to the effect that Special Forces troops are "peasant killers and murderers of women and children."

The defence says that under decisions rendered in the Nuremberg trials of German war criminals following the Second World War, Levy had a legal right to disobey what it calls an unlawful order of his superior officers.

To show that the order was unlawful, "I am now confronted with a defence of proving, my country is engaged in war crimes," said Charles Morgan, chief defence counsel.

The court martial, which began May 10, has been recessed until next Wednesday to give Morgan time to gather the witnesses and documents.

Brown, who corresponds to a civilian judge, served notice that Morgan would have to show a consistent policy of training for such acts, as has been proved at Nuremberg, rather than "sporadic" incidents.

Italy Is Now Industrialized

ROME — It has been more than a dozen years since I last visited Italy. In that time, the country has achieved what everyone has agreed is nothing less than an "economic miracle."

In little more than a decade Italy has experienced an incredible 70 per cent growth in the economy, in terms of gross national product. At the same time, its per capita income has gone up 60 per cent. For the first time in the 20th century, Italy is now a modern industrial state, on a par with the rest of Western Europe.

It is a far different country than the one I saw shortly after the war. Italy was then largely an agricultural nation, with about half of its working force on the farms. Today that number has been cut in half and more than 75 per cent of Italian workers are in industry or the service occupations.

And the spirit is far different. Although the tempo of life is still leisurely for meals, for recreation, for social intercourse, there is a new bustle in the streets and the shops and the factories. New expressways, new plants, new housing, have sprung up everywhere. Roman slums have been torn down at a rate that should make New York and Chicago envious; and the buildings put up in their place are immensely more liveable and charming than their American counterparts.

Although gasoline costs nearly a dollar a gallon, Italian roads are packed with cars — 80 per cent of them little Fiats — and the tollways are paying for themselves far sooner than anyone had expected. So long ago a land of bicycles, motorcycles and scooters, Italy is now a nation of cars, with all the accompanying problems of traffic, parking, and mounting fatalities.

Public transportation is far better than in the United States, both on the local and intercuban levels. The trains are fast, quiet, with courteous service and excellent food. America has nothing to rival the famous "Blue Train from Milan to Rome in service or comfort. And the spectacular new airport in Rome makes both Kennedy in New York and O'Hare in Chicago seem obsolescent.

Most of all, the people are imbued with a new spirit. They have tremendous confidence in the future of the country, and in their own newfound powers to generate economic prosperity. The old inferiority feelings — in the face of British manners, French taste, and German efficiency — have all but disappeared with the growing knowledge that Italy is capable of keeping pace with the modern world.

Only the extreme left and the extreme right are joined in their dissatisfaction with the country's program of rehabilitation. And the Italians look upon this as a sign they are going the good way.

City Tax Rate Boosted To 36 Mills Residential

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Ratepayers in the city of Belleville are going to have to pay approximately eight per cent more in property taxes this year.

Yesterday at a special three and a half hour budget session, city council set a rate of 40.3 mills for commercial property and on even 36 mills for residential property, up 3.5 and 2.7 mills respectively over last year.

For the home owner with a residence assessed at $10,000, the tax increase will amount to $27 with the total tax tab, not including local improvements, amounting to $360.

The 1967 budget estimates provide for an expenditure of $6,-239,265, an increase of $676,163 over that of last year, more than half of the increase resulting from increased salaries in all city departments.

Yesterday's budget session was an informal session and council will officially set the tax rate at next Tuesday's regular meeting.

The city general rate for 1967 will be 24.9 mills for commercial and 22.2 mills for residential.

The high school rate will be 7.6 mills for commercial as compared with 5.9 mills last year and 6.8 mills for residential as compared with 5.3 mills a year ago.

The city public school rate is set at 7.7 mills commercial — down one tenth of a mill from last year — and 6.9 mills for

The separate school rate is the same as for the public schools, although this is subject to confirmation by the Separate School Board.

Education is the biggest single item in the budget, which this year for the first time tops the six million dollar mark.

The tab for education is $1,598,906; debt charges and special items will take another $1,475,749; protection to city property will cost $1,081,189; public works, $745,584; sanitation and waste removal $300,800; social welfare $305,878; and recreation and community services $325,-776.

On the revenue side city taxes will amount to $4,329,012; recoverable debt charges will return $612,947; grants and subsidies $741,119; licenses and permits $27,300; earned interest and tax penalties are estimated $45,344 and "other revenue" $404,843.

Of the total $4,329,012 tax tab, $694,090 will go for public schools, $93,918 for separate schools, and $809,727 for high schools.

The annual report of the city auditor has not yet been received by city council, although Mayor J. R. Ellis said councillors were assurance of a surplus of approximately $24,000 from last year's operation.

Charges Dismissed In Rights Case

BRACEBRIDGE, Ont. (CP)—Charges against Mrs. Madeline Fletcher of Gravenhurst, Ont., were dismissed in magistrate's court Thursday.

She was charged with discrimination under the Ontario human rights code when Mr. and Mrs. Donald Organ and Mr. and Mrs. Leon Bernstein complained that she refused to rent them a cottage because they were Jewish.

Magistrate Douglas Rice agreed with Mrs. Fletcher's counsel there had not been sufficient evidence to prove discrimination, that "cottages" do not constitute a public place and that the issues come under federal jurisdiction rather than provincial.

It was the first court case since the adoption of the human rights code in 1962.

Expo Is A City in Own Right

Staff reporter Harry Mulhall today relates his impressions in the second article of a three-part series.

HARRY MULHALL

You can't go wrong at Expo.

It's a city unto itself, shining in its near-self-sufficiency.

It has its own transit system, its own medical services, its own protection, its own communications system . . . even its own baby - sitting agency.

Research for its 8,000 telephones resulted in creation of an electronic switching system that spelled new technological advances.

At Expo you can travel by means as classical as a gondola or as convenient as the electrically-operated Expo Express. And then, there's the mini-rail system twining around the sites with a capacity of 11,000 passengers an hour.

A baby-sitting playground can accommodate 250 of the smallest youngsters.

The site is close to Montreal's downtown hospitals. But, just in case there are four 10-bed miniature hospitals and eight first-aid posts.

Expo is quietly guarded by three enforcement agencies . . . its own hand-picked 1,200-man security squad, Montreal police and detectives and the RCMP.

Minutely planned, with every conceivable situation in mind, the administration of Expo makes it a community apart, its every sparkling moment securely guaranteed.

Yet, it also has one or two reminders that it also is part of a bigger, complicated world.

Egypt Ousts UN to Preserve Secrecy

CAIRO (CP)—The newspaper Al Ahram said today Egypt banned United Nations troops from the Sinai Peninsula to preserve the secrecy of Egyptian troop movements.

Al Ahram said the order, issued by Egypt's Battle Command, applied to all members of the seven-country UN Emergency Force for the Middle East, whose second largest contingent comes from Canada. India, with nearly 1,000 men, forms the largest part of the 3,400-member force. Canada has 800 men.

Cairo radio said the Egyptian military command headquarters in Sinai had declared the peninsula "a forbidden area" to members of the UNEF.

The radio confirmed the Al Ahram report that the order was given because of security reasons and to preserve the secrecy of Egyptian troop movements along the Sinai border.

Egyptian troops were reported deployed all along the rugged 117-mile Israeli-Egyptian southwest frontier shedding the barren Sinai Peninsula in place of the blue-berated UN soldiers who were ordered out by President Gamal Abdel Nasser of Egypt.

The frontier formed the demarcation line patrolled by UN troops for 11 years.

Gen. Abdel Mohsen Mortagi, commander of Egyptian land forces, was quoted by the Egyptian Middle East news agency as saying the takeover had gone "according to plan."

Mortagi indicated that Egypt would fight only if Israel attacked Syria or some other Arab state.

The Israeli army announced Thursday that it had taken "suitable steps" to meet the Egyptian threat.

Delegates at UN headquarters in New York said Secretary-General U Thant told them Thursday night he had given the order to pull back the peace force.

UN Force Is No Longer

TEL AVIV (Reuters) — The United Nations Emergency Force in the Middle East ceased to exist at 10 a.m. EDT today, it was authoritatively learned here.

Usually reliable sources said the UN flag would be lowered from masts at United Nations installations in the Gaza Strip and Sinai.

Martin Asks Israel To Accept UN Troops

OTTAWA (CP)—External Affairs Minister Martin announced with "great regret" Thursday night the death of the United Nations Emergency Force in Egypt.

As a last desperate attempt to keep the force in being, he proposed to the UN and Israel that the peacekeeping operation be allotted to the Israeli side of the Israel-Egyptian frontier. It has been on the Egyptian side since it was created in 1956, largely on Canada's insistence.

Israeli Ambassador Gershon Avner told reporters he had transmitted the proposal to Tel Aviv but that it would take his government several days to deal with it.

Mr. Martin also set in motion immediate consultations with other governments concerned. There has been a call for an emergency meeting of the UN Security Council on the implications of the force's withdrawal on peace in the Middle East. Canada is a member of the council.

Dismantling of the force was announced by Mr. Martin after an open dispute with UN Secretary-General U Thant.

Mr. Martin maintained that the force could be disbanded on Egypt's request alone. This was a matter which must be decided by the UN General Assembly, which had created the force in the first place.

Thant held he had no alternative but to withdraw the force once Egypt had asked that this be done.

Prime Minister Pearson, largely instrumental in formation of the force in 1956, said through a spokesmen he is disappointed Thant did not refer the issue to the General Assembly, now in session.

Officers in the defence department began making plans to airlift 500 Canadian troops—and possibly contingents of the other UNEF countries—out of Egypt.

As in the case of the UN's Congo operation, Canadians will be the last to leave because they keep house for the entire force.

Marines Carry War To Doorstep of North

DONG HA, South Vietnam (CP)—U.S. marines and South Vietnamese troops swept into the demilitarized zone Thursday in a massive operation that carried the ground war for the first time to the doorstep of North Vietnam.

A U.S. marine spokesman, lifting security on the politically sensitive move, said a force of 2,500 marines and South Vietnamese troops moved into the southern portion of the supposedly neutral six-mile-wide zone on foot and by helicopter and amphibious landing craft.

Reuters correspondent James Pringle said the attack was regarded in Dong Ha as a "significant escalation of the ground fighting."

But The Associated Press said a senior U.S. official in Saigon insisted that the attack represented no change in U.S. policy concerning the Vietnam war.

He said the North Vietnamese long have used the demilitarized zone, both north and south of the Ben Hai River dividing the two, to carry out attacks on government and American positions.

"Why it should be concerned as sanctuary for one side only, I don't understand," he added. The marines reported 138 Communists killed since the operation, named Hickory, started at dawn Thursday. Announcement of the penetration of the buffer zone for the first time by southern allied military units was withheld for more than 18 hours after the operation began for security reasons.

Twelve marines were reported killed and 202 wounded.

The South Vietnamese Army North Vietnamese regulars and detained 56 suspects while suffering four killed and 47 wounded.

Thursday's attack was preceded by a heavy bombardment of both the southern and northern halves of the zone by U.S. fighter-bombers and navy ships.

The buffer zone was created under the 1954 Geneva agreements ending the French Indochina war. It was supervised by the International Control Commission in Vietnam, a group made up of Canadians, Indians and Poles.

United Church Minister Says God on Side of Vietnamese

TORONTO (CP) — Rev. J. S. Hord of the United Church of Canada told the Ontario Welfare Council Thursday that God is on the side of the people of Vietnam and Canadians should not support the American position there.

Mr. Hord, secretary of the church's board of evangelism and social service, told one of the closing discussion groups at the council's three-day annual meeting that God is on the side of people who are hurt, maimed and defenceless.

"We can't be on the side of the Americans who are bombing the hell out of those poor people," Mr. Hord said, calling Prime Minister Pearson a puppy dog on President Johnson's leash.

He condemned the present state of fellowship in the church but said he believes the church is making a start in going beyond its borders to improve social agencies and encourage members to become involved.

GE Recalls Color TV Sets To Reduce 'Harmless' Radiation

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — About 90,000 General Electric color television sets will be modified to correct "emission of soft radiation in excess of desirable levels," a GE spokesman says.

The company official said Thursday that the modification program would apply only to large-screen sets sold between June, 1966, and February, 1967.

The spokesman said the "emissions have not been sufficient to cause harm to viewers" and added that preliminary tests indicated that the radiation was directed toward the floor and not the viewer.

Company service representatives will contact persons who purchased GE's large - screen sets during the June, 1966 February, 1967 period, the spokesman said.

Public Works Almost Biggest Spender in City

Outside of education which will cost the city taxpayers $1,567,906, and debt charges amounting to more than $800,000, the city public works department will be the biggest single spender in Belleville this year.

The city works budget calls for an expenditure of $745,384 and even this figure is $49,000 less than was asked by city engineer Wilbur Purcell.

Of the $745,384 estimates for public works, a total of $207,-650 is scheduled to be spent on roads, the work ranging all the way from patching and oiling to asphalt resurfacing.

One of the major repairing items scheduled for this year is the resurfacing of the West Bridge Street hill at an estimated cost of $68,000, 75 per cent of which will be paid by provincial subsidy through a highway connecting link grant.

City Engineer Wilbur Purcell said Bridge street would be repaved from Coleman Street to Burton Street (part of Highland Avenue).

An item of $74,500 is earmarked for winter control and the works department officials are keeping their fingers crossed hoping for a mowless December. The reason for this is that all but about $11,000 of the allotment has already been spent.

The city will spend $8,800 in looking after trees, $3,000 of which will go for planting of 400 young trees.

Mayor Ellis said the city was now planting more trees each year than were being removed.

An amount of $50,000 will be spent on sidewalks.

A breakdown of city department estimates shows that the fire department this year will spend $410,800, up from $390,384 last year; the police department will cost $384,439 as compared with $349,258 last year; city traffic and light $166,430, up from $126,782.

Social welfare estimates of $305,878, include $45,500 for child welfare, $35,000 for hospitalization (including homemaker services, OHSC premiums for indigents), day nursery $30,000 and general welfare of $188,063, including $112,000 in relief assistance.

A big percentage of general welfare costs and OHSC p.e-miums are subsidized 80 per cent by the province. Administration of the welfare department will cost $37,385.

Total library costs for the year are estimated at $110,000 of which $61,232 will go for salaries and $25,000 for new books. The city will receive $29,000 back in provincial grants.

The arena will cost $42,134 with an anticipated deficit of $18,534; the Parks Board $105,-200 and recreation $62,615.

Total grants approved by council for 1967 amount to just under $25,000.

Debenture Debt Charges Take Big Tax Slice

Debenture debt charges take a big slice each year out of the city's annual tax requirements and this year is no exception in Belleville.

Out of a total budget of $6,230,263 for general city expenditures and for education the amount required for debenture debt charges this year is $802,956.

And on top of this there is another $11,000 expected to be spent in bank loan interest.

Debenture debt charges for this year, did not represent the gross amount but was the net after payments from other municipalities were received.

City Tax

Yesterday's budget deliberations failed to reduce the amounts recommended by the city manager and, despite objections by Alderman Enos David that the proposed tax increase was too much for one year, council actually included two items proposed for deletion.

One of the items was a grant to the local welfare council, which last asked for $8,500. Council put the item back in the budget but reduced the amount to $5,000. Also council agreed to membership in the Lake Ontario Regional Development Council, with a membership fee of approximately $2,100. The city manager felt this item should be the responsibility of the city industrial commission.

In outlining the budget estimates prior to getting down to getting down to detailed discussion, Mayor Ellis warned that it was quite obvious that an absolutely no "fat" included which could be pared off.

"I doubt if council can make any changes," he said.

The Mayor noted that the school budget had been reduced by the board's decision not to go ahead this year with a proposed administration building addition.

At the same time the mayor expressed disappointment in the refusal of the provincial government to increase school grants. He said the most recent capsied cost school grant announced by the province last July had meant very little to the city.

Saying that there was nothing the city could do about increased salaries which already had been agreed to in union contract, Mayor Ellis hoped that council would look at the estimates as addicts.

He said the city tax rate in Belleville had been lower than in other centres due to work not being done in other years.

United Churchmen Urge U.S. To Stop Bombing N. Vietnam

KINGSTON (CP)— Delegates at the United Church of Canada's Bay of Quinte conference Thursday passed a resolution to petition the Canadian government's department of external affairs to urge the United States to stop bombing North Vietnam.

The resolution, presented by the conference's committee on evangelism and social service, also urged Canada to stop the export of war materials to the United States.

It urged the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese to refrain from acts of war and to negotiate with the United States and South Vietnamese and urged the United States to hasenily ita ef-forst to seek peace talks.

An amendment to the resolution, which would have deleted the clause regarding export of war materials to the United States, was defeated.

Rev. C. R. Catto, acting secretary of the evangelism and social service committee, urged ministers to expound the issues of the war to their congregations in the hope enough people will "camp on Ottawa's doorstep and save Canada's soul."

A second resolution passed by delegates recommends the conference support the committee's action in seeking to bring together delegates from each conference within the United Church to meet with government officials in Ottawa to discuss bringing about a settlement in Vietnam.

A housing resolution, also presented by the committee on evangelism and social service, was passed by delegates.

It recommends the conference urge all presbyters having growing urban areas to study the housing situation and cooperate in the establishment of local civic housing committees so that low-cost subsidized family housing is made available.

Rev. Harold A. Rosley, senior minister of Christ Church Methodist, New York, told delegates it is time for a revival of integrity and a renewal of responsibility within the Christian church.

"We are never going to find a peaceful world community haggling on the Christmas tree some morning," he said. "Peace will only be achieved because human beings are drawn to God and his will for mankind."

He spent his boyhood years on the farm and was educated in the public and high schools of the county.

Psychiatric Examination Ordered For Man Charged With Murder

A psychiatric examination yesterday was ordered for Kinley Willmot Scott, 37-year-old Maynooth man charged with capital murder in the shooting death of his wife.

The examination was ordered yesterday in the accused man made his second court appearance in Belleville, since his arrest May 7 — the day his wife Doreen was found dead outside their home on Highway 62, 13 miles north of Bancroft.

Scott appeared only briefly before Magistrate T. W. Jackson late yesterday afternoon in Hastings County Court House.

The magistrate set June 28 for opening of a preliminary hearing against Scott who appeared in court with his lawyer, Belleville barrister Robert Temple.

Mr. Temple is defending the accused man under legal aid.

Crown Attorney John Pringle told the magistrate the preliminary hearing would last about three days.

He said both he and Mr. Temple had agreed Scott be examined by Belleville psychiatrist Dr. E. B. Coon.

"I think that direction should be made," agreed Magistrate Jackson. "I'm endorsing an order to that affect."

Throughout his five-minute appearance in an almost-empty courtroom, Scott remained handcuffed to an OPP constable.

Alkenback Questions Job Reply

OTTAWA — Douglas Alkenback, Conservative MP Prince Edward-Lennox, has charged that the Montreal Chamber of Commerce refused a 17-year-old boy a job because he was English-speaking and called him non-Canadian.

Mr. Alkenback said James Monroe wrote a letter to the Chamber seeking employment.

The chamber, says the MP, did not answer but sent the letter back inscribed: "No summer jobs available for non-Canadians".

Mr. Alkenback claimed the chamber had a narrow and ignorant outlook and said he would seek an apology.

May Lock Out Central Bridge Steel Workers

TRENTON — A company official at the Central Bridge plant, O. L. Crosby, field superintendent, said today the Toronto Iron Works of which Central Bridge is a subsidiary, would endorse a lock out tonight at the parent plant and its subsidiaries.

The official said this action was being taken because of the "cut and mouse" game the union was playing with the company.

The structures of steel workers union has called out men on strike in three Ontario locals, and has threatened to call out 1,000 more unless certain demands on a two year contract are met by the companies involved.

So far, no strike notice has been given but members remain working for the Toronto Iron Works interests, but the Central Bridge plant at Trenton is now impossible to plan work with the situation the way it was.

The union has asked for a wage increase across the board of $1.27 an hour, which would bring the hourly rate of structural workers to $4.95 by 1969 and the wage of reinforcing steel workers to $4.75.

Between 30 and 40 Trenton workers we'll be affected by the lock out.

$3,700 Deficit Reported By Institute for Blind

The Hastings County Advisory Board to The Canadian National Institute for the Blind held its annual dinner meeting last night in Shannonville United Church Hall.

The board summed up the year of 1966 by reporting their financial situation, their services to the blind and their results of canvassing.

The expenses last year for the Institute for the Blind were about $23,600 while the income was $19,900 causing a deficit of about $3,700.

The board analyzed its services to the blind. The Institute provides glasses, low vision aids, artificial eyes to those who are not completely blind.

Teachers are provided for the training of blind people, teaching them touch reading and writing, typing, handicrafts and household skills.

The Institute hires blind people and sees that they are hired by other organizations.

Braille and Talking Books are loaned free. Text books are prepared for blind students in University or Secondary Schools.

The Institute offers white canes, guide dogs, Christmas Cheer and service to the unfortunates blinded by war.

Robert L. Porter, Executive Director, United Community Services of Belleville and District, Incorporated spoke to the board.

Mr. Porter pointed out that subtle differences in word usage can interfere with the transmission of ideas.

He suggested that "while lack of familiarity with a key word can often perplex the listener, different interpretation of the meaning of a key word by each of the parties to communication can also signal or distort the message."

"We often find the hard way that words and phrases mean different things in different places."

Two Charged With Possession Of Stolen Goods

Two Belleville area men, Ray Donald Woods, 47, and Everett Raymond Hart, 34, were charged with possession of stolen goods last night.

The stolen articles, a guitar, a microphone and other musical items were stolen from a car that was parked near the Canadian Hotel. The car was owned by Burnham Akey of R. R. 1, Shannonville.

Hart and Woods were apprehended by police near the CPR tracks. The stolen goods in their possession were valued at over $100.

Elsewhere in the city last night there were two minor breakins. At the Pickle Egg-grading Station on Pinnacle St. a rear window was broken and the building entered. About $18 was taken.

Kennedy Chrysler was entered through a broken window as well last night. A small amount of cash was taken out of a drink vending machine.

City work crews today were readying Zwick's Island Centennial project for unofficial opening tomorrow. Playground equipment, barbecues and picnic tables will be available to public.

Zwick's Island Park Ready

Bellevillians get a preview this weekend of their civic Centennial project—the Zwick's Island park.

The park, with finishing touches still upcoming for its gala opening July 1, will be made available to the public starting tomorrow.

The unofficial opening has been slated to coincide with the Victoria Day holiday weekend.

It is already sufficiently near completion to provide park-goers with a number of recreation facilities, say city parks and recreation officials.

Playground equipment will be operational starting tomorrow and tennis courts opened for sports enthusiasts.

The big barbecue pavilion, which dominates the park's skyline, is also ready for use.

Picnic tables also were being moved onto the site this morning in anticipation of holiday crowds.

Utility Committee Delay Fence Installation

TRENTON — Members of the Trenton Public Utility Commission, meeting Thursday agreed to honor a request from the Trenton parks' board that the installation of a fence around the water tank on Mount Pelion be delayed until a report on a planned parks' operations has been received by the board. Councillors and chief executives are compiling the report.

Commission chairman C. A. Baker said he hoped the survey would be forthcoming soon, as the commission is anxious to provide protection for the recently painted water tank. At the last it was disfaced the surface of the tank by scratching it or taking pot shots at it with rifles.

The occupant of 11 McGill Street has turned over a commission offer of $32.75 for digging up waterpipes to repair a leak on his property. The commission is withdrawing the offer and will lodge a denial of any responsibility in the matter.

The commission will, however, pay W. J. Graham Jr. $8.50. Mr. Graham paid this amount to an electrician and a tractor to search for a fault in one of his appliances. He had been told by hydro servicemen that their installations were not responsible for a power leak in his home. Later it developed that a hydro-installed meter was at fault.

The commission will pay local developer William Sidor $200 for a hydrant installed in his development — and may pay for a second hydrant if it can be established two were installed.

The commission will not pay Mr. Sidor six per cent interest on his outlay for installation of a watermain in his sub-division. It will pay half the cost of the installation itself.

A hydro employee, Clifford Bakker, was advised to await the opinion of a medical specialist to establish whether record of his double stems from an earlier injury. He may be entitled to compensation from the board.

The commission Thursday established allowable travel rates for 100 gallon hot water tanks. Cost of the tank is $175 and installation is $125. If the tank is purchased, but not installed by the utility, the cost will be $225. Rental cost is $5 per month.

Fair Board Plans Campaign To Boost Aug. 15-19 Event

Belleville Fair officials have decided their annual exhibition is in the "big business" category and they are thinking in terms of hiring special assistance for promotional activities.

The idea was suggested last night at a fair board meeting by publicity chairman Phil Flagler who pointed out that this year the fair would be competing with numerous centennial year attractions and every effort should be taken to promote the show.

But, he said, the job would be more than volunteer fair board members could handle and suggested the hiring of an expert in the field.

The board went along with the idea and authorized the publicity committee to investigate the hiring of a person or persons to assist in promotional activities.

Attractions committee chairman Harry Rollins said the five-day Belleville Fair would open on Tuesday, August 15 with the Quinte Western Horse Show as the opening day attraction.

Chicago Black Hawk hockey stars Robert and Dennis Hull will be invited to officially open the fair.

The Wednesday fair attraction will be the Trans Canada Hell Drivers. On Thursday night an amateur show featuring Bay of Quinte talent will be the main attraction. Local musicians Douglas Asselstine and Joseph Burchill have already started lining up the show.

Friday night at the fair will be the piston pushers' night with motorcycle races planned to entertain the grandstand crowd.

Then on Saturday, the final night of the fair, will be the annual Black Diamond Stake Race.

Hunting Charge Dismissed

TRENTON — A charge of careless hunting against Frank Schiliaci of Toronto, in connection with the September death of 35-year-old Carlo Triolo of Weston, was dismissed in Brighton court on Wednesday by Magistrate R. C. Batten.

Judge to Set Price of Land At Hearing

TRENTON — June 29 has been set as the date for a hearing before Judge J. Currelly in Cobourg and between lawyers for the Trenton Public Utilities Commission and Murray township farmer John Alyea.

At this meeting, the judge will set the price of 11.9 acres of land, formerly owned by Mr. Alyea and expropriated last year by the PUC.

The judge will consider a claim by the Alyea interests that the value of the remaining property has fallen because water supplies on the expropriated land have been cut-off for stock watering.

Mr. Alyea fought the PUC's expropriation moves to the highest Ontario courts, and after losing out, took a protest to the government in the annual United Farmers' Union submission, regarding the expropriation of farm land by municipal bodies.

Meanwhile, the members of the Trenton commission voted yesterday to impose a penalty clause of $50 a day on the Mc-Willis Construction Company if Willis doesn't "get cracking" on clearing the water storage pond site for which the Alyea property was needed.

Prairie Affluence

We have always regarded this country's wheat farmers as among the most affluent of men. And deservedly so, because of their industry which in recent years has led to record crops and substantial sales overseas.

One we met some years ago is London-born and farms in Alberta. There he was, aboard a passenger liner out of Vancouver and heading for the South Pacific. The summer season over and his crop sold, he was ready to enjoy some leisure time in the sun. The previous year he had been to Vietnam, of all places.

It is difficult to reconcile such obvious material wellbeing with a recent comment like this one by the Regina Leader-Post:

"Prairie farmers who have been producing record crops and helping to avert a balance-of-payments crisis are among those who bear the brunt of hardships arising from spiralling prices and wages. . ."

Or this one by The Windsor Star, commenting on the recent tariff cuts in Geneva: "What is known is that our wheat growers will get more for their grain. The more money goes into their pockets the more they will have available for spending. . ."

The Star then adds hastily, in parenthesis . . . "the same applies of course, to more money in anybody's pockets."

Well, yes, we suppose — but to stay with the subject of the wheat farmers, whatever the inflationary pressures of our day, and they are considerable, the prairie growers are cushioned against them more effectively than most Canadians these days.

Government Costs

With Government spending up 30 per cent in four years, and the 1967 payroll estimates amounting to $1,307,302,406 (an increase over 1966 of $142,000) Canadians may wonder what has become of the recommendations of the Glassco Commission for eliminating extravagance on the Ottawa scene.

Judging by the ever-increasing proliferation of staff and, consequently, spending, there appears to be no ceiling on Civil Service operations.

Government publicity alone consumes thousands of dollars. In recent days this newspaper has received five booklets of "General Information on the Centennial of Canadian Confederation." Published in both English and French they class as one with Centennial Organizations, Performing and Visual Arts, Historical and General (information), Public Relations, and Federal Departments. Since they are numbered in sequence in the box measuring 1-4-6-8-9) it is clear there are others — but multiply these by the thousand for country-wide (perhaps world-wide) distribution and who is going to miss them?

The same day this office received a 33-page memorandum of the agreement "covering a comprehensive rural development plan for the interlake area of Manitoba."

There is nothing like being informed and keeping abreast of things — and no organization takes its work in this regard as seriously (or with such disregard for cost) as the federal government.

More Hippies

Rev. David Wilkerson, a young minister who has been working with drug addicts in New York and people addicted to "hard" narcotics such as heroin told a Hamilton audience the other day that a new group has appeared among these non-conformist members of society.

The minister describes these people as "goodniks turned beatniks," young people who drop out of society to become members of the hippie crowd.

It says much for such a man — Mr. Wilkerson is 35 — that he continues to work among the best generation even though he predicts that in the next two years between 750,000 and 1,000,000 teenagers will leave home in the States and head for such areas as the Height-Ashbury, the hippie district of San Francisco.

Toronto has its Yorkville and many other big cities their equivalents of these places which Ontario legislature member Syl Apps recently called a "festering sore."

Mr. Wilkerson, who calls LSD proponent Dr. Timothy Leary "the devil incarnate," suggests three things which might stop the "moral backsliding" that accompanies use of hallucinatory drugs: a spiritual awakening among the users, greater international effort to control the drug traffic and, stricter national laws regarding drugs.

Mr. Wilkerson and others like him have a formidable task on their hands, particularly in view of the apparent deterioration of traditional values among large numbers of young people. They may still be only a minority, but it is a very sizeable one and it is sad to hear of them forsaking the society that offers enough of the good life to satisfy anyone for the twilight existence of the hippie crowd.

Junta Rules on Everything From Teen Mores to Religion

By PHILIP DOPOULOS

ATHENS (AP)—The military dictatorship in three weeks has asserted its absolute dominance over virtually all aspects of Greek public life.

King Constantine, like all other figures of Greece's "old" political scene, appears to have been no more than a bystander.

The 26-year-old monarch has had no visible role in day-to-day government operations, though he is reported to be well-informed on decisions.

The junta's decrees, coming with unheard-of swiftness in this country where government usually are quick to change and slow to act, have dealt with subjects ranging from appearance and behavior of youths to the appointment of leaders in the Greek Orthodox Church.

Trying to improve the moral calibre of Greek youth, the regime bulged mini-skirts for schoolgirls and long hair for schoolboys and told them to go to church regularly. It moved to keep wandering beatniks out of Greece.

Claiming public administration was corrupt, it abolished political patronage jobs. Government offices were given 15 days to clean up pending business.

Civil servants were told they no longer were considered "permanent" employees.

All labor strikes were banned, but the government moved to win support from the working class. Employers were told they could not lay off employees and could not cheat them out of promised wages. Several owners of business were jailed for allegedly short changing employees.

The regime froze commodity prices and eliminated middleman selling agricultural products. Potato and mutton prices dropped. To cut down large beef imports, the government Friday banned the sale of Asian Wednesdays except in first-class restaurants and hotels.

The Orthodox Church of Greece, which has a history of disagreement with the state, lost its rights to elect bishops. The 68-year-old primate of Greece, Archbishop Chrysostomos, was forced out of office by a government rule retiring all clerics 80 or older.

Thousands of politicians and suspected "dangerous Communists" were rounded up in the early hours of the April 21 coup.

Most are still in confinement. Screening committees began examining the cases of more than 6,000 political prisoners on the Aegean island of Yioura Friday.

The Communists & the United Democratic Left party was banned, as were leftist, right-and and centre-of-the-road political youth clubs.

A total of 284 private organizations, including unions and sports and cultural clubs, were disbanded, apparently on the grounds they were leftist-dominated.

So far six mayors and communal leaders have been dismissed as unreliable.

The Canadian government authorized an inquiry into the Beauharnois power scandal 36 years ago today — in 1931. A group of businessmen and political fund-collectors had built a power station on the St. Lawrence River which was a sound engineering proposition but had lined their pockets with several million dollars in the process. W. L. McDougald had to resign his Senate seat and the top two company officials resigned but there were no prosecutions.

Education Burden

Taxes Discourage Home Owners

Kingston Whig-Standard

Housing: Is there a solution? There is, according to Mr. Grant Duff, past president of the Ontario division of the Urban Development Institute. He believes that if the province assumed all school costs most of the housing problems would disappear.

According to those who believe as Mr. Duff believes — and they include politicians, developers, industrial boom-buyers — the enormous load of school taxes borne by the local municipalities is the main reason for the fact that so many people cannot afford to buy their own homes.

According to this thesis low-cost housing cannot thrive because big housing developments call for schools and the municipalities simply cannot afford the added costs. Roughly speaking, if a house is assessed at $5,000 the taxes on it will be about $450, half of which goes into education.

Again, roughly, it costs between $400 and $600 to educate each elementary school pupil in Ontario, depending upon the location. The higher figure would be found in Toronto and other high-density areas. It can be seen from these figures that taxation from home assessment leaves the municipalities in a financial hole because about 75 per cent. of the cost of educating each child must be carried by local taxes.

Naturally, if a municipality can attract industry — which pays taxes but has no children (except, of course, those of its workers), it will do so. And all any case, whether Britain entered the European Common Market or not.

The conflict of interest will be sufficiently resolved, in the British view, if Britain wins the right to reduce her preferences to the Commonwealth gradually; they would be "phased out." This would allow time for members to find alternative markets. It is the principle of the "limited commitment."

It is a solution likely to bring complaints from the Common Market and the Commonwealth alike. For the Common Market this "passing out" (if accepted at all) will be too slow, and for the Commonwealth it will be too fast. And to what extent "alternative markets" would be available is an unanswered question.

But it would be unrealistic not to recognize that Britain must make a final decision in her own interests. If Britain fails to enter the Common Market, Commonwealth preferences will still be revised. And if she is admitted to the Common Market, Commonwealth preferences will be maintained only in part and only for a time.

Britain's Common Market Dilemma

Montreal Gazette

Conflict of interest" is an old phrase. It has large range, for it may include anything from a dilemma to an inconvenience. And a "conflict of interest" is something that Great Britain faces, as she again seeks membership in the European Common Market.

On the one hand, Britain's own economic problems are such as only admission to the Common Market may ease. On the other hand, Britain still feels an obligation to the members of the Commonwealth that are heavily dependent upon the preferential treatment their products receive in the British market.

The negotiations would be so much simpler if Britain and the Six would behave as though both forgot about the Commonwealth. The attempt to open special concessions for the Commonwealth out of the Common Market was a failure. Similarly, the Australian solutions failed some five years ago. The Common Market's attitude is: "You are welcome, but don't expect to bring the family."

It is clear now, under the system of Commonwealth preferences, exports from the Commonwealth to Britain (with a few exceptions) are admitted free. If Britain entered the Common Market, Commonwealth products would have to face whatever tariffs the Market as a whole may impose on all goods and products from outside.

Canada, like other members of the Commonwealth, would be affected. New Zealand would be affected most of all. Forty per cent of New Zealand's exports to Britain are duty-free into Britain, are of a kind that would come under the Common Market tariff.

The Labor Government is making clear today, as Prime Minister Macmillan's Conservative Government did six years ago, that Britain will not enter the Common Market unless concessions are made for the Commonwealth. The Secretary of State for Commonwealth Affairs in the Labor Cabinet, Mr. Herbert Bowden, has declared: "I could never be a party to turning our backs on the Commonwealth."

But the conflict of interest is very real. For Commonwealth trade, important as it is, has fewer attractions for Britain than the Common Market would have to offer. Mr. Bowden though not a careful reservation, admitted the existence of the arguments against the modern Commonwealth: "that politically and economically Commonwealth countries do not show in the future as they have done so" — sometimes they tend to act as a pressure group on Britain — and that she is certainly no longer a soft market."

It was one thing when Britain admired raw materials and foodstuffs from the Commonwealth and was willing them on attractive market for her manufactured goods. But the modern Commonwealth, while still exporting the raw materials and food, has come to be also a producer of manufactured goods; and it wants to sell them to the willing them, in the British market.

There is a feeling in Britain that she is no longer wanted to give a deal as it used to be. As Prime Minister Macmillan said in 1961, Commonwealth influences will have to be revised in

Those Apologetic Types

Christian Science Monitor

Here are a few questions we've been wanting to ask:

Why do would-be humorists invariably add "no pun intended" to a joke that is precisely what they intended?

Why, when a speaker says, "No names, no dirty dates," does that remark (as any audience grimly knows) herald the inception of a lengthy discourse?

Why, after someone solemnly affirms, "Now I don't want to get personal," or "I know it's none of my business," does he proceed to make the most personal of observations and to make the matter his urgent business?

If "it goes without saying," then why, very tell, does the speaker insist upon saying it?

Why does the word manage to get around so fast when each person says to the next, "Promise you won't tell a soul"?

Why solemnly promise.

If "it is perfectly obvious", why need a lengthy explanation follow? And why, after the explanation, do we still fail to understand it?

And why does half the human race protest, "I simply haven't a thing to wear," when — now I don't want to get personal but it is perfectly obvious that — I mean it goes without saying that (no pun intended) —their wardrobes are crammed with the latest fashions? Yes, why?

Hire More Staff

Research Service Active, But Few Take Advantage of It

By RONALD LEBEL

OTTAWA (CP)—MPs and senators often complain they lack research assistance in digging up background information on the issues being debated in Parliament.

Now, it turns out that the main research service available to the 265 MPs and 102 senators gets surprisingly little use.

The parliamentary library has hired 10 research assistants to gather data and write detailed reports on any topic requested by the legislators.

In a report tabled in both Houses this week, parliamentary librarian Erik Spicer said that only 13 senators and 55 MPs took advantage of the new service in 1966.

In all, 126 research reports were prepared during the year —110 for Liberals, 64 for opposition parties and 32 for interna-quiries in 1966, an increase of 1,100 over the previous year. In addition, the branch made 4,800 copies of newspaper clippings for MPs and senators.

Still, the division for expanded research facilities continues in the Commons, where two resolutions on the subject were introduced this week.

Herb Grey (Liberal-Essex West) proposes that an administrative assistant be hired for each MP to help out with research and with communications with senior civil servants about constituents' problems.

Alfred Rieles (PC—Wellington South) suggests that assistance should be young political scientists, journalists and lawyers brought to Ottawa for "internship" stints of six to nine months.

In past debates on similar proposals, MPs have made the point that their research needs are highly specialized because Legislators get some research help from other sources as well. Position papers are drafted by party headquarters and by executive assistants to party leaders and ministers.

The reference branch of the parliamentary library answers specific questions of fact and provides reading lists on any topic of interest to a law-maker.

This branch handled 3,871 in-they look for pointed answers to their questions, not a pile or for information about regional problems.

For this reason, they would prefer to supervise their own research assistants rather than rely on impartial, broad material prepared by an independent staff.

The parliamentary library this year had a staff of 80 and a budget of $640,000, a boost of $100,000 in the last year.

Quebec Sound Financially, Investment Firm Analysis Shows

MONTREAL (CP) — An economic survey of Quebec published recently by a Canadian investment and security firm says economic policies adopted by the Quebec government have produced a generally sound financial condition.

The report by Wood Gundy Securities Ltd. is generally optimistic and predicts continued financial stability for the province.

A spokesman for Wood Gundy said the report was drawn up because there did not appear to be "sufficient correct information" about Quebec's financial situation.

It describes an apparent lack of economic balance in the provincial economy in the early 1960s which led the Quebec government to recognize "the need for a new and aggressive approach to its economy."

The initial phase of the program was development of a more substantial substructure to encourage greater industrial development by private industry.

"The central feature of this phase was the integration of the province's electricity - producing facilities by the Quebec Hydro-Electric Commission."

The plan's second phase was decentralization of growth from Montreal to other regions of Quebec.

The 32-page report says Quebec has matched the national rate of growth of the gross national product — about 7.9 per cent—over the last six years. Incomes had risen significantly and unemployment had dropped substantially.

"The improvement . . . is consistent with the strength prevalent in the national economy but the influence of Quebec's public sector has also been a factor."

The example, three automobile companies have recently been encouraged to set up assembly operations in Quebec. Although two of these are presently experiencing a costly break-in period, their introduction has created the impetus to assist the growth of manufacturing industries . . ."

The report says private capital formation in Quebec, despite its volume, has lagged in comparison with the Canadian average.

Public spending in Quebec grew at an average annual rate of 14.5 per cent during the 1961 65 period while the average rate for Canada was 3.1 per cent.

"The eventual result of this spending will be creation of an economic environment that should attract the balanced industrial structure necessary."

The report says although Quebec has borrowed heavily over the last few years, the province's debt is sound by statistical standards and "ranks as good quality for investment purposes."

Gold Hike Not Practical U.S. Banker Argues

MONTREAL (CP) — Raising the price of gold will not solve any of the world's monetary problems and would likely create some new ones, a United States banker said Thursday.

His view, expressed at the 21st congress of the International Chamber of Commerce, was challenged by South African officials.

George S. Moore, president of the First National City Bank of New York, said that the monetary problems now said to be created by the low price of gold would simply reappear as soon as countries had run through the additional reserves created by a price increase.

W. J. Busschau, chairman of the South African delegation and a director of Consolidated Goldfields Ltd., said, however, that investigations by South African and other gold producers indicated there is reason to believe that with an adequate gold price adjustment, gold production would be enough to feed official monetary stocks.

"The sad story of recent years is that many countries have had to accumulate dollars and sterling balances instead of receiving final payment in gold, the finally acceptable international money," he said.

"In my opinion the International Chamber of Commerce should in its further investigations return to a fundamental study and waste no further time on pious meaningless remarks about the phoney schemes of so-called monetary reform."

Mr. Moore told a press conference that a rise in the price of gold, now set officially at $35 an ounce in United States currency, would be like pouring gasoline on the flames of inflation.

Inflation had been reasonably stable since the end of the Second World War, but all governments were fighting to contain its dangers.

"Raising the price of gold would immediately accelerate price levels throughout the world," he said.

France has recently been leading the fight of several countries, including South Africa, as major gold producer, to double the price of gold to $70 an ounce.

Canada, the world's third - largest producer, has not joined the campaign.

Milton Gilbert, technical adviser to the chamber's commission on international monetary relations and economic advisor and head of the economic and monetary department of the Bank for International Settlements in Washington, said it is obvious the world could have a monetary system that was not based on gold.

If someone could find a way of producing gold at 10 cents an ounce, it would be worthless as a monetary base, he said.

Aims Compatible

Profit First Then Charity, Firms Told

MONTREAL (CP) — Private enterprises were told Thursday they have a duty to the community and a duty to make money but they should not be charity bazaars or company profit-making.

The warning came in one of six committee reports made to 1,200 delegates at a plenary session of the World Congress of International Chamber of Commerce.

Leonard Hynes, president of Canadian Industries Ltd., said if a conflict arises between community obligations and profit-making "business success should not be jeopardized by charity."

In the long run the aims were compatible since "the long-term success of a firm is bound up with its environment."

"Also if companies can help solve problems like air pollution and employee housing before they become a public nuisance, then there is less chance of mandatory control being applied from outside inter," Mr. Hynes said.

M. A. Rangoonwala, head of a Pakistan delegation to the conference and chairman of the National Bank of Pakistan, said if private enterprise is to be successful in developing countries it should not be hampered by too many government controls.

There were areas where governments of developing countries were obliged to step in, but in areas where private enterprise was likely to be successful the state should not intervene.

Mr. Rangoonwala criticized governments of some developing countries for undue concentration on the industrial sector while ignoring agriculture, often the means of livelihood of 80 per cent of the population.

He suggested external aid funds should supplement the economic efforts of less-developed countries. "The main resources of these countries must be their own people and own natural products," he said.

Otto Wolff von Amerongen, chairman of the German delegation, said the most important business development in recent years is the growth of huge multinational corporations able to put the latest production methods into operation and respond to the needs of a mass market.

"Governments should learn that no particular size or shape of company has been proven preferable to any other," he said.

A. K. Watson of the United States, vice-chairman of International Business Machines Corp., called for more sharing of technological knowledge between big and small companies and developed and underdeveloped countries.

Mr. Watson said faster technological development is "well within our capacity for adjustment" and would be beneficial to the economies of all countries.

That's how White Satin is. Still made to Sir Robert Burnett's original 1770 London Dry formula; still exactly as dry and satin-smooth today as it ever was. After all, when great taste can keep a gin famous for generations on both sides of the ocean—we wouldn't dream of changing it. What we have done, though, is change the White Satin bottle. Student Protesters Few at Queen's Dean Claims Belleville and District Queen's Alumnae held their annual spring dinner at Tabernacle United Church Wednesday.

Speaker of the evening was Dr. T. Stewart Webster, dean of the new department of student affairs. He began his address with a statement from a Shepherd professor of Harvard University, who stigmatized students as being "indicted, tried, convicted and at home, living in a permissive society, educated at permissive schools, unacquainted with hard work or discipline. They come to colleges ready to inveigh on authority and have an exaggerated idea of their own importance." This statement was made in 1855.

Babies still have to learn to walk and talk and young people still have to go from a state of dependence to independence, Dr. Webster said.

Authorities must understand attitudes and how attitudes are changing. The student of today has been encouraged to take part in tedious chores around the house. He knows tv is not reality and is critical of his elders.

Dr. Webster said student criticism that get into newspapers are the work of about five per cent of the student body. Of the element there are two distinct types. The first is the truly alienated, lonely student who resents being cared for and goes to considerable trouble not to vest or share and feels apart from the community. These are the ones who take to drugs and are emotionally unstable.

The second group comes from families with a liberal outlook, the mother usually active in community affairs, the father a professional man who has had to compromise both ways. The children reject compromise, cling to their ideals and believe the world is run by selfish, hypocritical people. They haven't had experience in life as it is lived.

The alienated types are not keen on organization. The others feel that effective has to be made at once to clean up the mess the world is in. The remaining 95 per cent also appear to be idealistic and on the whole well-adjusted.

There is also a group of students intensely interested in doing their best. They have the business of attending university seriously and live in a state of much travel and pressure. They need to be convinced getting an education is not 100 per cent easy.

Dr. Webster ended by saying students seem younger, livelier and more beautiful than ever. They are critical but will remember when they learn that doesn't we good to them.

Dr. Webster was thanked by the new president, Dr. J. Neiles.

Baby Feeding Outlined To Hospital Auxiliary

Infant feeding at Belleville General Hospital was the subject of a talk given by Dr. J. E. Neiles at the May meeting of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary in Education Hall. Mrs. H. LeBel introduced the speaker, a pediatrician.

The new system of infant feeding, termed Benifizer, has been in use at the hospital for a week and is popular with mothers, nurses and babies. Disposable containers eliminate the use of sterilized glass bottles and no formula preparation is necessary. The factors contribute to the success of the new feeding system.

Mrs. L. J. M. Tremblay thanked the speaker.

Mrs. W. G. Harvey told members of a new services undertaken by the auxiliary the welcoming of nurses arriving from other countries.

The program will include hospitality and help with accommodation. Distribution of flowers to patients is another addition to the Auxiliary's work, with Mrs. J. R. Blackburn in charge.

The Auxiliary will entertain the graduating class of a mother and daughter tea in Education Hall, May 27.

Space Sold For Names On Quilt

KINGSTON, N.S. (CP)—The St. Mary's Anglican Church women's auxiliary here has been making memories as a quilt as its centennial project.

Members have collected 883 names of persons in this part of the Annapolis Valley and embroidered them on the mammoth-size bedspread.

Dot Cleveland, who laid the quilt out in 37 blocks, says it took half an hour for each name to be embroidered, adding up to a total of more than 440 hours.

The names were embroidered around the centennial maple leaf in each block of the quilt.

The women have not yet decided what to do with the bedspread, although they would like to see it exhibited at Expo 67.

After that?

"Well, when our community centre gets built, maybe we could hang it up there," says Mrs. Cleveland.

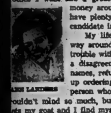
Why doesn't Brights produce "vintage" wines ?

A "vintage" wine is a wine made only from grapes gathered in one season. Some years the summers are hot, sunny and dry. The grapes on the vines are big, juicy and heavy with natural sugar; make a great wine. Other years the summers are cold, wet and dismal.

To produce vintage wines—as some countries do—would mean the quality of our wines would vary year to year. The 74 Sherry you serve this month, could be a different wine than the one you taste in a few months' time. When you opened a bottle of Menor St. Davids Sauterne you couldn't be sure just what the wine would taste like.

Canadians demand consistent quality in the products they buy. That's why Brights wines are blended wines. We blend the wines from different years, balancing the various gradations in flavour and body, so that the wine we eventually bottle this year is identical in quality and in taste with that we bottled last year, regardless of the sun that shone on Niagara in any particular summer.



That's why we produce no vintage wines. Just fine Canadian wines year after year after year after year after year after year after year after year.

Ann Landers

College Student Should Be Treated as Adult

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a 20-year-old college student (male) who lives at home, has a good car, all the clothes I want and a great stereo. There is no shortage of money around here. I maintain a B average, have plenty of friends and am an officer candidate in the Naval Reserve.

ANN LANDERS

My life is in pretty good shape all the way around. The only person I have real trouble with is my father. Whenever we have a disagreement, which is often he calls me names, refuses to listen to my side and ends up ordering me around like a servant. I'm a person who hates to be bossed. If he'd ask I couldn't mind so much, but his "Lord and Master" attitude gets my goat and I find myself hating him.

I realize there is no love in our family except the love for money. I can't do anything about that, but maybe I can do something to improve my relationship with my father. What do you suggest? — WILLING BUT UNABLE.

DEAR WILLING: First, accept the fact that your father is an unhappy about his your relationship as you — maybe more so. He wishes it were better but the poor guy doesn't know what to do about it.

Some changes need to be made and you are the one who will have to make them. Stay off subjects and out of situations which create conflicts. You know better than anyone what they are. If he asks you to do something, do it without argument. Watch your language when you speak to him. Be respectful and considerate, even if he is not. The greater the contrast between good manners and bad, the hostile behavior, the sooner he will come to realize that you are a mature young man who can no longer be dealt with like a little kid.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am the father of three pre-teen daughters and I read your column every day. Frankly, I am worried to death about the permissive So-What-Why-Not attitude toward sex around today's teen-agers.

Recently a 16-year-old girl wrote in to ask you why she shouldn't sleep with her boy friend. She said he was becoming increasingly insistent and she was afraid if she didn't give in soon he would drop her in favor of someone who was more co-operative.

Have we parents failed so miserably in our attempts to instill decent values in our daughters that they would prostitute themselves in order to hang onto a boy friend who isn't worth a hill of beans in the first place?

Surely all teen-agers don't feel this way. I would like to see some letters in your column from girls who consider themselves real people rather than plaything and sex objects. Do such teens actually exist? — FATHER OF GIRLS.

DEAR FATHER: Of course such girls exist. I have visited with them in our high schools and talked with them in private sessions. They are alert and sharp-eyed and nobody is going to sell them a pig in a poke of kicks.

I extend to these girls an invitation to write and tell me why they are holding out instead of putting out. I'll print the best one.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Walnut Dream Squares

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: My sister is always singing your praises . . . now I have moved here and become acquainted with your column. I make Walnut Squares and like the flavor . . . but they do not cut nicely . . . the meringue pulls into pieces and will not take neatly. I would be grateful for your help. — Mrs. R. E. W. McF.

ANSWER: In your recipe there is too much sugar for the meringue topping. The correct recipe follows for —

WALNUT DREAM SQUARES

Base:
¼ cup butter
¼ cup icing sugar
¼ cup shortening
2 cups rolled oats
1 cup sifted all-purpose flour
Topping:
½ cup (approximately) red currant or apple jelly or raspberry or strawberry jam.
2 egg whites
½ cup granulated sugar
¼ tsp. cinnamon
¼ tsp. salt
1 cup finely chopped walnuts (or unblanched filberts or almonds)

In beater bowl blend thoroughly the butter shortening icing sugar yolks and flour. Pat this base mixture evenly with floured finger tips into 13 x 9" ungreased pan.

Get-going Activities

Whether it is boating, badminton or bowling these activities help release lension, improve health and regulate weight. Michele Lee illustrates how to keep grooming guard up and still participate in any of these sports.

The New Do Generation Wants to Participate

By Reba & Bonnie Churchill

The new Do generation is no longer content to spectate; it wants to participate. This is particularly true in athletics where get-going activity helps release tension, improve health and regulate weight. For instance, as well as toning and toning the body, sailing uses up 175 calories per hour. Coupled with these plus factors are certain beauty advantages, as actress Michele Lee discovered. Casting at the horizon for short periods of time relaxes the eyes, creasing the lids lessens squint lines, while enjoying the purified air of a boat ride fosters circulation and breathing.

Sports are a special boon to the figure-watcher who is really bored with regimented exercises. A rousing game of badminton, or whatever your physician prescribes, is an entertaining way to streamline and sustain simultaneously. Just be sure to check these pointers: cost tips and face protectors on tennis racket so that you can concentrate on the "birdie," not the burn. Also, time your games and you can estimate the number of calories utilized. (Badminton burns up approximately 180 units per hour.) To lose two pounds a week, a normally healthy person reduces his food intake 1,000 calories a day. Yet, expend energy via sports and, medical authorities point out, you can generally lose the same amount with only a 500 calorie reduction.

Whether your game is bowling or volleyball, joining a group activity provides mental, as well as physical, benefits. The surge of competition, the exchange of ideas, the thrust of achievement are positive values. They promote awareness and consideration of others. Never become so involved in scoring a point that you neglect good sportsmanship. Also, as Michele, seen in the Mirisch Production, "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying," illustrates, keep your grooming guard up. Play it cool with perspiration pads for the hands, make-up blotters for the face, and a cheery attitude for everyone.

Didn't Want To Linger As Invalid

NEW YORK (AP) — Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt realized in her final days that she had an incurable illness and tried to die rather than linger as an invalid, says her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt.

"The patient's flesh became so perforated with almost daily blood transfusions that it was difficult to find a fresh place to insert the needle," Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt wrote in the June issue of Good Housekeeping.

The article is an excerpt from her book, I Love a Rogue, telling of Mrs. Roosevelt's last days and funeral.

She tells how Elliott stood by his mother's bed as she awakened briefly with the pain of another transfusion and whispered:

"Let me die! "Let me die!"

Mrs. Roosevelt died in 1962 of tuberculosis and anemia.

How Does One Choose Right Church?

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: I am a 16-year-old girl. My parents were of mixed marriages (my mother is Anglican and my father is non-practising Catholic) and they decided between themselves that I should choose the religion I wanted to follow, I say.

Would you please send me names of books on different religions and people I could contact to make further investigations? — Undecided.

Dear Undecided: Getting religion and choosing a church are two different things. From where I sit, religion is a way of life, and there are earnest Christians in all denominations.

My own minister says: "The great experiences of life surround the Christian virtues of faith, hope and love. You may read about these but you are no further ahead until you have a friend whom you find trustworthy and loving.

"A young girl may read about God and what others say about Him, but what she really wants to do is to come to know Him herself."

If you can find a teen-agers' discussion group in one of your neighborhood churches, invite yourself in. If there is a summer camp you can attend where at least part of the time is occupied with threshing out the connection between eternal truths and 197 turnoff, sign up for it.

Such experiences will point the way to the right choice for you.

Dear Doris: Three cheers and a loud hurrah to high school students for their letter in your column.

They make a lot more sense than some of us so-called adults. I believe they are telling the truth when they say that sex education in schools encourages loose morals in teenagers, and that adults keep pushing sex at them.

Many nations have found in cliff past that loose or no morals have not been decrity. young people have more need of models than critics. — Grandpaw.

Dear Grandpaw: Would you say that education about the evils of alcoholism would encourage drinking, too? Is a person protected from the evil of any kind of behavior, by being kept ignorant of it?

Confidential to F.D.: Supposing your dissection did make a direction of him (and I wouldn't count on it), which is worse — one deviant or three? You can't go on ending the impossible forever.

You'll need steady, personal support if you are to take action; far more than a few words from me. A trained counsellor will not be fooled by your husband's type of personality, even if he is smooth tongued and able to make you look like a hysterical fault-finder in the eyes of the police.

Doris welcomes your comments and ideas. Write to her, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.

Points for Parents

Accidents in the home occur most often when family members are hungry, statistics reveal. Children climb up to get at food, mothers are harried and everyone's coordination and alertness is impaired.

A little snack not only will still hunger pangs, it also will help keep children from bored and restless as they wait for dinner.

Italian Drivers Are Mad!

ROME — You have to see Italian drivers to believe them, and, even then, it seems like a sequence from some old Mack Sennett comedy routine in speed-up motion.

In their little toy cars — looking something like those Dodgems in American amusement parks — which have more than doubled in number during the last decade, Italians have created a traffic and parking problem in Rome that makes mid-town Manhattan or Chicago's Loop seem like a pastoral landscape.

Like the code duello of medieval days, there is a code automotivi that no stranger can hope to learn without long (and sometimes painful) instruction. Italian drivers will not yield an inch, except to the imminent threat of brute force. They cut in front of heavy buses, slither across the path of lumbering trucks, and regard pedestrians as so many moving targets challenging the accuracy of their aim.

Yet, all is bluff and bravado. Autos don't collide nearly as often as the frightened spectator would imagine, and the rate of pedestrian deaths is no more alarming than everywhere else. The horn is used as an instrument of terror; the brake is used strictly for emergencies, and is regarded with embarrassment, as a symbol of defeat in this perpetual automotive cold war.

What is also surprising in this mad tangle of traffic — unless one understands the Italian temperament and character — is that so few of the fiat-wavings end in actual physical combat.

Italians think it crudely uncivilized — "barbaro" — to engage in fisticuffs, and about the only way to provoke a fight is to make the ultimate insult — the sign of the horns, implying that the man is a cuckold. Fiercely possessive, and jealous of their wives' fidelity, Italian men will strike only when that line is crossed.

Speaking of women, the tremendous increase in availability of the auto has also changed the habits of Italian girls since I was last here. They are no longer exclusively at home with their mothers, as in the past; many now drive their own cars, or tool around in their boy friends' cars; and the number of single, independent young women now to be seen unescorted in Rome is unprecedented in this city's history.

The American influence is even more enormous than it was after the war. Though we are not liked as much, we are imitated more, envied more, and admired more for our material way of life. The Italian's passionate devotion to his automobile makes our own love affair with Detroit seem a pallid thing indeed.

Ford Predicts Big Jump in Car Prices

DETROIT (AP)—Henry Ford II told the U.S. car-buying public Thursday it will have to dig deeper into its pocket to pay for 1968 models.

The chairman of Ford Motor Co. said at his firm's stockholders' meeting that "substantial price increases" are in the offing, due partly to costs of government auto safety standards and air pollution requirements.

He did not outline in detail the amount of the increase but previous estimates had been that price tags of next year's models will be up by $100 to $150.

Ford devoted a major share of his report to the forthcoming auto labor contract talks with the United Auto Workers Union. "There are indications that there will be many difficult issues and that the union's expectations may be unreasonably high," he said.

"In 1914, my grandfather—Henry Ford—made history by introducing the $5 day. By the middle of this year, Ford's average labor cost is expected to be $5 per hour.

"We have not, of course, received the UAW's specific demands but there are indications that there will be many difficult issues and that the union's expectations may be unreasonably high.

"We shall bargain flexibly this summer to reach a settlement that is responsive to all of the essential interests involved, including our employees."

Ford continued his attack on some of the government's new federal safety standards as he told stockholders:

"Unfortunately, we have had serious difficulties establishing meaningful communications with the government. As a result, we have incurred extraordinary costs.

"And we, and other manufacturers, have been forced to oppose the imposition of some standards or proposed standards that would be totally unreasonable and unrealistic or impossible to meet in the time available to us.

"We have been forced, in other words, into a position appearing unco-operative and seeming to resist actions that presumably would improve the safety of our products. This is not our intention."

The federal government will hold hearings in Detroit and Washington next week to hear arguments from Ford and other car makers seeking easing of some standard in particular — that governing the makeup of the car interior.

Winds Delay Yacht

LONDON (CP)—Light winds are succeeding where huge seas failed in delaying the last run for home of Britain's globe-girdling lone yachtsman, Sir Francis Chichester.

Chichester, 66, anticipated he would reach Plymouth at the end of his 19,000-mile world voyage by May 24.

But a spokesman for his wife said Thursday it now is unlikely the yachtsman will get there in his 53-foot Gipsy Moth IV until May 27. Other reports make his arrival as late as May 29.

The spokesman said that as a result of the delay it may be necessary to rearrange the formal knighting of Chichester by the Queen.

The Queen was to knight Chichester at Greenwich Palace on the River Thames June 2 with the sword given to Sir Francis Drake after his round-the-world trip almost 400 years ago.

New Job Opportunities Fewer

OTTAWA (CP) — While Canada's labor force continues to grow by leaps and bounds, new job opportunities have shown a sharp decline in recent months.

The result has been that unemployment levels for the first four months of this year are well above the same period last year.

In January the country had 22,000 more jobless persons than in the previous January. February was up 40,000 o the year-to-year basis, March 59,000 and April 87,000.

During those four months the average year-to-year increase in the labor force was 273,000 while the average gain in jobs ren at 226,000, a job deficit of 47,000. In the comparable period of 1966 the labor force was up 256,000 on the average and new jobs 268,000, for a job surplus of 32,000.

In April of last year, for example, the country had 353,000 more jobs than it did a year earlier. The comparable figure this April was 175,000, or less than half.

Unemployment in April of this year stood at 375,000, an increase of 87,000 from the year-earlier total. Expressed as a percentage of the total labor force, it went to 4.9 from 4.1.

Three years ago the Economic Council of Canada said 1,500,000 new jobs would be needed in Canada during the 1963-70 period to keep unemployment down to the accepted annual rate of three per cent. Since then there has been an increase of about 750,000 jobs and total employment is running around 7,150,000.

From 1963 to 1966 the booming economy managed to develop more jobs than the labor force could handle without strain. It produced an extremely tight labor market last summer, with shortages in many sectors.

This year, however, the trend appears to have reversed.

SPORTS SLICE

By Geo. H. Carver

If you can believe the biggest prevaricator of all time since Baron Munchausen and Analias was their respective titles, the weather man comes up with a careful "thirty days below normal" — and that takes in the "May 24th Holiday."

On the sports calendar there's fishin', golfin', boatin' and bikin'. Cottagers and cabinneers likely will hie to the lake shore or bayline spots to ready the hacklenda for the summer.

Speed buffs, water or/and land should have a satisfying holiday.

The Picton Outboard Racing Club is opening the season on Sunday with a joint racing and stock outboards regatta at Sandy Point, Wesport, nine miles south of Picton.

A large entry has been assured and five Belleville drivers will be in there trying for the honors. These are Tom Boulter, Dick and Dave Storey, Steve Christopher and Jim White.

And while on the "Spanish Main" subject, the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce Annual Fishing Derby gets under way on Saturday at 6 a.m. through Monday at 2 p.m. There are handsome prizes for top pickerel and pike hauls all to be caught in the Bay of Quinte and inland lakes waters of the county. Contact Picton 476-2421 for further information.

A record-shattering number of entries has been received for the Centennial Year and Ontario Championship Motorcycle Road races scheduled for Harewood Acres one mile south of Jarvis off highway number three. Some 160 riders will enter 296 bikes in the various classes.

They come from all parts of the United States and Canada and rain or shine the gates will open at 10 a.m. Monday with heats commencing at 10.30. Racing starts at noon.

Stirling will be enfete for an outstanding holiday show that includes western games by Hastings County riders with a fine variety of events. Added is a gymkhana organized by the Quinte Axis Sports Club, a test of driving skill over a certain course. There will be a beef barbecue at the Agricultural Grounds where the show is being held and you can eat all you want. It is included in your admission. The Western Horse Show is alone worth the price.

Golfers will likely be out in force at the Bay of Quinte Country Club and district courses. The Quinte "13" is said to be in good playable shape with the exception, at this writing, of the 16th green said to be a trifle dampish.

Next week starting Monday will be "Opening Week" for softball and baseball leagues. Monday sees the Trent Valley Softball League get underway with Master meeting the RCAF Flyers at the Bay Shore Park starting 8.15 p.m.

On Tuesday the Commercial Softball League opens with Black Diamond Cheese clashing with Dunlop Warner at Alumite Park, 7 p.m. The same night the City-Werks Combines meet the Intelligencer at Prince Charles School to pry the lid off of the Departmental Softball League. Game time 6.30.

Australia, USA Tied

George Boynton paced the balanced American attack with two goals and five assists.

Australia defeated England 11-9 in the first match of the six-game, four-nation round-robin tournament in Toronto Wednesday.

The U.S. win put the American team in a first-place tie with Australia. The decisiveness of their victory left them co-favorites with Canada for the championship.

Canada meets England in the third game of the series, the first international field lacrosse championship since 1932, in Peterborough tonight.

The U.S. took a 3-1 lead in the first quarter, increased it to 6-3 by halftime, led 11-3 at the end of three quarters and scored four unanswered goals in the final quarter.

Two Get The Finger

Who Called The Umpire 'Meathead'?

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Out of the dark recesses of the San Francisco Giants' dugout came that refrain so familiar to the ears of an umpire.

"Meathead!"

Up went Shag Crawford's thumb, out of the game went Ollie Brown and on the field rushed Herman Franks.

It all happened in the second inning of what was to become a 6-3 Houston victory over the Giants Thursday night.

The Astros' Jimmy Wynn had hit a disputed home run in the first inning which the Giants claimed was foul. As San Francisco prepared to bat in the second, the needling of Crawford continued. Suddenly, Brown got the thumb.

Franks charged after Crawford to protest the ejection and pretty soon, Brown had company in the clubhouse.

"All that was said was 'meathead,'" Franks stormed after the game. "How can you throw a man out of the ball game unless you see him? One voice out of 25. How can he tell who yelled 'meathead' out of all those."

Franks and Crawford bumped. The umpire pushed Herman away, and squared off to defend himself.

"I didn't bump him that hard," said Franks. "We just rubbed chests."

Crawford didn't exactly agree. "Herman told me I got the wrong man and I'm certain I didn't," said Crawford. "We bumped and I pushed him away. He came down with both hands on my shoulder after I pushed him back."

Franks wasn't the only manager having thumb trouble Thursday. Cincinnati's Dave Bristol and Atlanta's Billy Hitchcock also were tossed out in the only other National League games played. The Reds bowed to Philadelphia 7-1 and the Braves lost to Pittsburgh 5-3.

In the only American League game, Washington Senators dropped Baltimore Orioles 2-0.

Jim Bunning allowed the Reds three hits and a run in the first, losing but nothing after that. He struck out 11 and drove in a run with a sixth-inning single that set up Bristol's ejection.

Johnny Callison was on third base and Bobby Wine on first when Bunning missed an attempted squeeze. Callison was trapped in a rundown but made it back to third as Wine reached second.

The Reds argued that Callison had run out of the baseline, and catcher Johnny Edwards was ejected after Bunning singled. When the umpires refused to allow Jim Coker, Edwards' replacement, to warm up, Bristol protested the game and also was tossed out.

Hitchcock and Joe Torre left in the eighth inning of the Braves - Pirates game for arguing over the call at a pitch. Roy Face was the hero for the Pirates, scuffing out a late Atlanta rally and pitching two innings of scoreless relief.

Dom Clendenon and Bill Mazeroski homered for the Pirates, and Gene Oliver connected for the Braves.

Pete Richert fired a three-hitter at the Orioles, who had scored 44 runs in their last five games. Brooks Robinson had two of Baltimore's hits against the Senators' left-hander.

Washington's runs came on a sacrifice fly and an error.

13 Off Colonial Pace

Knudson, Was Glove Missing?

FORT WORTH Tex. (CP)— After a smashing victory in last week's New Orleans Open Tourney's George Knudson almost played himself out of the money Thursday in the first round of the Colonial national invitational golf tournament.

The 26 - year - old Canadian fired rounds of 41-37—78 13 strokes off the pace being set by Dave Stockton in the $115-000 tournament.

Stockston put together a record - tying round of 33-32—65 over the 7132-yard course for a two stroke lead over veteran Ben Hogan Bobby Nichols and Mason Rudolph.

Knudson will need one of his superative efforts in today's second round if he is to survive the half-way cutoff.

The five-under-par effort was Stockton's first competitive round here and surpised no one more than himself. In fact he didn't even expect an invitation to play here.

Masters champion Gay Brewer was the only other golfer to break par firing a round of 66.

Four others—Tom Weiskopf Dave Hill ,Kermit Zarley and Dan Sikes—matched par 70.

Deane Beman who lost to Gary Cowen of Kitchener, Ont., in the 1966 U.S. amateur final, made his debut as a pro and shot a 71 with Julius Boros and six others.

Defending champion Bruce Devlin fired a 72, as did Jack Nicklaus. Arnold Palmer, with a faltering 39 on the back stretch, was in at 73.

Winds gusting to 25 miles an hour and temperatures hovering in the 80s contributed to a number of big scores.

Canadian Football League

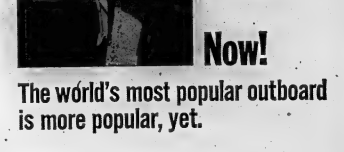
Staggers Cutoff Dates

CALGARY (CP) — A staggered series of Canadian Football League roster cutoff dates, designed to accommodate the "wide spread" in season opening dates, was announced.

And Red O'Quinn of Ottawa, chairman of the CFL preseral manager's committee, said the managers have agreed in principle on a "good" CFL pension plan which could go into effect this year.

Four clubs, Edmonton Eskimos, Winnipeg Blue Bombers, Calgary Stampeders and B.C. Lions, will have to cut their rosters to 14 imports and 18 non-imports by 3 p.m. EDT Aug. 1.

Saskatchewan Roughriders, Ottawa Rough Riders and Hamilton Tiger-Cats will have to do their rosters by 11 p.m. EDT Aug. 3 and Montreal Alouettes and Toronto Argonauts by 11 p.m. Aug. 4.



Calgary and Vancouver open the CFL regular scheduled Aug. 1. Edmonton and Winnipeg play Aug. 2. Saskatchewan opens its season Aug. 7, Ottawa Aug. 8, Montreal and Toronto Aug. 11 and Hamilton Aug. 12.

O'Quinn said at a press conference the pension plan would be discussed further at the CFL's semi-annual meeting in Regina June 14-16 and the changes have yet to go before league and player officials.

Amateur Championship
Veteran Boxers Eye Pan-Am Berths

MONTREAL (CP) — Flyweight Walter Henry and light heavyweight Heinz Koppe walked like good bets Thursday night to give Ontario two well-seasoned representatives on Canada's boxing team at the Pan - American Games.

The two—who have shared almost 400 fights—both won impressively during the second day of the eliminations at the Canadian Amateur boxing championships.

Champions in the 10 weight classes will be crowned tonight, Members of the Pan-Am team will be selected when the final bout ends.

Henry, 26, from Orillia, took dead aim at his sixth Canadian title by knocking out Tommy Leblanc of Moncton, N.B., at 2:48 of the third and final round. The bout was a breaking affair with both fighters being knocked down in the first round. Leblanc going down in the second and again in the third, when his corner tossed in the towel.

Henry represented Canada in the 1963 British Empire Games and 1964 Olympics. He will meet Derek Argolin of Langley, B.C., for the 112-pound title tonight.

Henry knocked out Austin in the second round of the 1966 championships.

Koppe, 30, from Toronto, who has lost only nine of 180 bouts, stunned a right hand against the head of Art Feyast of Edmonton to win by a technical knockout at 1:31 of the first round. Koppe won the Canadian title in 1964, 1965 and 1966.

He will meet Morigeo Kolar of North Vancouver, B.C., in the final. Koppe knocked out the British Columbia champion in each of the last three national championships.

The team championship narrowed to a contest between British Columbia, with eight boxers in the finals, and Quebec, with seven.

Two of B.C.'s more impressive winners were light welterweights Dick Findley and Freddie Fuller, both of Vancouver. Findley outpointed Tim Tilley of Edmonton and Fuller outpointed Frank Perno of Montreal.

Findlay, the defending champion, and Fuller, the lightweight champion in 1965 and 1966, will be meeting for the seventh time when they fight for the 139-pound title. Findlay has won four of the bouts and all six have been no - quarter brawls.

Harness Horsemen
Want Share of Mutuels Play

TORONTO (CP)—The Jockey Club Ltd., which operates harness and thoroughbred racing tracks throughout Ontario, is facing a solid front of horsemen demanding a written contract calling for a percentage of the club's share of mutuel play.

Les Ehrlick of Toronto, president of the Ontario Harness Horsemen's Association, Thursday told an association meeting that its bid for a contract was supported by the executive of the Horsemen's Benevolent and Protective Association, the governing body of thoroughbred racing in the province.

After a series of disputes and strikes against the Jockey Club, the harness horsemen have been working under a verbal agreement since Jan. 2 that guarantees them a daily minimum of the mutuel handle until June 30. The thoroughbred horsemen have been under contract with the Jockey Club, with a review set for the end of June.

The harness horsemen are seeking 45% per cent of the nine per cent of money wagered through mutuels that the province allows the Jockey Club to keep.

The Jockey Club has been fighting such a move for the last five years.

Harness racing is operated by Mohawk and Garden City racetracks and thoroughbred racing at Greenwood, Woodbine and Fort Erie.

The thoroughbred horsemen are expected to ratify their agreement to work with the OHHA for the desired cut while the OHHA is expected to meet Jockey Club representatives after June 1.

TORONTO (CP) — Keith Waples, Canada's leading Harness driver, is in hospital with pneumonia and is expected to be out of action for several weeks. Waples, 42, of Victoria Harbor, Ont., has won 82 races this season and his horses have won $83,150.

Traffic Charge For Clay

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Former heavyweight champion Cassius Clay, who faces a possible five-year prison term if convicted of draft evasion, cooled his heels in the Dade County jail for an hour Thursday on a traffic charge.

Clay was arrested as he drove his 1967 Cadillac along a Miami street with his chauffeur at his side. He accompanied the arresting officer to jail without incident.

Officials kept him in the booking section for an hour until he made $75 bond on charges of failing to have a valid driver's license and failing to answer a summons on an improper left turn charge made in October, 1966.

Clay waited at the jail until Reggie Thomas, the chauffeur, returned with the $75.

Country Club Dinner Dance Opens Season

The Bay of Quinte Country Club opens its 1967 social season tomorrow night with the conventional dinner-dance.

President George O'Brien and his ladies' social committee hope to usher in the season with an outstanding event.

Todate the request for tickets has not broken any records.

"It would be appreciated," said the president, "if members arrange for tickets for themselves and guests as soon as possible. This will give committees and stewards the chance to finalize arrangements."

The lounge, dining salons and the dancing pavilions have received a "new look" this year and present an attractive appearance.

Quite a number of tickets are left — and that telephone is not too far away. Call the club house.

BC Lions Name One-Armed 'Mickey McGuire' General Manager

VANCOUVER (CP)—Denny Veitch has one arm and comes from the wrong side of the tracks.

But British Columbia Lions think he's one of the best football men in Canada. That's why they picked the 34-year-old home-town boy as their new general manager.

When Herb Capozzi surrendered the $20,000-a-year job last fall to go into politics, speculation about who would succeed the "incomparable Italian" ranged all through football's Who's Who.

Tucked away in the cubicle assigned to Lions' minor football co-ordinator was Veitch. He had been working away there since 1962, quietly developing home-grown talent, watching Capozzi's style, and trying to think of ways to improve on it.

When time came for a new general manager to be chosen, Veitch went into action. His head was awash with ideas. He hired a public relations firm to help him prepare his brief to club directors.

Much of the 20-page brief is confidential but it explains why Veitch, who grew up on what he calls "the wrong side of the tracks"—a tough east-end neighborhood—should be boss of the Lions.

Some people had had the idea that Veitch's sole job with the Lions involved running around B.C. hamlets distributing money and kidney pads to minor football teams.

Although he had administered distribution of $200,000 to minor football in the last four years, this was only part of his chores. He arranged employment for players, worked out closed-circuit television of Lions' games for Vancouver Island, handled ticket distribution, placing players in U.S. colleges, department store promotion and purchasing of supplies.

"The game, the club and the community have been good to me," Veitch said the other day as he sipped a glass of wine in a rooftop restaurant owned by Capozzi. "Now I hope to reciprocate."

His aims aren't startling. He says he wants to use football to publicize Vancouver, to give fans the best football available and to give B.C. kids a chance to play.

Veitch believes football can teach a youngster as no other sport can.

"Not only how to win or lose in life but what it is to conquer fear. To be out there on the field all alone, one against one, with all your friends watching—it's just like life itself. You're scared. But you learn to conquer fear and build confidence."

Although Veitch lost his right arm at the shoulder when he fell from the roof of a freight car while playing on a train when he was five years old, he is a fine all-round athlete.

He's an excellent automobile driver, handball, football and rugger player. He played centre in football and wing-forward in rugger. Four times he was named to B.C. all-star rugger teams when he played for Vancouver Kats. He also toured the Orient with two all-star sides.

But the husky six-foot 190-pounder, father of two girls and a boy, really has no interests outside the Lions.

"I don't know anything else. Football is my life."

Recruiting Athletes

Says Colleges Should Have Free Hand

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP)—What Max Rafferty proposes is an athletic director's dream: Give the universities and colleges a free hand in recruiting athletes.

Anyone who wants to pay an athlete's way through school should be allowed to, says Rafferty, California's outspoken state superintendent of public instruction and a former high school coach, in an interview.

"If a football scholarship will permit a youngster who couldn't otherwise afford four years at UCLA or USC to go there, what's wrong with that?" Rafferty asked.

Rafferty, who oversees elementary and high schools, believes university administrators would accept his proposals if they analyzed the plan with real logic.

Rafferty would abolish all "the hypocritical recruiting restrictions" and substitute these four rules:

1. Any individual or organization who wants to seek out muscular young men and pay their way through college is welcome to do so.

2. The muscular young men must pass the same entrance exams and meet the same scholastic requirements as their less muscular classmates.

3. The Athlete's course of study must be of comparable status and difficulty with that of the non-athlete.

4. Nobody gets any special consideration in testing or grading and flunk-out rules apply to everyone equally."

Every athlete would have to "cut the academic mustard" just as any other student.

He also believes the playing rather, as well as the classroom work, of athletes would improve.

Meanwhile, Rafferty contended, the biggest enemies of the collegiate athletic system no longer are the administrators and professors, but the "new breed of so-called student activities — the hairy, loud-mouthed beatniks of both sexes who infest our college campuses today like so many unbathed boll weevils."

These "so - called intellectuals" have generated a stereotype caricature of an athlete as "jug - headed, catfish muscleman," said Rafferty.

The Tracks

TORONTO (CP)—Windfields Farm's Battling nerved Sickles Thursday his way to fourth best in the Queen's Plate. He won the featured seven-furlong Empire Plate in 1:22 4-5—just four-fifths of a second off the track record at Woodbine Raceway.

Battling romped to a three-length win to set himself up as a serious challenger to early Queen's Plate favorite Cool Reception, who nipped him by a length in last year's Carleton Stakes before heading for a successful winter in the U.S.

Battling was ridden by Hugo Dittfach, who earlier in the day won the second race aboard Genie's Touch and helped produce a daily double of $57.80 with Salute the Queen in the first.

The exacta of El Emperador and Response in the fourth paid $14.40. In the seventh, Victorian Ivy to Zacata was worth a $7.50 exacta.

Next Report on Bilingualism Not Due Until End of Year

OTTAWA (CP)—The deadline age for the next report of the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism has been pushed back again, this time to November or December.

The 10-member commission ended its public hearings in December, 1965, and has been meeting regularly since then to debate and draft its conclusions.

The first volume of the final report was promised for the fall of 1966, then early 1967, then in June but the task of proposing solutions to Canada's historic ethnic tensions continues to occupy the commission full time.

Prime Minister Pearson told Martial Asselin (PC — Charlevoix) in the Commons on Thursday he "shares the hope" of the commission that the first volume will be ready by the end of 1967.

The commissioners and their staff are working on five or six volumes simultaneously, summarizing research reports and briefs, rewriting chapters in several times and polishing translations.

Informants say the delays and the record cost of the inquiry are causing growing embarrassment and displeasure in Liberal ranks. Opposition MPs have become increasingly critical. Commission co-chairmen Andre Laurendeau and Davidson Dunton have occasionally avoided public statements.

Tired of waiting for the royal commission's recommendations, the government has taken action in several areas being studied by the commissioners, who were appointed in July, 1963.

Several new programs were introduced last year to encourage more bilingual civil servants; a committee of deputy ministers is drafting federal proposals to amend the constitution; the issue of creating a bilingual federal district in the Ottawa area is being referred to a parliamentary committee; broadcasting and immigration laws, which directly affect various cultural and ethnic groups, are being revised.

The royal commission now aims at publishing a series of five reports in 1968, plus numerous other reports on the basic findings of 175 research studies to back up the broad conclusions of the first volume.

This volume is expected to review and recommend changes in the constitution, and provincial laws to broaden language rights.

Later volumes will deal in turn with language and cultural courses in schools, bilingualism in the federal public service and the armed forces, government of the national capital region, the performance of news media in informing Canadians about each other, the cultural life of people with ethnic origins other than British or French, and bilingualism in business firms and voluntary national organizations.

The sweeping inquiry has cost more than $3,700,000 to date and another $1,000,000 has been budgeted for the fiscal year ending next March 31.

BC Mental Hospital Nurses Threaten to Walk Off Jobs

VANCOUVER (CP) — The 1,100 nurses employed in British Columbia's six public mental hospitals have threatened to walk off the job in two weeks.

The nurses, 850 of whom already have submitted resignations, are seeking wage increases and better working conditions.

They tendered their resignations to support demands that their grievances be submitted to arbitration.

Premier W. A. C. Bennett said he opposes arbitration on every issue. He said the government is prepared only to accept salary recommendations by a civil service commission fact-finding panel.

Meanwhile, 34 psychiatrists have sent a telegram to the premier urging him to take immediate steps to avert the resignations.

W. J. G. MacFarlane, chairman of a newly formed Association of Doctors at Riverview Hospital, which houses 2,800 patients, said it will be impossible for doctors to provide effective care if the nurses resign.

Dwight Wenham, executive-secretary of the Psychiatric Nurses Association, said if the resignations take effect as scheduled on June 1, provision will be made for emergency care by volunteers for the province's 3,800 patients.

The nurses are employed primarily in Riverview and Valleyview hospitals, at Essondale, on the eastern outskirts of Greater Vancouver.

They also work at the Woodlands School for Retarded Children at New Westminster; and at hospitals in Vernon, Terrace, Port Coquitlam, near Kamloops.

The psychiatric nurses seek a 25-per-cent increase on salaries ranging from $362 to $432 a month. The registered nurses want a 22-per-cent wage increase on salaries from $375 to $450. They are not under the jurisdiction of the Psychiatric Nurses Association.

The psychiatric nurses earlier rejected a government offer of wage hikes ranging from 7.7 to 8.3 per cent.

Mr. Wenham said equally as important as the wage issue is the issue of working and hospital conditions the nurses have to cope with.

Sharp Predicts Tax Increases Will Exceed Growth of Product

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Professor Minister Mitchell Sharp Thursday predicted that provincial and municipal tax growth will exceed the rate of growth of Canada's gross national product in the next four years.

The minister told a tax management conference at Queen's University that federal taxes will rise six or seven per cent a year, on a par with the GNP growth, while provincial and municipal taxes may increase as much as eight or 8½ per cent a year.

Mr. Sharp predicted that in the same four-year period, the share of Canada's gross national product collected in taxes by all governments will increase two or three per cent.

However, Mr. Sharp said this will not mean taxpayers will have less to spend because they will find their income will increase in similar proportions.

J. A. M. Thorstensson, of the Vancouver law firm of Thorstensson, Mitchell and Little, told the seminar that a capital gains tax of less than full income tax rates will probably be introduced by the federal government.

He said a list of points on which Mr. Sharp has asked for briefs indicates the government is preparing the way for this revolutionary legislation that has been recommended by the Carter royal commission on taxation.

Prof. S. M. Beck of Queen's University law faculty, warned that U.S. experience indicates Canada would be inviting trouble if it adopts one tax rate for ordinary income and another rate for capital gains.

In the U.S. capital gains are taxes at half personal tax rates up to a maximum capital gains tax of 25 per cent.

Prof. Beck said that in Canada, where there is at present no capital gains tax, taxpayers try to arrange their affairs to receive income in the form of tax-free capital gains.

In the U.S., he said, the same problems exists as taxpayers attempt to have their gains subjected to the preferential rate rather than to the higher income tax rate.

Princess Alexandra a Hit On Visit to Vancouver Fair

VANCOUVER (CP)—A director felt off a luncheon platform, police security officers were led a merry chase and British Columbia doorknobs made a hit as Princess Alexandra observed the international trade fair here Thursday.

The Queen's 30-year-old cousin rubbed elbows with delighted fair patrons for nearly an hour as she wandered through displays, stopping to chat with exhibit managers every time something caught her eye.

Vancouver widow Mrs. Margaret Keenan who happened to be near the princess during the tour was asked by Alexandra what she had seen.

"Only you," said Mrs. Keenan. Later, she added: "That's just the way I felt about that lovely young lady."

The princess upset the covey of plainclothesmen and red-coated uniformed police by making "hidden stops, detouring through exhibits and talking to crowd members.

She stopped at the B.C. booth and startled manager Brian Warburton by accepting about half dismembered photograph of a doorknob factory. "Do you export them?" the princess asked. "Indeed we do, ma'am," replied Mr. Warburton.

She received several gifts—some expected and some spur-of-the-moment—during the fair visit. One was a carnation, given to her by Rita Hart at the New Zealand exhibit which the princess carried in her hand for the rest of the tour.

At the official opening ceremony, there was a false alarm when everyone—including Premier W. A. C. Bennett and Lt.-Gov. George Pearkes—rose to welcome the princess, who hadn't arrived yet.

Trade fair Vice - President William Borrie took a tumble when he chair slid off the bandstage platform at lunch.

A festive atmosphere prevailed from the moment Princess Alexandra and her husband Angus Ogilvy arrived at the fairground and took a ride on a little electric cart.

After four active hours at the fair, the royal caravan left for Vancouver International Airport and headed for Victoria.

The royal party will spend today in Victoria, attending several functions, and return to Vancouver Saturday morning.

Ottawa Summer Program Is Geared to Centennial

OTTAWA (CP)—Gov. - Gen. Roland Michener and more than 500 Ottawa-area school students will inaugurate on Monday a summer-long program of events designed to keep Parliament Hill a lively place for tourists.

Officially, the first event is a Canadian youth tribute as Victoria Day, now observed in Canada as the Queen's birthday and still observed in some parts of the country as Empire Day.

But centennial planners say it will launch a program of crowd-collecting shows continuing every day until well into September, with four or five events a day when the pieces get into full swing.

A buff-colored pamphlet listing each day's events for a week at a time will be printed by the centennial commission and circulated free to tourists in news stands, restaurant cash-desks, and elsewhere in the city where visitors may gather.

It may be expanded later to include events on the Supreme Court lawn, on the Sparks Street Mall, in neighboring Hull, and in city parks.

There will be a 300 - voice massed choir of students, marching school bands, and 175 flag - bearers in Monday's inaugural ceremony, singing and playing music representative of all parts of the country in both English and French.

Sunday School Lesson

Stamping Scatters Sparks

By CLARENCE W. CRANFORD

If a person tries to put out a fire by stamping on it, he may end up by scattering sparks. That is exactly what happened in the days of Stephen, the first Christian martyr.

The stamping was done in Jerusalem. The sparks flew as far as Phoenicia, Cyprus, and Antioch, and, interestingly enough, it was in Antioch that the followers of Jesus were first called Christians. (Acts 11:19 and 26)

Like every great city, Jerusalem was a melting-pot. Along with native Jews, there were Cyrenians and Alexandrians from North Africa, Cilicians and Asiatics from Asia Minor, and many Greeks, or Hellenists.

The Uniform Sunday School lesson for May 31: "Stephen, A Man Of Faith," Acts 6:1 through 8:1.

But national differences do not melt quickly, even in the church. Christians of Greek descent began to complain that their needy were being neglected by Hebrew Christians in the distribution of material relief. Since this was more or less a house-keeping chore, the Apostles suggested that seven men be elected to handle it. Significantly, all seven who were elected by the Christian group had Greek names.

One of those chosen was Stephen. He had unusual gifts for leadership. In fact, he was soon doing more than helping the poor. He was proclaiming the faith in Christ. Some who heard him felt he was discrediting the temple and the law. So he was arrested and brought before the Senate.

Stephen was more courageous than tactful. In his defence, he accused his judges of doing what their fathers did — slaying the prophets. "As your fathers did, so do you," Stephen accused them bluntly. (Acts 7:51 RSV)

Then speaking of Jesus as "the Righteous One," Stephen began to describe a beatific vision. This was too much for his judges. They dragged Stephen out of the city, and stoned him to death.

Two interesting facts stand out at the time of Stephen's death. First, a young man from Tarsus, the capital of Cilicia, stood by applauding Stephen's death. His name was Saul, later to be changed to Paul. Second, the last words Stephen uttered were a prayer for his persecutors, "Lord, do not hold this sin against them." (Acts 7:60 RSV) Not only God heard that prayer. Saul heard it. Stephen's life and witness had been stamped out. But others lived to tell the story if not in Jerusalem, then at distant points to which they fled. And undoubtedly, a spark from Stephen's faith lodged in Saul's heart, and helped to set the stage for Saul's later dramatic conversion to the Christian faith.

There are several things about Stephen Saul must have admired. First, he was a man of dynamic faith. The joy of his faith even showed in his face. Moreover, he was a man both of learning and conviction. His hearers "could not withstand the wisdom and the Spirit with which he spoke." (Acts 6:10 RSV)

Saul, who was to become the world's greatest missionary greatly admired these qualities. He himself never did anything half-way. When he declared his faith, he said, "I know whom I have believed." (II Tim. 1:12). Concerning workmanship, he said, "Do your best (the King James Version says "study") to present yourself to God as one approved, a workman who has no need to be ashamed." (II Tim. 2:15 RSV)

There is no excuse for shoddy workmanship in religion. A Christian scholar should try to become the best scholar he can be. A Christian workman must strive to be as efficient workmen. Neither Stephen nor Paul would argue that faith does not need to be backed up by reason.

"There is nothing wrong with the church today that a little persecution could not cure." These words were spoken by a college professor to his students. There is a germ of truth in his statement. Persecution would weed out the insincere. It would spread the Stephens who would courageously defend their faith. Those who stood firm for their faith would impress their onlookers. Even those who disagreed would have to give grudging admiration to a tenacious faith, especially when it was combined, as it was in Stephen, with a forgiving spirit.

Christians would be foolish to pray for persecution. They can pray for believers who are "full of faith and of the Holy Spirit." They can pray for well-trained leaders. They can pray for men who can impress an unbelieving world by the sincerity of their faith. Let the world throw its stones of criticism. Men who keep the Spirit of Christ even under the most adverse condition is the church's best answer to the doubt and scorn of the world today.

Opposition Backs Robarts' Call for Conference

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's federal and provincial governments will soon receive a formal invitation from Ontario Premier John Robarts to attend a Confederation of Tomorrow conference here this fall.

Mr. Robarts told the legislature Thursday invitations will be sent when the provincial house gives its approval. Both opposition leaders supported the idea during a six-hour debate on the premier's proposal for such a conference.

Mr. Robarts said invitations will be sent to the governments rather than leaders "because I do not want the conference to be thought of solely as a meeting of heads of government.

"In fact, if for one reason or another any head of government does not find it possible to accept the invitation, I should be most happy if a delegation from his government could be sent."

The immediate question was whether Prime Minister Pearson will attend or support the conference.

"The Prime Minister of Canada has already indicated his concern at the way in which the preliminaries to this conference have been conducted," said Ontario Liberal Leader Robert Nixon.

"We support in principle this conference but we cannot but regret that the Ontario government has been less than diligent . . . in seeking the co-operation and the partnership and support of the government of Canada in proposing such a conference."

Mr. Nixon was repeating his contention that Mr. Roberts first proposed the conference last January without consulting Mr. Pearson.

Mr. Roberts said he made similar suggestions at federal-provincial conference last year and Mr. Pearson did not object. This conference would not be like those traditionally called by the federal government.

"This conference is not to be one where firm decisions concerning changes in our federal system will be taken, but rather a forum for discussion. . . .

"There is no precedent for a conference of this type and there are therefore no traditional restrictions on who may act as host for the conference."

Donald MacDonald, New Democratic Party leader, said he does not care who calls the conference as long as it proves successful.

An amendment moved by Mr. Nixon said "this house regrets that such an important conference is proposed without recognizing the unique position of the government of Canada which has a predominant responsibility for strengthening Canadian unity and shaping the course of Confederation."

The amendment is likely to get only Liberal support. There are 98 Conservatives, 21 Liberals, eight New Democrats and three vacancies in the 108-seat house.

Mr. Robarts said he hopes the conference will set the stage for more specific discussions at a later date.

Mr. Nixon said it may prove desirable, in view of the federal-provincial meeting recently called by Mr. Pearson, for July 8, "to place the later conference within the context of a continuing series of meetings held in all regions of Canada."

Mr. Roberts suggested the conference could consider these topics:

1. Ways in which the federal system is not working properly;

2. Objectives Canada should be striving to achieve;

3. Federal - provincial and inter-provincial relations;

4. "The role we see for the English and French languages in this country, and the way in which governments can help to provide a solution to the crucial question of English-French relations in Canada."

He said he would like it, "specifically excluded, discussion of financial matters from this conference."

"In this way, I hope that we can avoid the atmosphere of bickering that we all know is too likely to accompany financial discussion."

Mr. Nixon said Quebec has been making demands at federal-provincial conferences that amount to a claim for special status.

"But I do not support the idea of a constitutional special status," he said.

"Rather Quebec, like all the other provinces, must have sufficient independent freedom of action in areas of regional concern to achieve the national goals of French-Canadians living within that province."

Ontario Prepares For Medicare Plan

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario legislature's health committee approved three bills Thursday which will set up a health insurance registry board to integrate the government's hospital and medical insurance plans.

The legislation also provides a framework under which a full medical care program could operate in the province.

Health Minister Matthew Dymond told the committee the board initially will handle registration, premium collection, eligibility certification and general inquiries for the Ontario Medical Services Insurance Plan.

In the initial stages, the two plans will continue to service clients and make payments to subscribers.

Dr. Dymond said a complete amalgamation of the two plans "would be neither feasible nor workable in view of the present different financial arrangements in the two fields."

Expo Also Has Its Social Protest

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

(Second in a series of three articles)

Expo set out to create a great cosmopolitan projection of Man and His World.

To demonstrate its theme Expo created the best of all probable worlds — a gleaming inspiration sculptured from an idea.

To be briefly a part of this contemporary Camelot is to enter an alienated world, seemingly self - sufficient in all things from an all-to-often protesting society.

It is a tribute to all the best man has made of his world; it is a declaration of his potential; his material ingenuity, his inexplicable, soaring artistic imagination.

Yet, because honesty is also part of his social alchemy, reminders are to be found that Expo still is a Shangri-la guarded by narcotics.

A couple of capsules of reality, stimulate total recall that Man-and His World is not completely an international public - relations - man's pipedream.

One, apparently has drawn some sour notes — a sure sign of success. It's located in the Canadian exhibits area and is the pavilion of Ids Indians.

The other is not so much protest as a stark reminder of a new phenomenon — the commitment, bafflement and anger of modern youth.

It's located in the small pavilion at La Ronde.

Amid the gaiety, the gleaming granite and glass of Expo, they are two minuscule reminders that the world beyond still has grisly social problems.

Both, pocket-size exhibits draw inspiration from the same source. Graphic black-and-white photo blowups contrast with the prevailing gaiety of exterior pavilion decor to press home their points.

It is in the Indian pavilion, however, that the point of protest is sharply defined.

The viewer walks the exhibit area, housed in a towering, symbolic teepee, through 12 bays displaying the varieties of Indian culture. It is in the eleventh he sees the 16 pages of the giant album turning. The pages show pictures of the Canadian military cemetery in The Netherlands and carry such titles as "Thank you for hospitality" and "Thank you for fighting the enemy."

"The white man's school is an alien land for the Indian child," remonstrates another.

"Dick and Jane in the story book are strangers to the Indian boy," reveals a third.

It's mild enough in content, but apparently it bites home at times.

The patient lines pass the propaganda as docilely as they view the rest of the exhibits.

For the most part, at least.

"Some of the people get really annoyed and they leave," says Diane Diabo, 20, from the Caughnawaga reserve near Montreal, one of the Indian girls acting as hostesses.

The Indians on that reserve are Mohawks — as are those inhabiting the Tyendinaga Indian reserve east of Belleville.

"Sometimes they annoy us with the stupid things they say.

"They say to us why don't we leave the reserve. They think it would solve our problems if we married white people and be like them and we can better our lot."

Then, there are other incidents that display the white man's image in poorer lights.

Like the time a group signed a dance around an exhibit of axes demonstrating early-colonial trade between Europeans and Indians.

"A lot of them show great ignorance," says Diane. "They wouldn't behave like that in other pavilions — unless they don't know what's going on in the world. And here, there's no reason for them to ask. It's clear."

And, if the point isn't sufficiently clarified there is always the release of the pavilion's public relations men.

Among the more memorable are these warning quotes:

"Many Indians of today believe the white man betrayed their fathers' trust. They are not ready to accept the story of Canada, written by people of European ancestry."

Again:

"Many modern Indians feel that the churches, in converting the Indian people, attempted to wipe out their native Indian culture, which they associated with 'paganism.' Indian songs, dances and other ceremonies were discouraged or forbidden . . .

Again:

"The white society has attempted to ASSIM ilate obligation to the Indian largely by the outpouring of money, controlled and distributed by non-Indian administrators. All Indian communities need money for houses, roads, sewers, schools and other public services, but these are minimum services which they expect as a matter of right, like any other residents of Canada.

And again:

"In many cases the Indian child must learn a foreign language — English or French — before he can begin taking instruction. Schools are organized to a strict European time schedule which is alien to Indian tradition. In some cases, he learns to be ashamed of his own culture."

Granted the summation of the pamphlet is weak, as it queries what a Canadian Indian has to contribute to the Western civilization which has magnificently capitalized on its squatter's right to his holdings:

"Often his (the Indian's) answer seems to suggest that he can show how to participate in the mass technology of the modern age while preserving his personal individuality and the virtues of his fathers."

But in a prefacing paragraph, the message quotes individual Indians and their reactions to enforced environments. It emphasizes:

"When they say they want to remain Indians, they often mean that they want to preserve and perpetuate the moral values which they have inherited."

The graphic tag and for this charge against prepared social patterns is smoothed against a wall in Expo's Youth Pavilion — a fair distance away at La Ronde.

A stark, photographic mural of Hiroshima victims, viewed by a daily succession of tomorrow's public and its leaders, proclaims the legend: "Hiroshima — August 6, 1945, 8.15 a.m. This is the place, the day and the hour when the world entered a new era."

Look closer at the range of black-and-white camera blowups and the viewer finds:

"Others see and refuse to play along. Every night, in every land, a youth commits suicide. Or, there are drugs to blot out the world they were born into."

The protests against preordained morality are only one dimension of the youth display at La Ronde.

There are warnings against the passiveness of youth.

A shadowy enlargement of the late James Dean warns: "Rebels without a cause, youth nihilists carry the torch for a dead idol."

A grainy film reproduction of popular mass-polity reminds: "A certain passivity: The cult of the dumb blonde."

But, there is little adult comfort in the claim: "Young people will take any job they can get — and society is tempted to limit them to just that."

But the overall reminder of the little labyrinth at La Ronde is the commitment of youth to its world.

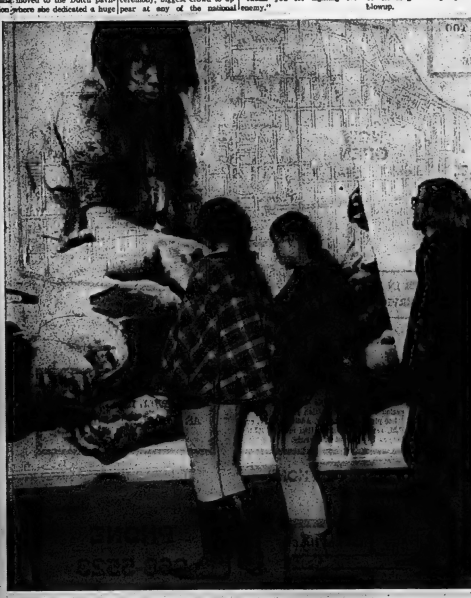
"Leap into the struggle today," suggests the quiet proclamation accompanying the photograph of a Negro jumping from a military jeep. "Lead the combat for justice tomorrow."

For its final impact this little corner of Canada's Camelot rests upon the awe, the boyish Arthurian legend of modern Man and His World — President Kennedy:

"The young judge the world and know their power." John Kennedy, who was young, said: 'United there is nothing we cannot accomplish. That is our great hope.'"

Canada's First Citizens

Social conditions among members of Canada's Indian peoples are emphasized in this photo exhibit. Real Indian is hostess Diane Diabo, 20-year-old Mohawk from Caughnawaga near Montreal.



Dutch Tribute Is Novel Album

MONTREAL (CP) — The Dutch had their big day at Canada's world's fair Thursday and said their thanks in a novel way.

After the red, white and blue Netherlands flag was raised in Plaza des Nations, Queen Juliana moved to the Dutch pavilion where she dedicated a huge album. The book, measuring eight by 14 feet, expresses Holland's gratitude to Canada for sheltering Juliana during the war and for helping liberate their country from the German.

A crowd of more than 2,000 attended the Place des Nations ceremony, biggest crowd to appear at any of the national days.

At the Dutch pavilion, Queen Juliana pressed a button which set the 16 pages of the giant album turning. The pages show pictures of the Canadian military cemetery in The Netherlands and carry such titles as "Thank you for hospitality" and "Thank you for fighting the enemy."

In the Beginning...

Blowup of Hiroshima victims is viewed by three young people at La Ronde youth pavilion entrance. The exhibit stresses commitment of youth to the world . . . and its societies.

PUSHING YEARS BACK

A Belgian theatre company recreates a court celebration of 1467 in the Expo Theatre at the Montreal world's fair.

French Press Lavish In Praise of Fair

MONTREAL (CP)—Praise for Expo 67 has been unstinting from the press of France, climaxed by a lavish 36-page spread in the current issue of the mass-circulation picture magazine Paris-Match.

The latest Match hit the streets in Montreal Thursday after six full delivery from France.

Statistics about Expo are more impressive than were those generated by previous world's fairs, says the magazine in introducing its treatment of the exhibition.

"But statistics would not convey the fair's success, because for the first time in a world's fair it is not the technical which is predominant but Man, whose happiness the technical should serve."

The cover is given over to a close-up photo of the United States pavilion. Expo already has taken the cover spotlight in a leading French news magazine, l'Express, which credits "Canadian energy" of Montreal's Mayor Jean Drapeau with creating the fair.

Jean Cendor of Le Figaro, a major Paris newspaper, writes that some English - Canadians recall Expo, while smiling quietly, "the French - Canadian show."

Cendor, however, quotes Commissioner-general Pierre Dupuy of Expo as decrying this in an interview.

The French-speaking Mr. Dupuy is reported as saying:

"If we were the conceivers, the English Canadians were the engineers and builders. Without them, we would not have been able to do anything . . ."

Cendor himself comments that by the time Expo closes in October it will have enabled Canada to show that "she has attained adulthood . . . and must be taken into account on the world's map."

L'Express, referring to the obstacles overcome in the fair's creation, quoted a Quebec separatist as saying:

"We are French, yes. But don't you see that here we are, above all, Americans? In other words, we are convinced that nothing is impossible."

L'Express terming the fair "international and brilliantly stylized simplicity and enchantment are concerned, goes to the Quebec pavilion, a masterpiece of good taste and charm."

Y's Activities

The very popular hot room at the Belleville Family Y.M.C.A. is once again in action. The new heat unit has been installed and a new rock bed for the stones is in place. Having a good "steam" in the "Y" hot room is a favorite activity of many men and women (at different times, of course). Following with a refreshing swim in the beautiful "Y" pool makes for an exhilarating experience.

Public Swim - The Saturday evening swim for the general public has been picking favor during the past few weeks as warmer weather is anticipated. There is still room for more swimmers during the 8.15 to 9.45 p.m. period.

Sunday Swim - The Sunday Family Swim and the following general swim will not be held this Sunday, May 21st but will resume on the following Sunday.

Prison Inmates Stage Play Twelve Angry Men

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP)—The play Twelve Angry Men is a familiar drama under any circumstances.

Actors must capture the correct moment, emotions and furors deciding the fate of a youth charged with the switchblade murder of his father.

But when the cast is composed of actors serving sentences ranging from two years to life and the theatre is a modern security prison, the producer's and director's jobs of coaching the cast to give a realistic performance pale beside the sheer effort required just to stage theplay.

Queen's University Prof. S. E. Smethurst and his wife Viola, who carried their avid interest in the stage from their native England to Kingston, have masterminded the drama group at Joyceville Institution for the last two years.

The enthusiastic reception given the production of Twelve Angry Men by a mixed audience of convicts-and prominent Kingstonians owes much to the efforts of the Smethursts.

One problem is that there are few girls for an all-male cast. Another is that when a play is found it has to be fairly short because of stage limitations and the difficulty in arranging rehearsals.

Costuming is another problem. In most amateur productions the cast digs in its own outfits, but inmates' wearing apparel — jeans, jackets, T-shirts and peaked caps—hardly provides a wealth of costume material.

Cor Pulmonale Explained

Dear Dr. Molner: Would you write about cor pulmonale in words so I can understand what my heart condition is? What is its relationship to emphysema? — H. L. R.

Cor Pulmonale (cor pul-mon-NAH-lee) is a condition in which the right side of the heart has to work too hard.

To understand it, first fix in your mind the purposes of the two ventricles, or large chambers of the heart. The left ventricle pumps blood to the aorta (the main artery of the body) and thence to the entire body.

The right ventricle's task is to pump blood through the lungs to discharge carbon dioxide and pick up fresh oxygen.

What can put undue strain on the right ventricle, or chamber? A clot in the lung arteries (pulmonary embolus) can retard the flow of blood, forcing the ventricle to work very hard. This is acute cor pulmonale, obviously an emergency situation.

Other (and more common) causes of cor pulmonale develop gradually. It may be a narrowing of the pulmonary arteries anywhere in the system carrying blood through the lungs. Silicosis damages the lung tissues and thus impairs circulation through them. In fact fibrosis (scarring) of the lungs from infection or (as is sometimes the case) from unknown causes. Thoracoplasty formerly done to collapse a lung as part of the treatment for tuberculosis, put a terrific strain on the right ventricle, thus producing a cor pulmonale, although it helped treat the tuberculosis, it impeded the lung circulation.

Low oxygen content of the blood, resulting from the diminished flowing blood through the lungs, in turn means that the heart muscle will not be getting as rich blood as it should. This weakens the heart action. It also contributes to disorders of heart rhythm of various types.

The cor pulmonale will, obviously, be fo-o-tured by shortness of breath, but will also cause swelling of the lower extremities (as will other forms of impaired circulation), enlarged painful liver and distension of veins in the neck.

The shortness of breath may be due to the primary lung condition making pickup of oxygen difficult, or to the impairment of circulation, or both.

Treatment therefore involves attention to the lung problem, with whatever measures can be taken to make breathing easier, as well as treatment to support the heart. Digitalis is a mainstay of treating for pulmonale just as it is in treatment for failure of the left side of the heart. Indeed there may be failure of both the left and right sides in severe cases of cor pulmonale.

The patient, obviously, must pay attention to his doctor's instructions such as not smoking, getting adequate rest, and other such elements of hygiene.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have quite a large goitre. Is there any cure except in form for it other than an operation? How can I make sure my family gets enough iodine to prevent goitre? — Mrs. T. H.

Goitre (enlargement of the thyroid gland) can result from causes other than lack of iodine. Depending on the cause, operation or use of "atomic cocktail," which is radioactive iodine, at times succeeds where surgery. Often, the size of the goitre is such that surgical removal is the best method.

Lack of iodine, once a common cause of goitre, can be easily prevented by use of iodized salt, which supplies all the iodine a person needs. Only a tiny trace is required.

Note to Worried: Marriage of cousins is potentially risky, and it makes no difference whether the cousin is on the father's side of the family or the mother's. Cousins are cousins.

Dr. Molner welcomes all reader mail, but regrets that due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column wherever possible.

Labor Minister Is Accused Of Blocking Housing Solution

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition MPs chose the seventh day of the three-week debate Thursday to refer to on government housing policy, with one member identifying Labor Minister Nicholson as "one of the major roadblocks" to a solution.

The NDP's Reid Scott (Toronto Danforth) made the roadblock allegation. He further accused the minister—responsible for Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. in the Commons—of having a negative attitude to the problem.

The throne speech debate, ends today.

Elsewhere the capital was more preoccupied with external troubles.

The controversy over Vietnam policy that has held attention all week faded into the background, in its place came the crisis over UN Secretary-General U Thant's decision to disband the UN emergency force in the Middle East.

Canadian officials made clear their dismay over collapse of the peace force that was set up on Canada's initiative.

Late Thursday night, after day-long telephone talks with Secretary - General U Thant, External Affairs Minister Martin announced that the emergency force "is no longer in being." Canada has about 800 troops in the 3,400 - member force.

In his housing attack, Mr. Scott called the National Housing Act "the national housing act because it was designed over 20 years ago under conditions that no longer exist and in circumstances that no longer prevail."

Mr. Scott said a national housing fund is needed. It would be financed by the government, which would provide money to builders and buyers.

Along with other speakers, he urged creation of a federal housing ministry.

M. T. McCutcheon (PC—Lambton — Kent) proposed a federal mortgage bank through which the government could trade in mortgages, in much the way that bonds now are traded. This would mean lower money costs and the construction industry could plan for much longer periods at a time.

"The answer to housing inefficiency in the construction industry, hopefully with lower costs, will be found by making it regular, planned flow of mortgage money available and alotting it over a longer period," he said. "This is now the case. . . ."

Some of Mr. McCutcheon's other suggestions: Lot sizes can and should be reduced and the 11 - per - cent sales tax on building materials should be cut by half and placed on the retail level rather than at the manufacturer's level.

He said adoption of his suggestions would make possible a 10-per-cent reduction in housing costs.

Mr. Brown stressed "the utter seriousness" of the housing problem. Because rentals in public housing were tied to wages, tenants were prevented from ever buying their own homes.

Perry Nobis (PC — Grey North) criticized the government for "procrastination and poor judgment" in the field of housing, auto safety and dairy policy.

This should have been the year when all Canadians had proper housing, he said.

The government should have made broad-analysis tests mandatory for drivers suspected of impaired driving.

On dairy policy, the government should give a "favorable response" to the demands of the industry when farmers march on Ottawa May 24.

Canada's Population Well Over 20 Million

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's population reached an estimated 20,334,000 on April 1, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics said Thursday on the basis of final figures from last year's census.

The census was taken as of June 1, 1966. On that date, there were 20,014,880 in Canada, a figure somewhat higher than earlier estimates had indicated. The April 1 figure was also based on growth estimates since last time.

Rate of growth in recent years has declined, a fact that Ottawa tax authorities have attributed to the use of oral contraceptives and slackened immigration.

DBS said it now is clear the population of Canada crossed the 20,000,000 mark during May, 1966. Earlier estimates had indicated the figure was reached about mid-summer.

The 1966 census was just a head count and made no study of industries. The last full census was taken in 1961 and officials are preparing for the next census in 1971, experimenting this summer with a mail census of London, Ont.

The rate of population growth between 1961 and 1966 was slower, due to lower birth rates and immigration, the bureau said.

There were high levels of population growth in the 1950s. The latest five-year period showed a gain of 9.7 per cent, compared with 13.4 per cent in 1956-61 and 14.8 per cent in 1951-56.

Quebec and Ontario accounted for 70 per cent of the 1,776,633 population growth for all Canada between 1961 and 1966. British Columbia and Alberta accounted for 21 per cent, and the other six provinces together accounted for the remaining nine per cent.

Census counts by provinces at June 1, 1966, followed by the counts for June 1, 1965, were: Newfoundland 493,396 and 492,853; Prince Edward Island 108,535—104,629; Nova Scotia 756,039—737,007; New Brunswick 616,788—597,936; Quebec 5,780,845—5,259,211; Ontario 6,960,870—6,703,082; Manitoba 936,666—921,686; Saskatchewan 955,344—925,181; Alberta 1,463,203—1,331,944; British Columbia 1,873,674—1,629,082; Yukon 14,382—14,628; Northwest Territories 26,741—22,998. Total 20,014,880—18,238,247.

The bureau makes quarterly estimates of population in the nearest thousand, in January, April, July and October each year. The bureau's estimates as of April 1 this year were:

Newfoundland 500,000, Prince Edward Island 109,000, Nova Scotia 756,000, New Brunswick 619,000, Quebec 5,854,000, Ontario 7,115,000, Manitoba 961,000, Saskatchewan 955,000, Alberta 1,463,000, British Columbia 1,858,000, Yukon 15,000, Northwest Territories 29,000. Total 20,334,000.

If today is your birthday . . . you are creative, able to appreciate artistic efforts — and you could have musical talent. Avoid tendency to be impersonal. You make new, valuable contacts very soon — social position improves.

Ford Trial

Ice Pick Broke Off in Head, Walli Says

TORONTO (CP) — Wayne Ford's closest friend Thursday told a hushed court of a conversation in 1953 in which Ford admitted killing his mother and described how the act was done.

Ford, now 20, is being tried before a Supreme Court judge and jury on a charge of murdering his 55 - year - old mother, Minnie Ford, a well-to-do widow who disappeared during the Victoria Day period four years ago.

The school chum, Ronald Walter Walli, 20, said he and the defendant were drinking at Ford's Lake Couchiching cottage May 19, 1953, when Ford talked of killing his mother.

Walli was testifying under protection of the Canada Evidence Act.

"I hit her, I hit her again. I couldn't stop hitting her," Walli quoted Ford as saying.

The prosecution alleges a woman's body found floating in Lake Couchiching last October is Mrs. Ford's and that Ford killed her in May, 1953.

"Wayne said he'd hit his mother, and she didn't go down, he started strangling her and she wouldn't go down," Walli testified. "There was an icepick, so he stuck the icepick in her head. It wouldn't come out. The handle broke off."

The witness said Ford told his story the night after he had helped Ford carry a woman's bloodstained body, with a bag over the head, from the Ford's kitchen to the basement where they put the body in a plywood box.

Walli said he and Ford took the woman's body to the cottage where it was placed in a wooden crate in the garage.

Walli, who now is married and has two children, said Ford ordered him to get a pair of pliers and remove the icepick stem from the head of the body.

Walli said he was sick and crying and Ford handed him a 1½ foot long piece of metal and told him to knock the teeth out of the body.

The witness said he opened the box, but could not continue. He said he went back to the cottage after closing the box and dropping the piece of metal beside it.

"Wayne asked me if I'd done it. I said 'Yes I did,'" Walli replied.

Another witness Thursday told the court that Ford joked about killing his mother to two girls who visited the cottage that summer.

Larry Metcalfe, another schoolmate of Ford's who was 15 at the time, said he, Ford and Walli were at the cottage when the girls dropped in and asked where Mrs. Ford was.

"I believe Walli said 'We killed her and threw her in the well.' He was joking, as far as I knew."

Metcalfe said Ford laughed and said, "We chopped her up in little bits and put her in the lake."

"The girls were stunned but saw us laughing and took it as a joke," said Metcalfe.

Metcalfe, who also was testifying under the Canada Evidence Act, said Ford "seemed rather pleased his mother was not there, that he could do anything he wanted with nobody to criticize him."

Ford listened impassively to the second day of evidence as he heard himself described by Walli as strong-willed, stubborn and easily angered.

Walli, who told the court he still was afraid of Ford, said most of their classmates dropped into the Ford home following the Victoria Day weekend.

He said there were all kinds of girls there and they amused themselves "by drinking."

Strikebreakers Out if Strikers Don't Take Other Jobs, Rand Told

TORONTO (CP)—The Hamilton Construction Association may agree to a ban on strikebreakers during a legal strike provided the strikers don't work elsewhere, the Rand royal commission into labor disputes was told Thursday.

"We feel that we should examine what might be a viable alternative to the present system," the association told Commissioner Ivan C. Rand, a former Supreme Court of Canada judge.

The brief opposed termination of the union-sticking system if court injunctions limiting picketing during a legal strike and added several conditions to its strikebreaker - ban proposal.

They were:

1. A secret ballot strike vote conducted by the provincial labor department and requiring a majority of all union local members;

2. Free access, without intimidation, to all who wish to enter and leave a struck plant;

3. One picket at each gate;

4. Replacement by new workers of strikers who have taken a job elsewhere;

5. Termination of a strike if the majority of the strikers have returned to work or found employment elsewhere accompanied by a return to work of all remaining strikers if they want to protect their jobs;

6. New strong statutory provisions against coercion or intimidation.

The association's brief said unions argue that injunctions should be abolished because companies take advantage of them to hire new employees. The strikebreaker-ban proposal takes away this disadvantage, the brief said.

Killex kills more lawn weeds than any other lawn treatment

We guarantee it.

Used as directed, Green Cross Killex guarantees results—or we will refund the full purchase price.

We can make this guarantee because Killex contains a triple combination of components which kill more hard-to-kill lawn weeds than any other lawn treatment. Even where famous 2,4-D has failed, Killex has provided outstanding control over such problem lawn weeds as: Chickweed, Clover, Bedstraw, Black Medick, Heal-all, Ground Ivy, Knotweed, Shepherd's Purse, and of course Dandelions and Plantains.

Killex is economical, too. One ounce of Killex to one gallon of water weed-treats 250 sq. ft. of lawn. Yet for all its effectiveness, Killex is safe on most lawn grasses.

Even the best weed killers can fail sometimes. Killex is an exception.

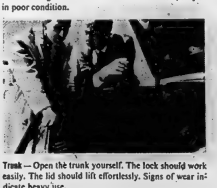
How to buy a good used car

The body and what to look for

One in a series



Buying a used car is a major purchase. If you wonder what kind to get, ask yourself what's most important—power, performance, comfort, economy. But don't be too rigid. You may never find exactly the car you want. Once you're decided, inspect it carefully. Ask questions. Remember that a good used car should look used, not abused. Here, then, are some ideas on what to look for when you're buying a used car. Look for more good advice in the rest of this series.

Exterior—Check the whole car for dents and damage. Expect to find some signs of wear. After all, it's not brand new. A lot of scratches and bumps indicate that the car has had hard use and not much care. Check carefully for rust spots in the rocker panel areas, around fender openings and along the chrome edges—especially around the headlight rims. Body rust can indicate need for repair work. If the chrome is a little pock-marked, don't worry. This is normal.

Tires—Tires and wheels can give away a lot about the car. For example, badly dented rims indicate hard use. Check the depth of the tread in several places with a dime. This simple test will give you an idea of the life left in the tires and evenness of wear. If wear is even, the wheel alignment and balance are probably good.

Shock Absorbers—Check the springs and shock absorbers front and back. Simply rock the car. If the front returns to its original level right away, the shock absorbers are all right. If the car continues to bounce, they're in poor condition.

Trunk—Open the trunk yourself. The lock should work easily. The lid should lift effortlessly. Signs of wear indicate heavy use.

Doors—If the car passes inspection so far, you're now ready to get inside. But, before you do, open and close each door to make sure they open easily and close securely. Look again for rust around the doors. Roll each window up and down to test ease of operation and check for cracks and imperfections in the glass.

Interior—You can tell a lot about how a car has been cared for from the interior appearance. Check for worn spots on the seats and the matting. Look for missing knobs on the instrument panel. Check for general cleanliness. Check seat cushions and backs for bounce and spring.

Steering wheel play is an important check, too. Some play is normal, but more than two or three inches may mean repairs are needed on the steering mechanism. Then check the brake pedal. It should move only an inch or so before it takes hold. If the car has power brakes, remember to start the engine first.

Lights—Finally check all the lights: headlights—high-beam and low-beam; taillights; brakelights; back-up lights; turn signals; instrument and dome lights.

Your awareness is your protection. When you know what to look for, you can buy with confidence. This series has been developed to help build your confidence in used-car buying.

Of course, an even better way to gain confidence is to talk to a Chevrolet-Oldsmobile OK Used Car Dealer. He has the choicest used cars available—reconditioned and selected to meet the highest used-car standards. You can be sure that they will stand up to this recommended inspection. Your Chevrolet-Oldsmobile Dealer's reputation rides with you. That's why, when you buy an OK Used Car, you know what you're getting into.

Martin to See Thant

Syrian Calls for War

BEIRUT, Lebanon (CP)—Israel geared herself for any contingency against the massing troops of Syria and Egypt as a top Syrian military leader today called the war.

One modernizing influence in the Middle East crisis was seen, however, in a statement by the commanding general of the Egyptian forces that it would take a "serious attack" by Israel before Egypt would retaliate.

Egypt took over patrolling its border with Israel as the 3,400-man UN peacekeeping force that has been declared disbanded prepared to leave the trouse area. The force, including 800 Canadians, was set up in 1956 after the Suez War.

The UN troops were ordered withdrawn by UN Secretary-General U Thant at the request of Egypt.

In calmer days Syrian challenges of war on Israel have been dismissed outside Syria as exaggerated.

But in the present crisis the words of Syrian Defence Minister Maj.-Gen. Hafez Al-Assad took on added gravity:

"In my opinion as a military man," Assad said in the Syrian government newspaper Al-Thawra, "the time is ripe to begin the battle of liberation" against Israel. "Our forces are not only completely ready to repel aggression, they are also fully prepared to start the liberation operation."

However, Gen. Abdel Mohsen Kamel Mortagi, the Egyptian commander said battle would be joined not when "a single bullet is fired but when a big serious attack is launched."

Meanwhile, an Iraqi delegation was scheduled to fly to Cairo today from Bagdad for an important meeting of the unified political leadership of Egypt and Iraq.

Canada Alone

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — The question whether to call an emergency session of the UN Security Council was before delegates today as Canada's Paul Martin flew to New York to press for retention of some United Nations "presence" along the troubled Israeli-Egyptian border.

The 15 members of the Security Council looked to a report from Secretary-General U Thant for guidance on whether to hold such a council meeting.

A UN spokesman indicated the report to the council might be out by mid-day. Thant, despite "serious misgivings", granted Friday a request from the United Arab Republic for the withdrawal of the UN Emergency Force manning the tense Egyptian - Israeli border. The U.A.R. has moved troops up to the border and Israel has said it is taking the necessary defensive precautions.

Some diplomats said they expected the council would hold a meeting within the next few days and appeal for restraint. Others expressed the belief it would meet at all. These latter declared that only Canada seemed keen on having a meeting.

A Canadian delegation spokesman told a reporter: "We are consulting with all governments concerned with a view to trying to arrange a meeting of the Security Council to consider the implications for peace in the Middle East of the withdrawal of the UN force."

Two Security Council delegates —Canadian Ambassador George Ignatieff and Chief S. O. Adebo of Nigeria—chatted with Thant Friday. A Canadian source said Ignatieff saw him about the possibility of a council meeting.

External Affairs Minister Martin of Canada-organized to meet Thant and representatives of interested countries to discuss possible substitutes for UNEF which has kept the peace in the Sinai Peninsula for more than 10 years.

One possibility mentioned in Ottawa circles was expanding the UN truce observation organization, a team of about 30 officers from various countries that patrols sections of the Israeli border.

Martin also has sought to move the 3,400-member force, which includes 800 Canadians, to the Israeli side of the border.

In his General Assembly report, Thant appealed to the U.A.R. and Israel to "exercise the utmost calm and restraint," to "the parties directly affected . . . to do all in their power to keep the peace" and to all UN members to intensify their efforts in that direction.

Israel Is Calm

UN Wants to Rule: How?

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—The UN General Assembly voted Friday to set up a council to take over the territory of South-West Africa and lead it to independence.

The vote was 85 to 2. Thirty countries, including Canada, abstained.

The resolution, sponsored by 76 African, Asian and Latin American countries, is a second to a General Assembly resolution of last October that declared South Africa had forfeited its right to govern South-West Africa.

South Africa ignored the declaration and the new resolution, which failed to win the crucial support of the big powers, gives no guidance as to how the new UN council is supposed to establish itself in South-West Africa in the event of South African opposition.

A Canadian spokesman said Canada regards the resolution as "incapable of implementation" and won't be a candidate to serve on the council. Eleven countries will be picked by the assembly as council members, probably next week.

The spokesman said, however, that Canada continues to "abhor apartheid," the South African policy of separating the white and black races, which has been extended to South-West Africa.

The United States, the Soviet Union, Britain and France were all among the abstainers. South Africa and Portugal cast the only negative votes.

The territory has a population of about 530,000 persons, of whom only 75,000 are white. The General Assembly voted last Oct. 27 to terminate the mandate and place the territory under direct UN jurisdiction.

Nairobi Parley Seeks Commonwealth Aid Plan

LONDON (CP) — Commonwealth officials are set for a meeting in East Africa that could produce the first truly all-Commonwealth program of mutual help, especially in planning and trade promotion.

The two - week conference opening Wednesday in Nairobi, Kenya, also constitutes a test of the Commonwealth's will to translate the idea of co-operation into a working system.

Arnold Smith, Commonwealth Secretary-General leaves here Sunday with 16 of his secretariat staff to set up the meeting.

Almost all members except Gambia will attend. Zambia is doubtful. Canada will be represented by three officials of the external aid office — Deputy Director Denis Hudson, H. J. Hodder and N. E. Power—and Stewart Beattie of external affairs. Britain is sending a strong team.

The conference will discuss establishing a pool of technical experts, mixed teams of economic advisers and a fund for exports promotion. All would be financed jointly and probably run by the Commonwealth secretariat.

Secretariat officials say it is far from certain that the delegates will agree on such programs. But those wishing their governments will approve the projects afterwards.

Four Die In Crash On No. 7

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — Four men were killed today when two cars collided head-on in early-morning darkness on a highway made slippery by rain.

The dead:

Eric A. Smith, 22, of Peterborough, Lewis Warner, 24, of Ancaster, Ont., Harry Windover, 27, of Toronto and William Kurt Ferro, 21, of Toronto.

Smith and Warner were in one car, Windover and Ferro in the other.

Police said the collision occurred at 1 a.m. shortly after a car driven by Windover pulled out of a motel parking lot on to Highway 7 two miles east of here.

Alberta Woman Put Her Babies In Freezer

VEGREVILLE, Alta. (CP) — The trial of Patricia Brown, 22, sentenced to four years on two charges of criminal negligence, was told she had informed police the bodies of three babies found in a food freezer were her children.

Miss Brown's statement to police, admitted at the trial, quoted her as saying two of the babies were born in the Tofield house and one in the back seat of a boy friend's car.

Both the woman's parents testified they had noticed nothing unusual about their daughter, despite three pregnancies in four years.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Ontario is in a strong northwesterly flow of cold air. Showers and nonfreezing rain are occurring across the north and this will continue through most of today. In the lower Great Lakes region there will be mostly sunny but windy weather today. The prospects for Sunday are for cool weather in the southern sections of the province. Across the rest of Ontario skies will be variable and there is a chance of some light rainshowers.

Senators Fear War Escalated

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Johnson administration's explanation that a U.S. troop sweep into the South Vietnam demilitarized zone is a defensive move failed to halt criticism that the war is being escalated.

Senatorial critics voiced fears the war is being intensified to the point where an invasion of the North could be the next step. In their minds this would trigger Chinese intervention and could lead to a third world war.

The administration has said that at this point American troops are operating only in South Vietnam's section of the demilitarized zone.

More than 10,000 marines and South Vietnamese troops entered the southern part of the six-mile-wide strip, half in South Vietnam and half in North Vietnam, for the first time Thursday to fight North Vietnamese troops menacing South Vietnam. The zone, set up in Vietnam under the 1954 Geneva agreements that partitioned Vietnam

15,000 Men Form Pincers

SAIGON (CP) — Some 15,000 U.S. marines and South Vietnamese infantry formed a giant pincers today in efforts to sweep Communist troops, heavy guns and supplies out of a southeastern zone.

The U.S. command said the allied force has killed 226 Communist troops since Thursday, while marines lost 36 killed and 220 wounded.

In the air war, U.S. planes struck the closest yet to the centre of Hanoi and nine U.S. planes were downed.

A U.S. spokesman said navy planes shot down four MIG-17s and reported damaging a fifth.

North Vietnam claimed 10 U.S. planes were shot down Friday.

A Reporter's Life Is Not A Happy One When His Country Draws Red Guards' Ire

By ANTHONY GREY

PEKING (Reuters) — The flames of a burning effigy of British Prime Minister Wilson lit up the street outside my house here in the early hours of today.

A crowd of about 50 Red Guards gathered around the house, shook their fists at me and chanted "Down with British imperialism" as the eight-foot-high straw figure of Wilson blazed.

The Red Guards had cut down the figure bearing a placard saying "I am Wilson" from above the courtyard gate of the house, which is near Peking's former imperial Forbidden City.

The effigy was hanged there two days ago when the house, which is also Reuter news agency's office, was singled out as a secondary target of anti-British demonstrations in Peking against the British authorities in Hong Kong.

The demonstrations outside the house took place about 1 a.m. and the Red Guards obviously had been waiting some hours for me to return home. The figure of Wilson, propped up on a wooden cross a few yards from the gate of the house, was set on fire as I put my car in the garage a short distance away.

The crowd set up a wild chant as I walked past the burning figure to the gate. I had to step over new slogans plastered over the steps of the house in yellow paper sayings in English "Wilson must be fired."

I stood and watched the burning figure from the gateway until the top hat and head fell off amidst a new burst of frenzied chanting, and the smell of smoke from the smouldering straw figure was filtering into the house.

Goderich Family of Six Slain

GODERICH, Ont. (CP)—Six members of one family were found shot to death on a farm near this western Ontario town Friday night, victims of an apparent multiple murder and suicide.

The victims included the father, Charles McNee, 50, his wife and four of his five children.

The bodies were found by the only surviving McNee child, Helen, about 20, when she returned home with a friend.

In addition to McNee, the victims were his wife, Helen, 50, a daughter, Jean, 12, and three sons, Grant, 20, James Charles, 16, and Fred, 7.

McNee's body was found outside the family's three-bedroom farmhouse 10 miles north of this town on the shore of Lake Huron.

The five other victims were found in various rooms of the two-storey house.

Thd discovery was made by the daughter about 9 p.m. when she arrived at the house in the company of Ed Stiles, a Goderich undertaker. Stiles told police he received a phone call from McNee at 7 p.m. and that McNee asked him to drive Helen home from the bus depot in Goderich, 50 miles northeast of Stratford.

Police declined to give further details of the shootings until they had completed their investigation.

Time Is Problem for Expo Visitors

Staff Reporter Harry Mallall spent three days at Expo. The final article of his three-part series appears today.

How long does it take to explore a galaxy without a rocket?

Reduce it to an earthbound, man - made constellation of construction like Expo and you still have a mighty a travel problem as any ever faced a Marco Polo.

There have been some unofficial, non-computerized calculations about the time needed to thoroughly tour Expo since the exhibition first unfolded itself 22 days ago.

Some of those estimates range around six to eight hours daily for the 125 days of Expo's glittering life.

Shortly after it opened one official figured it would take at least three days to thoroughly inspect all there is to see at Canada's exhibit.

And Canada is only one of 62 nations on show.

Add to that the various Ghone bullthings entertainments, shows and a multitude of other attractions — not to mention lunch breaks, coffee breaks, pop breaks, shoe-lace breaks and the possible bad breaks where friends or children may be missed.

Even with a six-month break devoted exclusively to Expo its possible something might be missed at the mammoth exhibition.

But that prospect apparently is not dismaying Canadians or their overseas guests.

With less than one-eighth of its life-term up, Expo already has attracted more than 8,000,000.

That's about one-quarter, of all the people in Canada.

The response has triumphantly matched the faith of those who first conceived the great and glamorous show for Canada's Centennial Year.

The planners projected an uncommon myriad of sites to see.

And now they're coming to see them, returning day after day in multitudes — even if most do accept the fact they will never see it all.

What to see and how to see it is a matter of personal choice.

But in the invigorating environment of Expo they're finding it hard to be choosey.

Storekeeper Finally Retires After 60 Years in Business

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Anybody in the market for a few brand new barn lantern glasses of pre-Hydro days, or maybe a 60-year-old plug tobacco cutter?

Then how about a bulk cookie display case of the same vintage, or a cheese slicer capable of handling a 80-pound blocks of cheddar?

If there are any takers, the items are all available in the village of Shannonville where this week a 60-year-old grocery store went out of business.

What's so unusual about a 60-year-old grocery store?

Nothing really except this one happens to have been operated by the same family for all six decades — and by the same woman, Mrs. L. E. LaRone.

This week — on May 18 — the LaRone Grocery store closed its doors for the last time. The "for-lease" grocery stock has been purchased by a Belleville fruit market operator, and eventually the owner of the old store will get around to holding an auction to dispose of the store chattels — including the three dozen or so coal oil lantern glasses.

The LaRone grocery store at Shannonville has been a fixture in the village for longer than most residents remembers.

Originally it was known as the Farnsworth store, being built in 1906 by Mr. and Mrs. Abram Farnsworth.

Mr. Farnsworth, a dealer of farm machinery, didn't bother much with the grocery store and when he died in 1923 Mrs. Farnsworth carried on alone. She married John LaRone, a railroader, in 1927.

Mr. LaRone died in the 1940s and in recent years, Mrs. LaRone has been assisted by her daughter, Mrs. Lois Harrington.

Now 81 years of age, Mrs. LaRone had no thought of giving up the grocery store until last Christmas when she suffered a heart attack.

But Mrs. Harrington feels that as far as she is concerned the day of the small grocery store is about ended.

"It's hard to compete with the big grocery chains," she says. "The small grocery store eventually becomes merely a convenience."

Both inside and out, the old LaRone store today is much the same as it was half a century ago, but the same thing doesn't apply to the store equipment.

Years ago she turned in her hand cranked coffee grinder on a new electric model and has repeatedly turned old cash registers in on new ones.

And back in the days when rural electrification was being pushed she actually turned in an old Delco plant with Ontario Hydro.

"I guess I learned some of my trading instincts from my first husband," she says.

Mrs. LaRone vividly recalls the huge chests of green tea from which she measured customers' requirements — also the black strap casks and the rolled oats bin. She gave up handling sugar in the bulk years ago but still sells bulk rolled oats and macaroni.

But Mrs. LaRone readily admits the modern pre-packaged groceries are handier for both the store keeper and the customer.

And her daughter agrees.

But time will help to heal it,
And memory to bear the blow,
But what it means to lose them,
No one will ever know.
So treasure them Lord,
Within your garden of rest,
For when on earth,
They were the best.

The Show Is on Continually At Expo's 62 Pavilions

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

There's a split international confrontation going on at Expo and the conquest is public approval!

Facing each other on opposite banks of Le Moyne Channel are the pavilions of the United States and Russia.

Both buildings are glamorous, architectural wonders.

The Russians spent $17. million on a sweeping steel structure, resting on two V-shaped supports.

The Americans spent $9,300,000 on a sphere 250 feet in diameter, easily the most distinguishable building amid all the sites.

The bubble was designed with a transparent skin, fitted with exhaust vent which permits the interior to breathe.

The sun and moon shine in and from the interior the visitor can view landscape and sky.

But the Russians have all manner of crowd-catchers to attract the people.

There's a 1,100-seat restaurant with more than a score of chefs to whip up Russian and Central Asian delicacies. There's service where you can sip drinks.

But, likely the biggest attraction is the Hall of Cosmos where 70 people can simultaneously take a stimulated trip to the moon — complete with the feeling of weightlessness.

Then there's a 600-seat theatre for fashion shows and films.

Incidentally, Canada and Russia have one thing in common at Expo — they're both celebrating national anniversaries. Canada its first 100 years, the U.S.S.R. its first 50.

The more-restrained American production attempts to characterize the fantastic creative forces that have turned Americans from pioneers to world leaders in less than 100 years.

Among its top attractions will be those exhibits devoted to American space conquest, with one whole section given exclusively to the Apollo moon project.

From a space-observation platform 180 above the ground, visitors may view Expo and Montreal.

But the show of the giants does not deter the daily thousands flocking to Expo from choosing its own favorites — both East or West.

If crowd response is any pointer then little Czechoslovakia is high on the list with its exhibits of ceramics and glass dealing with the country's history and culture.

Solutions to the problems of air and water pollution, noise and overcrowding are offered in a section called "Metamorphosis".

And a sure-fire hit is Great Britain's pavilion, its tall, Union Jack-topped tower rearing high above the Expo sites.

Its displays are divided in five sections, each the work of a creative artist, depicting different stages of British development.

And for an added touch of glamor there are the hostesses, clad in the latest British gift to the world — miniskirts.

But the public is seeking to establish its own partiality at Expo, with 62 national exhibits to choose from.

Even tiny Monaco successfully bids to draw the crowds.

And, of course, if the visitor has difficulty making a selection, there's always the canal-rail, wending its way around the sites.

It's one way to comfortably see all of Expo — from the outside at least.

Manpower Crisis

A Globe and Mail report on a personnel crisis in industry has been given wide publicity through distribution by The Canadian Press.

The newspaper says that although 25,000 students will graduate from Canadian universities and colleges this year, employers are desperate for more graduates. Business is said to be in difficulty because it has to fight an anti-business attitude by large numbers of students.

General axis students are not interested in business and the only surplus manpower is in this group, according to the report. Or Ontario's 7,500 graduates more than 4,000 are general arts students.

The personnel manager of an oil company is quoted as saying there is an acute shortage of engineers and scientists, while the problem with the three-year general arts student is his lack of career direction.

This raises the whole question of what students have in mind in choosing to enter university in the first place. Many enter simply because it is expected of them, not only by their parents but by society generally. And the arts course is perhaps the simplest one and the easiest medium of acquiring the minimum qualification of a bachelor of arts degree. What end the student has in view is quite another matter.

Yet here is Canada crying out for the manpower it needs to keep its predominantly industrialized society going. The situation is full of irony: just imagine our business-orientated society breaking down simply through a revolt, or backlash, against the concept of man as an economic unit rather than as a human being who craves for something other than just "beer and bacon," as a British cleric once put it.

Even Manpower Minister Jean Marchand may be indulging in some soul-searching in this regard. Opening a Careers Expo in Peterborough recently the minister said men "are more important than machines in the new view of Canada's economy." At the same time it was clear that by men he was thinking of people who can contribute something to the economy rather than becomig poets or even hippies."

"The new concept of skill training is of a broader and more general nature," said Mr. Marchand. "It is in fact almost a return to the basic idea of education being a training for the mind." He said modern skill training intends to teach people to understand processes and concepts, rather than to learn mechanical skills.

But what of the "lack of direction" mentioned by the oil company man? According to Mr. Marchand, there is no such problem. Outside the labour pool went on, the new attitude is reflected in an "active manpower policy," concerned basically with helping people to respond effectively to economic and technological change."

The company man would be particularly interested in one remark of the minister: "We have learned that words are cheap and that the major task before us is to implement the manpower policies we have conceived."

In this regard the new community colleges such as Loyalist here in Belleville should be of inestimable value. If industry is to survive and young men attracted to its ranks, then colleges and universities, industry itself, through its training programs, and the Government must combine their efforts to this end.

As Mr. Marchand has indicated, the key is implementation of the various training programs. But it is clear some talking and encouraging are also going to be necessary to revive what appears to be a flagging interest in industry as a career.

Priceless Books

Imagine a "Big Brother" society in which books, libraries and the right of access to them are forbidden and in which a fire brigade unit exists solely for the purpose of seeking out and destroying hidden stocks of reading matter.

Each city has its reporting centres for informers. You know of someone — friend or enemy — with books hidden away, so you drop his name into a mailbox-type structure linked with the central authority and the fire unit is dispatched to burn the stock, and sometimes the home as well.

That is the theme of Fahrenheit 451, a remarkable film which has been showing in Belleville. The fire unit is eventually destroyed by one of its members who comes to appreciate the enormity of its function, and he escapes to a remote rural area. There other escapees eke out a bare living — in the name of freedom, and each is charged with committing a book to memory, so that the treasure house of literature may be preserved.

A thoughtful, compelling, work, the film is eloquent of what life would be like were there no books to read — in short, nothing for the mind.

'Devil' to 'Darling' Disconcerting Role for Diefenbaker

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Whether he runs or retires, succeeds himself or loses a re-hid for the Conservative leadership, two things are certain ever about John Diefenbaker.

1. Win, lose, draw as Diet the Chief, he will stay on, leader or keener, as MP for Prince Albert.

2. And remaining, he will continue to fascinate if not always dominate the Commons as he has for so many years — holding his intent interest almost from the day he entered the House back in 1940, as a lightly-wound, black-haired, fiery-eyed, finger-pointing poker — stiff Tory radical - of - a-man.

He will stay on in the Commons, come what may, because this has been his life, his whole life and nothing but his life for 27 years.

A child of Parliaments, he often calls himself, and if he were to leave this spiritual home of his here on this high and windy Hill, it would be as a helpless, hopeless orphan.

He would very probably quickly perish, his friends are quick to say, out of sheer desperate loneliness.

Even now, stripped by some of his own people of the sheer and most magic powers to paralyze the Government in recurring fits of utter terror he still remains the centre of attention in the Commons.

No longer is he capable of panicking or stampeding the Administration into one of its demoralized retreats that were so familiar before his Party's reckless "rebels" de - horned him, but he continues to torment the Cabinet almost as much as Prime Minister Pearson.

And that term "de-horned" is just the word for it — that on the Old Chief's own say-so.

For asked what it might be like in Parliament if he no longer were there, he borrows a phrase from the days of Sir John A. Macdonald and replies "Like Hades without the Devil."

While he still may — in fact, very probably does — be to conclude himself the Very Scourge of Evil, political and Parliamentary, the Government very definitely does not.

This is a new and rapidly developing situation.

The administration still makes a point of publicly boasting that Diet, the Old Ogre, no longer frightens it.

Frightens it.

In fact, just the other day, one after the other, Privy Council President Walter (Wonderful) Gordon and Finance Minister Mitchell Sharp, pounding their chests, proclaimed that the formerly fearsome bogeyman wasn't scaring anybody.

But this process of "de-horning" has gone one long step further than that.

Diet no longer is a Devil to the Grits, but — would you believe — a Darling?

They are trying to make him out to be an Old Dear.

Just the other day when the Commons, figuratively, singing "Happy Birthday, Dear Mike, Happy Birthday to You," with everybody busy slappin' backs when Prime Minister Pearson crossed over into his 71st year, he singled out Diet as the one man he took for distinguished mark of affection.

He was so pleased, purred the PM, that "my old friend, the Opposition Leader" had initiated this warm outpouring of good feeling.

Imagine that — when only short months ago all they could hear was the bitterly sleanging each other was glare coldly.

But there is other less trivial and even perhaps important evidence that the Liberals are casting the Old Chief in a new role.

They are pushing and shoving to crowd him out of the real life of Parliamentary political action and into the shadow-world of history. They seem determined to try nothing him ever into a living image of Sir John A. Macdonald even should he still live and breathe in the Commons. It is a sort of insurance policy against his resuming the awful power to paralyze.

For they have made his unconcerned 28% of Rights an historic document, sending it equally with the proclamation of their own Prime Minister's new Maple Leaf Flag.

Odd, too, giving the bill of Rights such an honored place, for it seems the only yesterday they let it run out of print.

But there it is, displayed proudly in the office of most Liberals, and there on the right with the Prime Minister's flag with the Fleur-de-Lis on the left, when you and the annual best million tourists walk into the front entrance of the Parliamentary Library, show-piece architectural gem of The 1867.

Rights of Citizens

Provincial Premiers Will Confer July 5

Montreal Le Devoir

The Pearson government has called the premiers of the provinces to Ottawa for July 5. The main goal of the meeting is to attempt to reach an agreement in principle on a declaration of the rights and freedoms of citizens.

It is not possible to be opposed to such an initiative. On the contrary, the time surely has come for all the governments of the country to coordinate their action in so vital a field.

The rights and freedoms of a citizen, in a federal system such as ours, cannot be adequately protected by Ottawa alone or by the provinces alone. Some aspects of these rights are under federal jurisdiction while others fall under provincial legislatures. Besides our constitution contains a certain number of poorly defined zones, or zones open to simultaneous action by the two levels of government. . . .

Obviously, the July 5 meeting is aimed only at an agreement in principle and not at adoption of a detailed declaration which could be immediately inserted in our constitution. But even an agreement in principle would be an extremely encouraging start.

On the other hand, we frankly ask ourselves if it would not be appropriate to go beyond the goal which has been set. In addition to being a country with a federal regime, Canada is also a country composed of two ethnic majorities. . . . Why then, alongside the protection of the rights of individuals as such, should not consideration be given to those of . . . the two minorities? In Quebec the minority is English and the French minority in the other provinces and at the federal level?

Our present constitution, it must be admitted, is extremely confused on this subject. The proof is that Quebec has interpreted it in one way and the remainder of the country in another. In certain provinces, a street is being made on recognition of the rights of the French-language minority, but the process is very slow and, especially, it is far from being general. . . .

It is for those reasons that we would wish to see an unequivocal declaration of these rights appear as soon as possible in the constitution.

Quebec View

Senate as an Elected Body

Trois-Rivieres Le Nouvelist

In our Senate, two-thirds of whose members are Liberals, ripe for a radical reform whose principal characteristic would be to make it an elected body? . . .

The Senate, even if two-thirds of the members are Liberals, has not engendered any criticism from the Conservatives. A return to power would one day permit them to re-establish through their appointments the balance that now is lacking. It is the New Democratic Party which does the most grievances against the present situation. This day seems far off when members of this party may reach the Senate. Only an elected upper house would permit them to have representatives there.

The idea of an elected Senate is slowly making its merry way. Senator Wallace McCutcheon has just rallied to the idea of an elected upper house. Its present composition which includes just about only Liberals and Conservatives makes it out of date. A good number of the nation has no voice in it. The Senate, says Senator Wallace McCutcheon, has fulfilled a useful mission, but a "House whose members are appointed" appears to be outmoded in a country having a democratic government whose members are elected by the people. . . .

An elected Senate would raise serious problems. We could to a large extent be inspired by the election system in effect in the United States, but that would not be absolutely safe. Conditions are not the same in the neighboring country as they are here. At the outset, it can be taken for granted that the provinces will defend their rights and will oppose any increase in the federal government's powers.

rights and obligations of a full and equal partner and so determine its participation.

The United States and the Common Market have emerged as the world's two great trading units. What they decide determines the commercial policy of the non-Communist world.

The Common Market has spoken successfully for all six member countries: France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg.

While the agreed tariff cuts will average 35 to 35 per cent in some 50 nations, many tariffs will be cut 50 per cent over a period of five years.

Whether the savings will be passed on to the purchaser is another question.

Few items are sold directly to consumers. Most pass through the hands of dealers, wholesale and retail.

Economists say tariff cuts stimulate business, in facilitating a free flow of trade.

Between 1949 and 1966 world trade increased to $180,000,000,000 from $33,300,000,000. Five tariff cuts in that period may have had something to do with the increase.

Foreign exporters will certainly see new opportunities to sell their goods in North America. Likewise North American producers should find new opportunities in foreign markets, for tariff cutting is a two-way street.

For the first time, farm products have been included in a major tariff - cutting exercise. Though the results are more modest than expected, one new thing has been accomplished.

An international food aid program has been set up under which the world's richer nations acknowledge a joint responsibility for feeding the poorer nations. A dozen governments will be in on the giving.

Those which do not have grain surpluses will have to buy on the open market to make their contributions. They will be paying hard cash, to the delight of exporters such as Canada, the United States, Australia and Argentina.

The exporters will also rejoice in an increase in the subsistence world wheat price. This means more money in the pockets of their farmers.

A Trading Partnership Between America and Europe

By CARL HARTMAN

GENEVA (AP)—The successful conclusion Monday night of the long Geneva tariff talks has filled in some details of President Kennedy's grand design for a partnership between America and Europe.

Walter Hallstein, chief executive of the European Common Market, had predicted: "Only when it is united will Europe be strong enough to assume the

The 1947 edition of the Kiwanis Club annual extravaganza, "Pack up Your Troubles" is in the Centaine stages. In fact it has gone further than that and Kiwanian Ted Schwab, the "Rasmmerstein" of the production, and his assistants have already done plenty of work on a brand new production. The show will not be staged until some time in October but talent scouts are already scouring the district for new faces and new artistry.

A Matter Of Belief

Kingston Whig-Standard

A strange situation exists in Vancouver, where a 15-year-old girl has died from a purpled and gone into hiding to avoid forcible blood transfusions for chronic anemia, from which nobody she is suffering.

The girl's religious beliefs forbid her to receive blood transfusions, although as a ward of the British Columbia Children's Aid Society she has been forced to submit to five previous transfusions.

The mother of the girl is living and wants to take charge of her daughter in her flight from social-medical bullies.

It is treacherous ground when Children's Aid Societies, medical doctors and courts of law band together to coerce a child or the parents of a child into doing something the child or the parents sincerely believe is wrong.

It is dreadful to think that a life should be sacrificed for religious beliefs which the majority of us do not hold, but there are plenty of examples through the years of people who put religious faith before life itself.

Theologians Try to State Beliefs Better

NEW YORK (AP) — Ever since the Apostle Paul declared that "now we see through a glass darkly," Christianity has recognized that its defined doctrines were imperfect reflections of what fundamentally remains mystery.

Yet efforts to express and illuminate its truths have been made through the centuries, in councils, creeds and sessions of faith. Today, many church thinkers are wrestling anew with the problem — to state beliefs better.

Amid the reappraisals, and the sometimes disturbed reactions to them, a controversial Canadian priest has urged that the churches quit preserving specific interpretations.

"The church should stop presuming to be the 'answer man,'" the Rev. Ernest Harrison, an Anglican clergyman of Toronto. "Its proper function is to be a community of searchers, welcoming all serious viewpoints."

Harrison, a bespectacled man of 50, whose ideas have resulted in his being barred from ministerial functions in the Toronto diocese, said Christianity's "big challenge now is to live with uncertainty."

He added: "To live with uncertainty is a sign of maturity."

Here in connection with the issuance of his new book, Church Without God, published by Lippincott, he said in an interview that the churches no longer be absolute about doctrines.

"It can't say that one view is right and another wrong, that there is only one true view. Life has shown us that nobody has the final answers for all time, that we learn from experience and each other.

"Instead of force - feeding answers, the church ought to offer a choice. It should open its gates and recognize the legitimacy of many more rooms of differing understanding."

Asked how this would differ from the unitarian-universalist outlook, which meshes many religious views, he said he didn't advocate a blend of concepts, but rather a diverse "pluralistic church" ranging from highly orthodox parishes to wide-open ones.

"The full spectrum," he said. "I don't see why it should be so difficult. After all, each of us is different."

In his book, he discounts many standard doctrinal formulations, including Christ's divinity.

"Almost every point raised in the creeds is doubted by vast numbers of Christians," he maintains. "Some are strongly denied. Some, like the virgin birth, are received in lukewarm fashion. . . . Yet they are still announced as doctrines of the church.

"If the church were seriously accepted as the 'people of God,' then all their feelings, reactions and thoughts would be represented in its teachings. But this has not happened."

Consequently, he adds, many Christians "are trapped."

"For, in spite of the loud cries of heresy, they do not feel like heretics. They feel like Christians. They feel that they are as much entitled to membership in their church of those who condemn them."

Such feelings are shared by Harrison, who himself was forced to resign his post as general secretary of his church's board of religious education last fall after 10 fellow theologians called him a heretic.

"Do not be driven out," he advises. He adds that "mother church is dead" in the sense of being able to impose fixed beliefs. "Any threats that are grounded in her name are idle ones."

He questions such classical Christian teachings as the resurrection, life after death and maintains "there is no God" in the traditional sense of a "grand being" apart from men, judging, punishing and helping them.

"God is not something other than mankind," he said.

He lists various concepts of God which he regards as a Christian, including:

—That the traditional view of a "person other than man, greater than man, who has no beginning and no end, who made the universe" and still "survives His creation, judging mankind and revealing Himself."

—The view that God exists, but that traditional theology "has missed the boat in describing Him," and that the big job now is to describe Him more accurately and reliably to modern man.

—That the word "God has meaning" and that descriptions must be sought within man himself, "in the depth of our being, our ultimate concern," in natural sciences and human relationships.

—That God described by early theology "did indeed exist, but that He no longer exists," having died into human history in the incarnation of Christ as man.

Harrison said his own concept of God was as a "source that lies within creation, within the human race," and not as being apart from humanity.

"Human beings themselves are aware of elements in life beyond themselves," he said. "When we go into depth analyses, we become aware of this dimension, of extra - sensory perception and many other areas of psychological research.

"We discover huge areas of life that are part of us but which can't be explained in human terms, and I don't think they ever will be. The more we discover, the larger are the areas of the unknown."

Commonwealth Service Dropped

LONDON (AP) — Plans for a multi - religious service to mark Commonwealth Day June 7 have been dropped because the Archbishop of Canterbury, as spiritual head of the Church of England, has not given his approval.

Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip attended a similar service at St. Martin-in-the-Fields, Trafalgar Square, last year. This time the Duke of Kent, her cousin, had provisionally agreed to be present with the Duchess of Kent.

The service, intended to bring together Christians of most denominations with Moslems, Buddhists and Hindus, is arranged by the joint Commonwealth Societies Council. Plans for it to be held again in St. Martin's were far advanced when word came from Lambeth Palace, the archbishop's official residence, that approval had not been given.

Dr. Robert Stopford, bishop of London, in whose diocese the church lies, took a similar line.

There was a storm of criticism from some Anglican churchmen about the service being held at St. Martin's last year. The main objection was that Christians, believing their faith to be the only true one, were compromising it by joining in a service with Moslems, Buddhists and Hindus.

There were protests too, when a multi - faith service of silence was held in Westminster Abbey Dec. 10 as part of the Abbey's 900th anniversary celebrations.

Mrs. Townsend had charge of the study book, "The Growth of the Church in Canada" when the eastern part of Canada was well settled the immigrants pushed westward. Missionaries in the old land made for a great influx of people here and as each block or tier of land were rapidly settled and the church followed - first in the evangelistic field only then the work of the church leaders widened out to the educational field and to teach better farming methods.

Mrs. Townsend was thanked for her interesting synopsis of the study book chapter. Mrs. Wetherall and committee served lunch and a pleasant social time was enjoyed.

MELROSE WI

"What better time than now, in Centennial year, to review our obligations as true Canadian citizens! Are we willing to accept responsibility? Do we participate in community activities or are we afraid to get involved? Do we make an effort to help our neighbors and be companionable to all age groups?" Mrs. A. English asked these questions when she presented the topic on citizenship at the regular meeting of the Melrose Women's Institute.

Mrs. Jack McLaren installed the officers for the coming year as follows: past president, Mrs. E. Pascoe; president, Mrs. Donald McLaren; 1st vice-president, Mrs. Roy McLaren; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. Harold Bentley; district director, Mrs. Raymond Clarke; alternate district director, Mrs. Roy McLaren; curator, Mrs. Kenneth McMechan; pianist, Mrs. C. Boles, sr.; assistant pianist, Mrs. Roy Badgley, and auditors: Mrs. Donald McFarlane and Mrs. Jack Sherman.

Standing committees convening were also appointed as follows: agriculture and Canadian industries, Mrs. Charles Bates, jr.; citizenship, and education, Mrs. Harold McAvoy; home economics and health, Mrs. Cara Weese; publicity, Mrs. Grant McLaren; historical research and current events, Mrs. Joseph Summers; public relations, Mrs. J. BAY OF QUINTE WI

WHITE'S DISTRICT — The Bay of Quinte Women's Institute held their May meeting on Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. John Reid, Yeomans Street, Belleville with 23 present and the new president, Mrs. Arnold Ketcheson presiding.

Convener Mrs. Jermyn Palmer of Rayside introduced the guest speaker, Mr. Glenn Deline, a practising lawyer of Belleville.

Mr. Deline spoke on the importance of making a will. He told the members what would happen if a will were not made by the husband. The widow would get a life dower of 1/3 of the real estate - plus 2/3 of personal property. The rest would be divided between the rest of kin. One has no control of how the property will go if no will is made. There is also a lot of unnecessary expense if there is no will.

Mrs. Palmer thanked Mr. Deline for taking the time to explain about this important matter.

On June 12th Sidney Township Hall will be officially opened and each Institute is to help with the lunch. The 70th Birthday of Women's Institutes will be celebrated September 12th at Sidney Township Hall and each Institute is to provide a ten minute program and to assist with the lunch.

Mrs. Arnold Ketcheson attended the officers' conference on May 2-3-4th at Guelph and gave a few highlights. They were entertained royally and a meeting and what should not be done.

Immigration Is Topic at Study Guild

"Immigration" was the topic of the program at the May meeting of the Women's Study Guild held at the home of Mrs. E. A. Fleming, Bridge St. East.

The worship service was most appropriate, dealing with Ruth, a willing immigrant in the ancient land of Judah. Mrs. Roulet, herself a wartbride in Canada, added that there needs to be the intention to be happy by those who emigrate and an acceptance by those in the country. A slight act by the latter can reveal a welcome.

Mrs. H. C. Seldon, and Mrs. E. A. Fleming, program leaders, started the topic beginning with a resume of earliest landings and settlements in the New World. The first deliberate attempts to bring permanent settlers was made by the Company of One Hundred Associates in 1627. In the next 15 years, 4000 settlers were brought to New France.

An old British newspaper clipping was read in which advice was given to early British settlers as to what provision of food and medicine they needed to take with them for the long sea-voyage and what tools etc. for making a new home.

From 1840 on, famine in Ireland and European unrest and revolutions gave a new impetus to immigration. Government policies of 1910, 1927, 1952 were reviewed. No less than nine cabinet ministers have held the portfolio of immigration. Portfolio since 1950.

A "White Paper" on the subject in the summer of 1966 by ethnic groups, politicians and even foreign governments.

An "Opening the Door" policy of 1967 under Jean Marchand will provide more flexibility in the system and will give officers more leeway in determining an immigrants' potential, so that industry may benefit and educational facilities be found in Canada.

Statistics re countries of origin, percentages of nationalities, the flow of Canadian emigrants to the United States and other current items proved interesting and instructive.

Most of the members remembered a Hungarian woman who used to attend the meetings. These Hungarian refugees of 1956 have shown how successful a mass immigration in an emergency can be.

During informal discussion, refreshments were served by the hostesses of the evening, Mrs. A. Wells and Mrs. J. R. Reynolds.

REMINISCENCES

"I am a fellow-countryman of Shakespeare, and I was a friend of George Locke's." — Dr. Malcolm Wallace, President of University College, Toronto.

* * *

"My brother George was with opposition from my father," says Mrs. W. B. (Bess) Lattimer of this city, speaking of her famous brother, the late Dr. George Herbert Locke. And why the opposition?

All because George, who having attended Victoria College in Cobourg, graduated in the first class in Toronto, four years later with classical honors (1893), took his M.A. in 1896, lectured a year at Victoria College, then in 1897 went to the United States. There he became an editor of an educational magazine, taught at Harvard and became the Dean of The College of Education at the University of Chicago before becoming Principal of the new college at St. Anne in Montreal; only to give this up in 1908 — to become the head of a small library in Toronto.

"Yes, my father was greatly upset over this," remembers Mrs. Lattimer. "He felt George had thrown away a brilliant career for an obscure library."

How impossible it was for a father or anyone to foresee at the time of Dr. Locke's death in 1937 he would develop the small Toronto Public Library with its four branches and a staff of 22 members in all, into an up-to-date system of 27 branch libraries with special facilities for children, and a staff of 232. It is felt the Carnegie Foundation made its generous gifts to university libraries throughout Canada mainly due to his effort.

In the Locke Family Collection, (the Toronto Public Library was named the 'George Locke Branch'. It is on Yonge Street and Lawrence Ave., are called to commemorate the name of the man who for 25 years worked as chief librarian. It was opened Jan. 6, 1947."

"Sometimes fathers do not always know what is best for their children," asserts Mrs. Lattimer. "Each of us must find our own way."

In this Centennial year, Second Glance pays its respect to pay tribute to Dr. George Locke, a most distinguished Canadian, who as I had attended school in Belleville.

Sweet Treats Acceptable Gift For Serviceman Pen Pal

BOBBI CLARE

Dear Doris: Your column is great and has helped me many times. The letter written by "Soldier's Girl" was especially helpful as I have a pal in the service. I'd like to send him a birthday gift but a parcel of cookies seems hardly enough.

Could you give me some ideas about what to send to a Marine? I thought of an identification bracelet, but am not sure if he'll be allowed to wear it in Viet Nam, when he is shipped there. — J. F. M.

Dear J. F. M.: Sweet treats like cookies — made by a fellowloved soldier — are tops for boys in service. So is the bracelet idea. Or a recent closeup snapshot of you in a pocket-size plastic frame.

Nothing heavy or bulky that isn't consumable on the spot. Kit bags are cumbersome enough.

Dear Doris: May I say the following from "Concerned, Female High School Students", made very little sense?

First of all, the boys' letter (to which they were replying) said "Some girls ask for it". I'm sure they didn't mean this literally; they meant it physically. I agree with them 100 percent, because I know some girls that all over look' dates. Secondly, these girls have obviously never been in love (and with their present affection they never will), or else they wouldn't question how many boys would refuse. I am 18 and in love. If my boy friend was given the choice, he would refuse — because of the strength of our love.

So look, girls: why don't you go out and meet some nice guys like those that wrote the letter and accept the good along with the bad? — A Female Who Supports the Boys' Letter

Dear Female: Good for you! High time somebody came to the defense of the boys.

To Worried Family: Stop checking over your peppy old Mom as if she were a baby chick. She is having the time of her life. Another thing: tell us that swimming, figure skating, walking — all of which can be done at one's own speed — can keep a body healthy.

You are guilty of another love when you try to wrap her in cotton wool and tuck her into a rocking chair. Dat she ever do that to you? Note, please, that the lessons have already helped those arthritic joints.

To Going It Alone: The International organization of Parents Without Partners exists for lone parents like you. There are now chapters in several Canadian cities; and if there isn't one where you are, you can become an associate member and get the magazine. You might even be inspired to start a hometown branch.

Widows, widowers, divorced persons and never-married ones share ideas and get wonderful moral support about raising youngsters happily in homes where that much-needed two - parent team is lacking. Send me your name and address for details.

Dora knows! Canadian resources and can guide you to the help you need. Write to her, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.

Humpen Is Large German Beaker Used for Drinking

By RALPH and TERRY KOVEL

Fun and drinking went together in Germany during the 16th and 17th centuries. Large glasses or beakers that held enough spirits for several men were often used at a party.

The humpen was a cylindrical beaker that was so large it must have held the liquor for a group of people. The glasses were often a foot high, and they ranged from 4 to 5 inches across.

Most of them were decorated with enamel and gilded designs. Many types of furniture were made including chairs, rocking chairs, tables, book shelves, beds, mirror stands, umbrella racks, footstools, washstands, towel racks, children's furniture and others. The firm was an immediate success.

Most colorful were the coats of arms of a company that is making glass marbles. Marbles are still being made from glass, and they are basically the same type as those used a hundred years ago.

When Mr. Thonet died in 1871, he had factories or sales rooms in many countries. The firm is still in business making bentwood furniture and other types of furniture.

Q. What is the story about marbles, the kind little boys still play with? I see now ones called "agate." Is that a new type of hard glass?

A. The word "vitro" is part of the name of a company that is making glass marbles. Marbles are still being made from glass, and they are basically the same type as those used a hundred years ago.

Old marbles with figures inside are called sulphides. Some of the elaborate glass marbles using swirls in the pattern can be identified. Many early marbles were made from glazed clay, crystalline limestone, marble, or other stones. Agate marbles were originally made from polished agate rock.

It takes a study to recognize an old glass marble from a new one. Marbles used in America during the 19th century were often made in Germany. It has been said there were no marbles made in America over 1¼ inches in diameter.

Ralph and Terry Kovel regret that they cannot research and provide personal answers about antiques you may own. They do appreciate your questions, which can be answered in the column. Pictures and drawings cannot be returned.

This humpen was made in Germany in the first-half of the 17th century. It is decorated with enameled and gilded apostles. The glass is green tinted.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Recipe Given for Sponge Candy

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: I have read your column for many years and have dozens of clippings from it. I thought I had one for a sponge candy which you printed several years ago. It was like the commercial variety and I believe it was soda that made it porous. I would appreciate a copy. The finished candy is crisp, porous and very light in weight. — Isobell S.

ANSWER:

SPONGE CANDY

6 oz. (¾ cup) granulated sugar
4 level tbsps. corn syrup (or 2 level tbsps. white corn syrup and molasses)
2 tbsps. water
1½ tsps. baking soda

Grease a 8" square pan by brushing it with salad oil. In a heavy saucepan, stir together the syrup, sugar and water and stir over low heat until sugar dissolves. Wipe down sides of pan so no grains of sugar remain. Every grain of sugar must be dissolved before mixture boils. Boil to 300 deg. Fahr. If you have no candy thermometer boil to "crack stage": drop a little from tip of spoon into cup of ice cold water. It will become hard and should crack at once. While making test remove pan from heat. When it is ready quickly stir in soda but pour at once into prepared pan. Do not stir or disturb. Before it becomes too hard lightly mark into squares to make breaking easier when cold.

QUESTION: . . . would you have a recipe for salad dressing similar to the commercially bought products? Pat R.

SATURDAY
(Quick Supper)

Dinner Menu

Cream of Vegetable Soup; Frank's Special Hot Sandwiches (see Thurs.); Geranova Tossed Salad; Bakery Angel Cake with Tutti Fruiti Whipped Cream; Coffee.

ANSWER: Since this has not appeared here since June, 1960, I am delighted to repeat it for its all - purpose qualities.

ALL-PURPOSE SALAD DRESSING (calls for oil and boiled dressing)
2 tbsps. butter
1-3 cup flour
1 cup boiling water
2 egg yolks
1 tsp. dry mustard
1 tsp. salt
1 tbsp. sugar
1 tbsps. lemon juice
1 tbsps. vinegar
1 cup cold salad oil

Beat yolks with mustard, salt and sugar until very thick. Slowly add vinegar, beat in the cold oil, never adding more until each teaspoon is incorporated and dressing begins to emulsify (thicken). When it becomes quite thick (by the time 1-3 cup of oil is added) begin adding the mixed flour, juice and vinegar by teaspoonfuls until all of both are used, beating constantly. Melt butter, stir in flour until blended, then stir in boiling water until thick. Add while boiling hot to prepared mayonnaise, beat well. Store covered. An economical dressing.

Sociology Teacher Gives Report on Sex

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I teach sociology in a Connecticut college. I made a recent travel study around the state, talking to college students on sex. Their reports indicate that a good-looking male student of 21, if he has a smooth tongue, can seduce nine out of 10 of the pretty girls he takes out, regardless of her religion, social or economic background. Are these young boys bragging or dreaming? — NO NAME PLEASE.

ANN LANDERS

DEAR NO NAME: The percentage sounds wildly inflated to me. Moreover, I suspect males who make such claims are not only bragging and dreaming . . . they are also selling.

The idea that everybody is doing it has great sales appeal. The young men hoped to get this notion across to you as well as the girls whose resistance they are attempting to break down. Get it?

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was a heavy woman when my husband married me 17 years ago. I tried every imaginable kind of diet, and I did lose weight but I always gained back.

Five years ago I put myself under a doctor's care. He found I had a thyroid condition and gave me medication and a strict diet. I lost 80 pounds. My husband kept saying, "You'll probably gain it all back."

I was very proud of myself, but my weight loss didn't accomplish what I had hoped for. My husband was still more interested in watching sports events on TV or going out alone. The idea of celebrating our wedding anniversary was to go to the movies.

Within one year, I gained back the 80 pounds plus another 20. I've never been so depressed. I don't even feel like a human being. I'm alone a woman. If it weren't for our four children, I'd get a divorce. I see a social worker every week, and he tells me that no progress can be made until my husband comes in for talks. My husband says I'm the one who is nuts, not him. Please tell me what to do. — LORAIN.

* * *

DEAR L: If you've been seeing a social worker every week, you don't need me to tell you that your problem originates in your head. You are using food as a substitute for companionship and blaming your husband for your obesity. You need intensive therapy and I hope you get it soon.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I know this letter stands a one-million-chance of getting printed because so many people write about serious problems, but I'm going to take a chance anyway.

I work in the mail department of a large organization. Every day we receive hundreds of letters to employees. The envelopes often read: Mary Smith, Mary's Department Store, New York.

Mary could be a corset buyer, a cleaning woman, or the secretary to the president. It takes a lot of time to hunt up Mary Smith, and the hundreds of other employees whose mail is inadequately addressed.

Please tell people to write the name of the department on the envelope, and the person's title, if he has one. — FRUSTRATED.

DEAR FRUS.: Here's your letter, and based on my own mail, which runs about 1,000 letters a day, your chances for getting a letter in print were not one in a million, but approximately one in 333, since I usually print three letters a day. Thank you for writing about a problem I've never heard of before. Who says there is nothing new under the sun?

Pal Relates Ford's Story of Killing

TORONTO (CP) — A second former school friend of Wayne Ford's testified Friday that Ford revealed four years ago he killed his mother when she refused to lend him money or the family car.

Larry Metcalfe, 20, told a Supreme Court jury trying the 20 - year - old Ford for murder that Ford told him on Friday of the 1963 Victoria Day weekend that he grabbed his widowed mother, 39 - year - old Minnie Ford, and began hitting her.

Metcalfe quoted Ford as saying at the family's cottage: "... all knocked her down . . . I couldn't stop . . . There was a lot of blood. . . . She was not breathing. . . . I couldn't stop myself."

Metcalfe said Ford also described repeatedly stabbing his mother in the head while in the kitchen of the family's home.

Ford's statements were made in the presence of a second witness, Ronald Walker-Wall, Metcalfe told the court.

Wall, 21, testified Thursday he helped Ford put a woman's body into a box in Ford's home on the night after Ford had told him that he had killed his mother.

Metcalfe testified he helped Ford dump a crated body into Lake Ontario during the Victoria Day weekend of 1963.

The Crown contends a woman's body found in a plywood box in Lake Ontario last October is that of Mrs. Ford. Identification of the body has not been made formally at the trial.

Following evidence Friday—the third day of the trial—proceedings were adjourned until Tuesday. The all - male jury was not locked up.

Metcalfe said he was at the Ford cottage with Ford and Wall when Ford told him to pour a drink' sit down, and drink it.

Metcalfe testified Ford then said: "I killed my mother."

The witness said he sat in disbelief and said Ford continued: "I really did. I killed my mother. She's out in the garage."

Metcalfe said Ford then took him to the garage and showed him a box which he said contained the body. He said when Ford lifted the lid of the box, he saw a blood-stained cloth, a top end of a crowbar, broken glass and what appeared to be a shoelace.

"There was a shape crunched up in the box. It looked like head and shoulders at one end and knees at the other. There was a slight depression in the middle. I saw blood - stained jeans, light-colored, that had been cut down in beachcomber style."

The witness said the style and color of the jeans were the same as a pair he had seen around the Ford cottage.

Metcalfe said he, Ford and Wall took the crate containing the body out into the lake. He said the transom rope and of the boat fell off about a quarter-mile from shore as the boys were leaving the box over.

He said Ford had a Lagerlike gun and held it in the air to keep it dry as he pushed the box under the water.

Metcalfe said he started to swim to shore, but Ford called him back. All three got to shore when Wall swam in, chopped a rowboat free from a neighbor's dock and rowed it back.

The witness admitted under cross - examination by defence lawyer Donald Creighton that he was almost going under when Ford called him back and later Ford had held him up several times when he was going down.

Busy Week Reported By Police

NAPANEE — The traffic accident report of Napanee detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police for last week is not a good one, with a total of 14. Of these 11 were for property damage only, but there were personal injuries to one person in each of the three others. They were minor, however, with two persons requiring medical attention for bruises and abrasions.

Police investigated six thefts, one break and enter, five disturbances, 35 minor occurrences, and laid 12 charges under the Liquor Control Act.

Fireworks Display Planned

NAPANEE — The Napanee and district Jaycees are treating the town to a fireworks display of fireworks Monday, May 22. It will be held in the old driving park, now the fair grounds, and a mere 50 cents will admit a carload of people. Tickets will be on sale by the grandstand are being asked for a silver collection. Fireworks cost money, and this nominal charge will go toward paying for them.

The display will be both aerial and ground, and Mike Kourt and his committee have things all ready for the display, which will start at dusk.

This is the only event that will take place in Napanee to mark the Victoria Day weekend

READY FOR MARCH

TORONTO (CP) — Lionel Sorel, president of the l'Union catholique des cultivateurs of Quebec, says in a statement an estimated 250 buses already have been chartered in Quebec to take farmers to Ottawa May 24 for a march on Parliament Hill. The protest march is organized by the Catholic Farmers' Union, the Ontario Farmers' Union and the Council of Federation of Agriculture.

Cattle Killed By Train

NAPANEE — Jack Gesmith of R.R. 1, Marysville, was visited by misfortune Sunday. His cattle strayed on to the C.P.R. tracks, and a train plowed into the herd of 18. Four were killed outright, and a fifth was badly injured.

Red Shield Campaign Under Way

NAPANEE — Because of Monday's bad weather, the Red Shield Blitz of Napanee was not completed on that day as planned, however the town was covered before Tuesday evening.

The campaign is going well in the area, a Salvation Army spokesman stated Tuesday. The campaign began May 1, and will continue to the end of the month. The objective for centennial year is $3,195.

Deseronto Slashes Bank Loan by $31,000

DESERONTO — Reeve Donald Armitage, chairman of the finance committee, had some welcome news for the town council in making his report at the last meeting. The bank loan as of April 30, was $31,000 lower than on April 30, 1966, he said.

When asked to explain this, Mayor Gerald Lott ascribed it to two factors. For the past four years, he said, the town had been building up a reserve fund for the reduction of its bank loan, from $5,000 to $7,000 a year. In the second place, there has been a gratifying increase in the payment of tax arrears. The two had put Deseronto on a better financial footing.

Another helpful gesture was made toward Centennial Park. The Council will send two young people to Orin Ho Ho Camp at Madoc to take the leadership training course to be given there June 18 through 24, inclusive. These young people, probably a girl and a boy, will then be qualified to assist in supervision and in the enforcement of safety rules in the park following its opening July 1.

Expenditures were authorized for maintenance of the fire truck, $700 for new tires, and repairs estimated at $225.

Mrs. Evelyn Brooks was hired to be caretaker of the town buildings, replacing Wilfred O'Brien who had resigned earlier to take employment elsewhere.

A quotation of $10,000 for resurfacing the town sidewalks was discussed, but no action was taken.

New Act Provides Protection To Mental Hospital Inmates

TORONTO (CP) — Legislation providing for a new Mental Health Act which would remove the idea that mentally-ill persons "should be put away," was introduced in the legislature Friday.

Health Minister Matthew Dymond said the act provides that admission to mental institutions will no longer serve as legal authority to detain a patient for an indeterminate period. The act would force a doctor to re - examine and re - admit a patient at frequent intervals.

The patient would also have the right to appeal the doctor's decision to a review board consisting of a lawyer, two psychiatrists and two laymen.

Patients admitted because they were unfit to stand trial for criminal offences or because they were found not guilty by reason of insanity would also be given the statutory protection of an annual examination by an advisory review board under the chairmanship of a Supreme Court judge.

"It now can be said that no patient detained in any psychiatric facility in this province will be without the opportunity of receiving an independent review of his case," said Mr. Dymond.

"The rights of the individual are not only preserved but fortified," he said.

"Committal hearings before magistrate are not retained, nor are procedures which allow emissions to hospital on police judgments alone."

He told the house that under the act, medical certificates will no longer serve as legal authority to detain a patient for

Employment News

By J. R. STAVELEY, Manpower Counsellor

There has been little improvement during the past week in the local demand for workers, as represented by employers' requirements listed with the Canada Manpower Centre. Eighty percent of employment opportunities are for male workers and 80 percent of these jobs are for construction work.

The continuing period of cool weather has adversely affected not only the agricultural but the construction activity to date.

The following jobs are now open at the Canada Manpower Centre.

In the female division locally there is a vacancy in a women's clothing store for a sales clerk. This position is on a part-time basis. Although previous experience is preferred it is not mandatory. Still required is a cafeteria manager, the position calling for a good knowledge of cooking and the ability to prepare the menus, to organize and supervise the staff. An industrial plant is seeking a clerk-typist to work during the afternoons only, five days per week. Qualified cooks are required for horticultural and summer resort duties. A graduate hairdresser is required. There is an excellent opportunity for a mature, responsible woman to work under supervision in the field of child care. This position carries a good starting salary, together with full staff benefits. In contract and urgent demand are registered nurses and registered nursing assistants.

In the male division locally a qualified cook is required, mainly for afternoons and evenings, for motel work. Also sought is an experienced barber. Positions are also available for machine shop equipment operators, an experienced plant maintenance mechanic and a trailer camp maintenance man.

Two fourth class stationary engineer positions are as yet unfilled. There are numerous employment opportunities for young men, possessing a Grade 12 or better education, to commence career work in the banking and selling fields. Commission salesmen are also in demand. A few openings are available to start in the logging work. Experienced hospital orderlies are also in demand for regular hospital work. Urgently required by local employers are experienced brush painters.

If interested in any of these positions, seeking employment or thinking of re-entering the labor market, contact the Canada Manpower Centre at 324 Church Street, Belleville.

Restoring Tractors and Farm Equipment Has Become Family Affair for the Howes

By MAURICE SWITZER
STAFF REPORTER

TRENTON — What might best be termed agricultural antiques are currently in vogue among Ontario farmers and archivists.

Items such as the 40-year-old diesel tractor being restored by the John Howe family of RR2, Trenton, are prized artifacts to collectors, and have led to the formation of such organizations as the Eastern Ontario Steam and Antique Association.

Mr. Howe's 9600-pound tractor will be one of at least 50 similar entries at the association's annual "Steam Reunion" being held for the second year in Campbellford June 16, 17 and 18.

Rescued from rust and the obscurity of a Campbellford area farm's "back 40", the vintage tractor made its first trial run last week after undergoing months of primping, sprucing up, and scouring in the Howe workshop.

It was a lot of messy work, and a lot of running to find, or even make parts," says Jack Howe, "But it's ready to go out into a field right now."

The formidable tractor was manufactured by the Waconian - based Eagle Company four decades ago, and retailed by a Waterloo firm. Mr. Howe estimates top speed for the two - cylinder, 45 horse power engine at around four miles per hour.

If the speed is not impressive, the fuel intake makes up for it. The mammoth vehicle consumes some three gallons hourly.

Employed as a stationary engineer at CFB Trenton, Mr. Howe had the farm machinery "bug" instilled in him at his Thurlow Township farm birthplace. He has accumulated a diverse assortment of vintage farm implements over the years, and his next project will be the restoration of a pair of well-worn threshing machines now decorating the Howes back yard.

But the Eagle tractor is the first serious attempt Mr. Howe and his family have made at complete restoration. And complete it is.

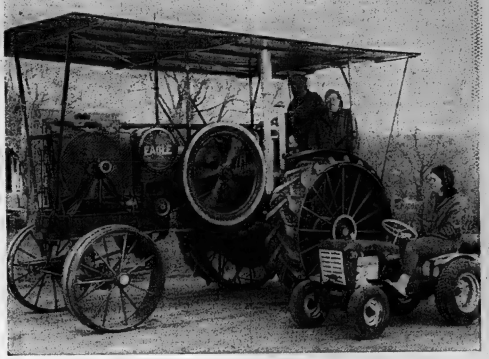
Considering the Eagle engine had not been so much as turned over in 12 years, the efforts of Mr. and Mrs. Howe, their 18-year-old daughter Pat, and son Ted, are self-evident. If there is any rust to be found, it lies beneath a spic-and-span veneer of paint and polish.

After being loaded on a float and driven to exhibit at Campbellford next month, the tractor will vie for honors with machines of its era to determine which owner has done the best job of face-lifting.

Competitions are also staged for steamers, threshers, and other antique implements, and "reunion" programs also include displays of vintage vehicles, engines, and working models of same.

Mr. Howe indicates the Eagle may eventually find its way into a U.S. museum, bearing a sign "Restored by the John A. Howe family, Trenton, Ont. Canada."

Proof-positive that the now-charging tractor is a result of family enterprise lies in the person of Pat Howe, who emulates her father's respect for the mechanical relics.



"I've been driving this type of thing ever since I can remember," she notes. Equally as adept in the workshop, Pat adds wistfully, if not a trifle impishly: "I wanted to take science technology and trade in high school, involving such subjects as mechanics, woodwork and electronics, but I wasn't permitted to do so."

"They didn't figure it would be proper with only boys in the class. I'll admit it's kind of embarrassing to go out for the evening and be able to repair your date's car if it has a breakdown."

A Thirsty Relic

Jack Howe fills the Eagle radiator in preparation for its first run in a dozen years.

The Winner . . . By Two Lengths!

The 40-year-old antique tractor dwarfs the garden variety driven by Pat Howe. In a race, the smaller engine would probably win, however. Top speed for the 9600-pound giant is only about four miles per hour. There were only six tractors of this model manufactured.

Fun and Excitement

The Young at Heart Find World Fair Truly Made to Measure

Czechoslovakian Pavilion Appeals To Youth

For the young set Expo means all the fun of the fanciest fair ever.

In its entirety, the exhibition is a dazzling demonstration, where children can wander wonderstruck.

But there are some specific points of enchantment to be picked out from the general portion of Expo.

Most obvious is La Ronde where the Children's World exhibit is housed.

Here toddlers can swoop up and down Pumpkin Hill aboard a roller-coaster, take the wheel in antique cars, sail in seashells, ride a train or merry-go-round.

Near the entrance is the puppet theatre, seating 250 children and presenting six 20 - minute shows each day.

Theatre presentations for children also are an integral part of some Expo pavilions.

The pavilion of Czechoslovakia devotes an entire section to children. It's called the World of Children and features a tiny theatre with 2,000 puppets.

ADT SH CM M A 0 0 3 3 33 TH

Over at the Pulp and Paper pavilion they're holding hundreds of children enthralled at daily performances demonstrating the discovery of pulp.

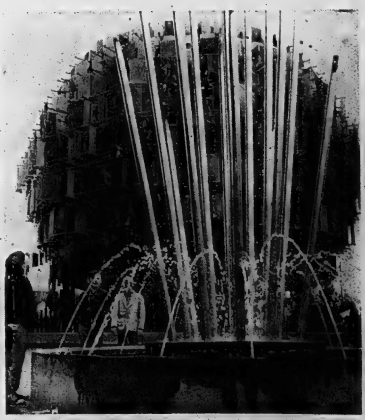
Music, song, recitative and a swap - around movie screen all wittily integrated, hold audiences enraptured daily.

But these are among the more specific points to be touched on for children during an Expo visit.

Aquariums, film shows, various entertainments, to quicken a youngster's response, abound throughout the exhibition grounds.

And there's little worry for parents who may lose a wandering child at Expo.

In no time, the problem is brought to the attention of a security guard or Montreal policeman, on duty throughout the grounds.



The child may be taken to one of the security stations where a call is placed to a big building centre near the U.S. pavilion.

Anywhere from 50 to 100 children a day may turn up at the centre to relax in its big playroom until their parents arrive.

And for parents who wish to leave the worry of small children in competent hands there is Le Petit Prince Garden on Ile Sainte-Helene.

Operated by the city of Montreal, it accommodates 250 and is open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. A $5 fee is charged for a full day's care.

New Zealand Erects Pavilion

MONTREAL (CP) — New Zealand, which has no pavilion at Expo 67, almost got one Friday — perched virtually on top of Australia's kangaroo exhibit.

The whole mysterious development was footooed with reports of wild Maori dances, grass skirts, rugby shenanigans and champagne.

The "pavilion" actually was a small tent, and at least three New Zealanders were said to have been involved in the establishment on a mound overlooking the kangaroo pen behind the Australian pavilion.

One of the men was attired in a rugby uniform, another was described by a baffled Australian official as wearing a grass skirt.

The official and other members of his pavilion staff discovered the bizarre trio performing a Maori war dance outside their tent. Involved in the ritual, which originated with the first natives of New Zealand, are grunts, leg-slapping and violent facial contortions.

A quantity of champagne was available, apparently for purposes of toasting the new "pavilion's" establishment.

Australian police, on duty at their country's showpiece, allowed the New Zealanders to finish performing.

Then they requested that the company break ramp, which was good - naturedly done.

An Australian spokesman said the men apparently were "frustrated" over the lack of a New Zealand pavilion at Expo.

Weekend Crowd of 1,000,000

MONTREAL (CP) — It's full speed ahead today into Expo 67's first long weekend, with crowds of more than 1,000,000 expected.

All transportation companies operating in and out of Montreal were prepared to handle increased numbers of visitors from outside the city.

Although today's weather forecast called for afternoon showers, temperatures at Expo are getting milder.

Today's anticipated temperature range is listed as between 45 and 60 degrees. Still milder temperatures are forecast for Sunday as skies clear.

Montreal, which often is the scene of Quebec separatist disturbances over Victoria Day weekends, looks like a gathering place for cars from across the continent as the big weekend gets going this year.

Confidence was expressed by Expo authorities that their site's facilities and personnel, bolstered in the light of growing experience, can accommodate the first great weekend rush.

Top events on Expo listings today were a visit by a sister of the Shah of Iran and special performances and displays at the Soviet pavilion in honor of Armenia, a republic of the Soviet Union.

There were to be concerts and fireworks elsewhere on the site, and Sunday three United States warships are expected.

SPORTS SLICES

By Geo. H. Carver
Sports Editor

"The Time has come, the Walrus said
To talk of many things
(Aw Shucks I can't recall this line)
And Cabbages and Kings."

For many years, at least as long as this sportswary sanctum can recall, this newspaper has given generous coverage to minor sport in all its phases.

Very few, if any, of the provincial dailies carry the detailed information of pre-season activities and subsequent coverage as does the Intelligencer.

Rosters of teams in hockey, softball, baseball and other sports published prior to opening dates have ofttimes consumed columns of space.

Coverage of events, condensed, if is true, to allow each game its reportage, at least have contained the names of the youngsters who distinguish themselves in play.

Special coverage has been given to those clubs that attain district or provincial championships like the case of the hockey Smith's Falls. This, we feel, is as it should be.

Coaches and managers, the most of them but not all, have been very co-operative in forwarding score cards or other reports of games played. They realize that due to staff requirements, it is impossible for this department to send personnel to the games.

Some, unfortunately, seem to think that coverage of winning games only is necessary. This is not the case. It is no disgrace to be defeated but those people are not instilling the proper spirit of sportsmanship in their young proteges by not sending in reports of "lost" games. It is not fair to the youngsters.

This newspaper has received letters of complaint from club officials criticizing association executives for certain actions taken. These have not been published because of possibility of controversy that might cause dissension in all ranks of the association concerned.

We do not say or intimate there is not truth in these complaints. But we do believe they should be ironed out to the satisfaction of all by the executive and coaches of the association concerned and not through the medium of the newspaper.

But we believe in the inalienable right of any communications media to criticize, constructive or otherwise, the proven acts of any official, club or association.

This will be adhered to regardless of whose toes are stepped on.

The writer of a recent letter to this department said in closing, "If you cannot say anything good about a person, it is better not to say anything."

Voltaire once wrote, "I do not believe sometimes what a man says, but I'll defend to the death his right to say it."

The barking of critical hounds through the medium of letters to the editor will not affect the policy of this newspaper in the least. Particularly those sent in by that gutless breed called "Anonymous." These are the heroes who call one everything in the calendar; tells you how to operate a newspaper, adds "why don't you drop dead" and develops writer's cramp when it comes to signing the letter.

Sometime they're too sleazy to use a five-cent postage stamp. Their favorite blast generally is a telephone call usually after midnight. Usually these are cut off before the last round is fired.

Fortunately these are isolated cases. The gentler majority of men connected with sport in this city from tyke to senior are sportsmen in the true sense of the word. We sincerely appreciate what they are doing for recreation and their co-operation with this newspaper.

Every newspaper appreciates "letters to the editor," sports and otherwise. Usually they contain the writers opinion on various topics and that of the writer only. They are always interesting as long as they do not contain anything that could be construed as libellous.

Despite criticism from the miniature minority, this newspaper will continue to support sports especially those of the minor organizations.

With a special "thank you" to those fine sportsmen who take time out secretarial duties to come up with a verbal pat on the back instead of a dagger.

Robinsons Rock In Home Run Romp

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Baltimore's band struck up its familiar rendition of the Robinson Rock and the music sounded as sweet as ever to Hank Bauer, who had switched the instruments around.

The Orioles rode the bats of Frank and Brooks Robinson to the World Championship last year, and Washington Senators felt the job again in Baltimore's 11-5 romp Friday night.

The Robinson boys walloped consecutive home runs in the sixth inning, helping Steve Barber to an early six-run lead. But there was something different about the 1-2 punch this time.

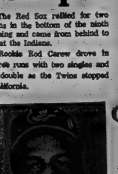
Bauer had switched their spots in the batting order. Throughout 1966 and for the first 30 games this season, Frank had batted third and Brooks fourth in the Orioles' order. But Friday, Bauer had Brooks batting third and Frank in the cleanup spot.

The results were familiar.

Brooks scored three times and drove in two runs and with his fifth home run, Frank had two hits including his ninth homer.

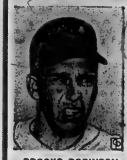
In other American League games Friday night, Chicago White Sox battered Kansas City Athletics 8-1, Detroit Tigers downed New York Yankees 4-2, Boston Red Sox shaded Cleveland Indians 3-2 and Minnesota Twins defeated California Angels 5-2.

Barber had control trouble and, was knocked out by the Senators in a four-run sixth, but the Orioles kept pounding away finished with 12 hits including a ninth inning homer by Russ Snyder.



Gary Peters won his fifth game for the White Sox with leading the attack against Kansas City.

Buford socked two triples, scored one run and drove in another while Agee stole three bases. The victory was Chicago's 12th in the last 13 games.



Bill Freehan and Willie Horton hammered home runs for the Tigers and Mickey Lolich tamed the Yankees on five hits.

The Red Sox rallied for two runs in the bottom of the ninth inning and came from behind to beat the Indians.

Rookie Rod Carew drove in three runs with two singles and a double as the Twins stopped California.

It rained in Syracuse Friday night and Toronto Maple Leafs of the International League are glad.

The unexpected day off before launching a tough series against Syracuse Chiefs and a Victoria Day doubleheader Monday in Toronto gives the Leafs a little time to get some of their wounded back in action. They meet league-leading Rochester Red Wings Monday.

Manager Eddie Shokin juggled the lineups through most of their four - game series with Rochester — the heavy part of the week, going so far as to use catcher Bob Montgomery, in left field and first baseman Tony Torchia in centre.

Nine Nags Poised For Preakness!

BALTIMORE (AP)—It was a hot June 16, 1945, when Melvin Sunshine Calvert saw his first Preakness. The view was from the back of a horse named Derby Dieppe, a 21-to-1 shot which ran third as Polynesian beat Kentucky Derby winner Hoop Jr., by 2½ lengths with Calvert missing runner-up honors by a neck.

Today, weighing only a few more pounds than when he could make 100 and short, even in a room full of jockeys, he saw the second leg of the Triple Crown for the second time with a different view and, he hoped, a different result.

As a trainer he tightens the saddle girth on Mrs. Frances A. Genter's In Reality for the 92nd and richest running of the 1 3-16 miles of the Preakness.

The track handicapper says thought so well of In Reality he made the Florida-bred son of International-Sly Dear Girl the 5-to-2 pre-race choice over nine other top flight three-year-olds.

The nine included Kentucky Derby winner Proud Clarion; Derby runner - up Barbs Delight; Derby trial - winner Dr. De-Cee; Return Again, light; Damascus, third in the Derby as the favorite, and Great Power, blessed with speed but with his staying powers questionable.

Rated behind In Reality at 3-to-1 were Proud Clarion, Damascus and Celtic Air, with Barbs Delight rated 8 - to - 1 choice, Great Power at 10-to-1. Ask the Fair and Reason To Hail 15-to-1 and Misty Cloud and Return Again 20-to-1 to make the winner's circle.

Post time was 5:30 p.m. EDT with CBS and the CBC televising the race from 5:5:45 p.m.

Even with a fast track, there was little likelihood the track record would be broken. Nashua set the mark of 1:54 3-5 in taking the 1955 running.

Stockton Tops

Knudson; In With A 69

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP)—Dave Stockton, somewhat stunned by an unexpected four stroke lead in the Colonial national invitation, resumed his battle with the course today.

"I guess I really shocked a lot of people," the slender Californian, 25, said Friday after grimming four strokes from par 70. "It shocked me."

The 6ft, coupled with Thursday's record-equalling 63, gave him a 36-hole total of 131, four strokes ahead of power hitter Tom Weiskopf.

George Knudson of Toronto survived a harrowing opening round 73 and comes in with a respectable 69 Friday.

Weiskopf slammed out a 65 Friday for 135 and a comfortable two - stroke edge over Homero Blancas, alone in third place at 138.

Blancas was one of a record 15 contestants to break par.

One stroke back at 139 were Ron Hogan, Gardner Dickinson, Rocky Thompson, Deane Beman and Bobby Nichols. Both Nichols and Hogan, with opening 67s, slipped to 72s.

Beman, making his debut as a pro, shot a 68, as did Thompson. Dickinson had a 67. Tommy Aaron and George Archer matched the next slot with even par 140s.

Montreal Wins Award

BC Boxers Capture Four Titles

MONTREAL (CP) — British Columbia boxers won four championships to win team laurels at the window of the Canadian amateur boxing championships here Friday, but a Montreal fighter parlayed his whirlwind style to capture the outstanding boxer award.

Light middleweight Donato Padunne, an 18-year-old Italian immigrant now living in Montreal, kept up a steady tatoo on his opponent in the 156-pound final, Gordon Sinclair of North Vancouver, to win his event.

B.C.'s four winners were heavyweight Bill Wood of Victoria, light welterweight Dick Findlay of Vancouver, featherweight Wayne Boyce of Vancouver and bantamweight Frankie Scott of South Burnaby.

The four champions—plus four finalists—gave B.C. the best team showing in the championships for the third consecutive year.

Ontario entries came second in team standings with three champions - light heavyweight Heinz Koppe of Toronto, middleweight Gary Summerbays of Beamsford and flyweight Walter Henry of Orillia.

Other champions were Lugi Aprile of Montreal and lightweight Alan Ford of Edmonton.

Henry, Scott, Boyce, Findlay, Aprile, Padunne, Koppe and Gerald Ratte of Montreal were selected to represent Canada at the Pan - American games in Winnipeg. Ranka Iwas selected to the team after losing to Alan Ford of Edmonton who was too young to compete in the Games.

The victory was the 65th in 69 amateur fights for Padunne who has won Golden Gloves titles in B.C. and Alberta.

Findlay won the 139-pound title over crosstown rival Freddy Fuller of North Vancouver in a bout that started slowly and finished furiously.

Findlay scored his fifth win over Fuller.

Fuller, the lightweight champion in 1965 and 1966, waded in during the second and third rounds and Findlay got him with right combinations to the head to take a one-sided decision.

Taylor a U.S. citizen who played halfback and quarterback with the Victoria Steelers of the Pacific Coast Football League last season, was a surprise winner in the heavyweight division. An American, he is not eligible to represent Canada in the Pan-Ams.

He turned in some straight right hands to the head almost as will against Roger Legros, of Hull, Que., in winning a decision.

Taylor, who entered the tournament with only seven previous fights, surprised in the first two days of eliminations by outpolicing Edward Tedeschi of Montreal, who had been unbeaten in 19 fights, and Hilaire Lampert of Niagara Falls, Ont., the Canadian champion in 1964.

Faces Two Charges

Court-Shy CAHA To Amend Rules

WINNIPEG (CP) — Executive director Gordon Hodges says the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association does not think amateur hockey disputes should be taken to the courts.

In an attempt to avoid such developments, CAHA executives will pay particular attention to the constitution at a three-day annual meeting starting in Saskatoon Monday. On the agenda is a lawyer's report containing recommendations on ways to strengthen CAHA regulations.

An Alberta court decision has already repped CAHA rules and a second court hearing looms on the horizon.

Calgary Spurs of the Western Canada Senior Hockey League headed for the courtroom in February when the CAHA overruled its Alberta branch and declared two players ineligible to play for Spurs.

Mr. Charles H. W. Riley ruled Dave Parenteau and Emory Sampson eligible and termed the CAHA action "officious and not in harmony with its own constitution." An appeal was rejected.

Meanwhile, the Canadian Major Junior Hockey League has started legal action against five CAHA officers — claiming the CAHA acted unconstitutionally in suspending players who participated in the maverick circuit; conceded its authority in banning the CMJHL from Memorial Cup competition and was responsible for CMJHL clubs failing to obtain professional sponsorship.

The CAHA refused to sanction formation of the CMJHL but the new headquarters in Winnipeg, CMJHL operations were established in Edmonton, Calgary, Saskatoon, Regina, Estevan, Moose Jaw and Weyburn.

But Hodges, in the process of moving from Melville, Sask., to new headquarters in Winnipeg, says informal discussions are in progress to get the CMJHL back in the CAHA fold.

Delegates are expected to study and ratify the final draft of a new agreement with the National Hockey League which will reshape junior hockey operations.

The pact terminates all individual team sponsorships by professional clubs or leagues; eliminates professional tryout and option forms and end the professional draft of teen-age amateur players.

An over - all junior draft by professional teams will be implemented, with draft funds paid directly to the CAHA which in turn will distribute the take to teams involved in the development of drafted players.

It will cost the pros $3,000 for each of the first 72 players and $2,000 for each additional player drafted. In addition, the NHL will finance a $250,000 development fund and pay a $75,000 annual assessment fee to the CAHA.

The new professional - amateur concord also will eliminate the perpetual suspension of a professional player who wishes to terminate his pro career. It will give the player the right, after sitting out two playing seasons, to apply for amateur reinstatement without professional consent.

The lucrative international hockey scene will also be discussed, with talks centering on the formation of a second national team based in Ottawa.

Working in partnership with the existing Winnipeg - based national club, the new squad is expected to enter the Quebec Senior Hockey League with Hull its home-ice base until a new Ottawa arena is completed early in 1963.

Umps In Trouble Again

"This Is A Color Presentation"

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

Some people see spots in front of their eyes. No one can blame Shag Crawford if he sees lines in front of his.

Crawford is a National League umpire who for the past two nights has been involved in controversies involving lines—orange and yellow lines that adorn the outfield wall of Houston's $23,000,000 Astrodome.

The latest dispute came in San Francisco's 6-2 victory over Houston Friday night.

Willie McCovey hit a drive off the left - centre field fence in the eighth inning that Crawford ruled was a home run. The umpire said it hit above the yellow line that runs from the 399-foot mark in left-centre to the 350 mark in right centre.

Crawford's decision brought an immediate and vehement protest from the Astros, who contended that the ball hit below the yellow line.

In Thursday night's dispute, the umpire was buzzed by Giants' manager Herman Franks as an aftermath of an argument triggered by a homer hit by Jim Wynn.

For bumping Crawford, Franks was fined $100 by president Warren Giles of the National League.

In other games Cincinnati Reds whipped Philadelphia Phillies 6-1, St. Louis Cardinals stopped New York Mets 6-3, Atlanta Braves edged Pittsburgh Pirates 3-2 and Los Angeles Dodgers crushed Chicago Cubs 8-0.

Mazeroski's homer came two outs after Tom Haller snapped a 2-2 tie with a homer off the right-field fence.

Rich Allen's two - out throw-in to the wrong inning error in the eighth inning helped Cincinnati past Philadelphia.

Roger Maris' run - scoring single in the fifth broke a deadlock and started St. Louis the sixth inning. Joe Torre walked, Rico Carty doubled him home and Mack Jones slugged a two-run homer.

Don Drysdale pitched a six-hitter against the Cubs' Ernie Banks, who collected four of the Cub hits.

Senior Baseball

Lombanks Open Here Tue.

By GARRY ALEXANDER
Staff Sportswriter

Senior baseball officially returns to Belleville when Flori George's Lombanks tangle with Brockville in an eight o'clock game at the Fairgrounds.

This tilt marks the first of 20 games which the newly formed Lombanks will play in the seven-team EOBA Senior grouping.

"We are confident of a good season", says club spokesman Moe Hunter, "and we feel we will get the fan support by providing a fast, exciting brand of ball".

Other teams in the league are Peterborough New Grads, Kingston, Oshawa, Little Britain and Kendal.

Don Masters will likely get the starting assignment on the Lombanks' pitching mound, with young Roger Hunter his relief man.

Bill Latchford is expected to be one of the club's pitching mainstays but late last week, his release and transfer from Brockville had not yet been received here. Latchford signed with Brockville for playoffs last year when there was no senior baseball here. Hunter said Friday that "Latchford's clearance to play here is just a matter of time."

And the Lombanks hope to add another right-hander to the club roster shortly in Miles Doracka, a former pitching star in Toronto. Doracka has been unable to attend practices to date because of a busy work schedule at the CNR ticket office ("Expo, you know") but he has added to team officials who figure he can be a key man in the club's line-up.

Coach George will likely open the season with veteran slugger Larry Mavety catching, Gerry "Jersey" Hill at first base, Pat Asselstine at second, Moe Hunter at third and Wayne Wood at shortstop. In the outfield, Rick Locke is expected to get the call for centre, flanked by Duffy Follwell or Stu Muirhead in right and Carl Boomhower or Larry Soule in left.

Boomhower, a good left-hand hitter, is one of the keys to the outfield's success, along with speedster Terry Wellesley, expected to see plenty of duty for late-inning defensive purposes - and as a pinch-runner.

John McKibbon is backup catcher and outfielder with Bill Mason and Muirhead, Glenn Clarke and Larry Lewis expected to see infield duty.

Mavety, Asselstine and Locke give the club strength up the centre, as well as with the bat, and since the players' ages range in the mid-twenties and under, speed is expected to be a definite asset.

Doracka, at 32, will be the oldest player on the roster if and when he signs, while others such as Wellesley and Rodger Hunter are still in the junior-age bracket.

"If the fans will come out and have a look, we'll do our best to give them entertaining ball. And if we're not at the top of the league standing, we don't figure on being too far off it," is Hunter's opinion.

KNUDSON'S WORLD OF GOLF

EXPENSES

On a Monday after a tournament, people read the list to find out what each golfer earned.

When I come home somebody will usually say:

Atta boy, George. What are you going to do with all that cash?"

Well, the first thing I'm going to do is settle up a few expenses from the previous week and weeks when I didn't make any money.

I figure I have to win $30,000 a year just to break even.

That, of course, includes all my living expenses as well as my playing expenses and taxes.

Playing expenses average about $500 a week on the road and some weeks, when the distances are greater, it will be as high as $1,000.

Let's take a typical tournament and break it down.

The golfer pays all of his own expenses so it starts with the taxi trip to the airport in his home town.

He must also pay cash for his airline ticket and, unless the tournament has provided a courtesy car at the other end, there is another taxi to his hotel.

Somebody asked me once if we get a special rate at hotels.

I always say: "We sure do. The rooms are usually $20 a night. When we get there for a tournament, they go up to $25." And I like to know what's going on at the clubhouse during a tournament. We do get a special rate, but we pay.

Also take into consideration the money you have in equipment the depreciation on your car, if you happen to be driving, and things like that.

Now we're at the course. You need a caddy. There is a minimum of $5 a round to caddies on the tour and $1 an hour for slugging balls on the practice tee. The standard, though, is $10 a round. If it has been a particularly good payday, and the caddy has done his job well, the practice is to give him a bonus.

Say you don't make the cut. That means the week is a total loss and everything is coming out of your pocket with nothing being put in. You are still travelling, living in a hotel and eating. The next time you look at those purses on a Monday morning remember that that's the amount that was deposited in my bank account.

By the way, did you ever hear of income tax?

Pole Vault Record Set

TORONTO (CP)—Doug Morris of Toronto vaulted 14 feet, six inches to set a Toronto district college athletic association track and field championships Friday to establish a Canadian junior record.

The previous record of 14 feet, 4¾ inches was set by Rick Burrows of Vancouver last year during a competition in which Morris was entered.

The new Ajax Lorris also established a Canadian interscholastic record.

The Percival Case

Says Club In Difficulties

TORONTO (CP) — Don Mills Track Club is in financial difficulty and has lost athletes to other clubs because it cannot meet affiliation with the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada, the club's head coach, Victor John Henderson, said Friday.

Henderson testified at a libel action brought by Lloyd Percival, former head coach and director of the Don Mills club, against five members of the AAU of Canada who allege Percival gave stimulants and sedatives to athletes to improve their performance.

The defendants, who form the Ontario registration committee of the AAU, are Fred Foot, George Denniston, Jack Reed-field, Hardy Davies and Jose Lightwood.

Henderson testified that Denniston and Mrs. Lightwood told the club they were not satisfied it had fired its professional coach (Percival).

The registration committee had ruled the club must fire Percival to retain membership in the AAU.

"I told Denniston that Percival had resigned," Henderson said. "We (the club) can't do anything. We can't get money."

Henderson said the club's training program has been disrupted.

Replying to a question by the defendent's counsel Lloyd Cadsby, Henderson denied that the committee had told the club it would be glad to renew the AAU affiliation on assurance that Percival had resigned as head coach in fact, not only in name.

Percival earlier told the court that any pills he gave athletes or carried in the trainer's bag were checked by the club doctor.

He told his lawyer that "pep pills" were used much less now by athletes than in the past because of warnings in professional literature on the subject.

Will Join Pro Show

TORONTO (CP) — Roberta Laurent of Toronto, who placed third in the Canadian senior women's figure skating championships last week, said Friday she will join an American professional skating show in August.

Miss Laurent, 18, who finishes high school this year, said she has ignored a contract with Holiday On Ice and will join the show in Madison, Wis., with a contract of more than $10,000.

Will Hold Gymnastic School

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's first national gymnastic school, designed to upgrade coaching facilities and train people for future world competition will be held Aug. 13-Sept. 1 at York University, Jim Hunter, president of the Central Ontario Gymnastic Association, announced Friday.

"Six of the world's best coaches will be on staff for the school," Hunter said. "Tom Zervic, the national coach for Yugoslavia, a six-man gymnastic team, will be leading the men's training and Bolesiav Bojac, also of the Yugoslavian coaching staff, will head the women's division and there will be four Russian coaches."

The school, to be sponsored jointly by the association York University and the department of physical education, will be financed by a grant from the community program division of the fitness council.

Liberal Government Is Unscathed by Throne Speech Debate

OTTAWA (CP) — Foreign affairs and housing shaped up as the main political issues Friday as the government emerged unscathed from a desultory throne speech debate.

The opposition, beaten back in four tests of confidence on other issues during the eight-day debate, didn't even bother to force a recorded vote on the reply to the throne speech.

However, a determined opposition assault on the minority Liberal government's policy of "quiet diplomacy" on Vietnam appears to be brewing.

The quietness was shattered a week ago in a speech by Privy Council President Walter Gordon that was sharply critical of the U.S.

Since then, Opposition Leader Diefenbaker has been pressing for a special Commons debate to formulate Canadian policy on the war.

There also were indications that a full-scale attack on federal housing policy may be launched by the NDP during the two - day debate that begins when the session resumes Tuesday.

The supply debate, which allows two tests of confidence, also opens the way to scrutiny by Parliament of $11,000,000,000 in government spending estimates for the 1967-68 fiscal year.

During the throne speech debate, even Liberal MP James Brown (Brantford) expressed concern about the housing situation.

Both he and Reid Scott (NDP —Toronto Danforth) said there should be a full-time minister of housing.

Mr. Scott accused Ottawa of trying to dock the issue on constitutional grounds and said Labor Minister Nicholson, now responsible for housing, should resign.

The situation in the Middle East also was developing into a hot issue as the week ended.

UN Secretary - General U Thant set the stage by acceding to an Egyptian demand that the United Nations peacekeeping force pull out of the Middle East.

It has been patrolling the Egypt-Israel border since 1956. Similar forces have been used since then to keep disputants at arms length in The Congo and Cyprus.

Gordon Aiken (PC — Parry Sound - Muskoka) asked Friday what will happen to the government's defence policy, in which a peacekeeping role is stressed, if UN members get rid of such forces at any time.

The question was not answered but it promises to come up again.

DUNDAS ST. W. (HWY No. 2) Formerly known as the TRENT ROAD BELLEVILLE ACRES OF FREE LIGHTED PARKING

'When Fox Goes to Barnyard to Pray, Count Chickens'--Manning

EDMONTON (CP) — "When the fox goes to his knees in the barnyard to pray," Premier E. C. Manning told an election rally here, "that's the time to start counting the chickens."

Mr. Manning was using the aphorism to make a point that he has hammered at throughout the campaign leading up to Alberta's May 23 election: That the New Democratic Party is playing the role of a pious fox in the campaign and poses a threat to what the premier refers to as Alberta's "free enterprise" system.

Mr. Manning has reserved his heaviest campaign fire for the NDP and has repeatedly urged that voters abandon any thought of voting for the Progressive Conservatives or Liberals because doing so will only split the "free enterprise" vote and allow the NDP to win seats.

The New Democrats have replied in kind, with NDP Leader Neil Reimer reiterating again and again that the election is basically a battle between his party and Mr. Manning's Social Credit forces.

Both the Liberals and the Conservatives in their campaign platforms called for greater provincial expenditure on education and agriculture and expansion of secondary industry.

The NDP has emphasized a contention that business firms have been getting too much out of the exploitation of Alberta's natural resources and the people of the province have been getting too little.

The premier carried his personal campaigning Friday into Edson constituency, where NDP Leader Reimer is attempting to gain a legislature seat from Liberal Bill Switzer. Mr. Switzer defeated Mr. Reimer by 90 votes in a by-election in 1963.

Standing in the last legislature was Social Credit 58, Liberal three, NDP one and coalition one for a total of 63. There are two new seats, one each in Edmonton and Calgary, at stake in the election under a redistribution.

THE LITTLE WOMAN

"I'll tell you why she's so quiet. She's trying to think up a long rambling story to tell just when we get to the door to say good night."

THE GOLDEN YEARS

This Retired Couple Moved But Don't You Rush Into It

By THOMAS COLLINS

Mr. and Mrs. George Greene, who have loudly proclaimed for five years that they would never move away from their lovely old home when they retired, have just retired. And are packing up to move away.

They have a logical argument for their switch. It could be pertinent to many people nearing retirement.

"We started changing our minds," Mr. Greene said, "when a son and his family were transferred out of town to a good job 150 miles away. This was too close to make visits too far for an afternoon drop-in.

"With our children being the most important single thing to us in retirement — as I think children are to most good parents — we began wondering if our greatest happiness wouldn't be in following them to their town . . ."

But, Mr. Greene explained, he wasn't willing to move on this excuse alone. So he set out, as he described it, "to push away all the lavender and old lace, all sentiment, all preconceived notions" and make an unemotional appraisal of what values their old home really held for them.

He broke his study down into the following order, and came to the following conclusions:

The House — It was 34 years old and, while still good, was troublesome on repairs. Too large for their needs, and had grown tired and dull with too many years of repairs in the same old plot and the same old bald spots in the lawn.

Old Friends — The Greenes' friends all were about their same age. They were beginning to die off or grow infirm. As they retired, most of them were moving away. "By actual count" Mrs. Greene remarked "the 20 best friends we had when all of us were about 61 had dwindled to six when my husband reached 65." They figured they could make new friends 150 miles away about as easy as they could among the young newcomers moving into their old friends' homes here.

The "Old" Town — they decided it wasn't and couldn't be unless it were stagnant. They knew which way the streets ran and the names of stores "but the changes that have come in every town in the last 35 years have been dramatic ones with the ownership of nearly everything turned over with new faces in public office more people, different people expanded city limits more taxes. Anybody who has lived in just about any town for the last 10 years and thinks it's the same town now it was then has stardust on the brain."

The Hurt — The Greenes figured that in such year up to 65 they had grown tiresome to a few more people as more people had grown tiresome to them. A few more prejudices and dislikes had developed and hardened. A move to a new town would be something of an acid bath that would wash the rust away.

The Commitments — "At 65 we were pretty well delighted" Mr. Greene said "to support certain causes, attend certain meetings, take part in certain church functions because for the 28 years we've lived here we've done those things. We don't believe in all of them anymore. But we're stuck. We're stuck with tired old contributions to this and that. But most depressing of all we must always be going to funerals, because it is older people that we know, and always we must be visiting a cemetery to pay our respects . . ." The Greenes decided there was only a little good left for them to say good-by to, and rather a lot that was not so good.

This, then, is the appraisal which has led the Greenes to pack up and move — into a modern two-bedroom cottage four blocks from their son's family, and with a prayer that the son won't be transferred again.

The Greenes are probably wise. They had better be because, as with most retired people, they can't say in a few months they were kidding. There's no going back. Which is why it is best for most retired people with their own home, no matter what the problems, to stay put.

To Your Good Health

Many Allergic to Synthetic Fabrics

Dear Dr. Molner: Please explain why synthetic fabrics irritate my skin — bring a rash, itch or twitchy feeling?

Is there any way to overcome this? Don't condemn me to cotton and wool when all the attractive fashions are synthetic.

Are many people so affected or am I a freak? Is it an increasing condition? Are there any safe synthetics now? — Mrs. A. S. H.

Don't blame me for "condemning" you to cotton and wool. What about silk and linen?

You evidently are allergic to the synthetics, and while I seldom hear of anyone who seems to be sensitive to all of them, there are quite a few people sensitive to one or more of them.

Asking whether there are "any safe synthetics" is something I can't answer. For most people they are all safe; allergy is strictly an individual matter.

The first rule of controlling any allergy is to stay away from whatever bothers you. Whether the condition, otherwise will get worse cannot be predicted with any assurance. The safest course is to avoid things you know are irritating to you.

It is possible that medication, possibly of the antihistamine type, might help you, but you ought to be guided by a specialist in this field. In a word, if I had your problem, I'd go to an allergist. If he can't solve the whole problem, he can ease it.

Dear Dr. Molner: I am under a doctor's care for arthritis in both knees. I am 35 and the mother of three. We love camping and spend most of the summer near a river. We have a trailer. Must we give it... some people tend to have them again and others don't. They may or may not recur. In the nose, they do not tend to become cancerous. The principal symptom that you could detect would be clogging of the nose or interference in breathing. So I wouldn't look for trouble, and if more polyps do appear, they can be readily removed.

Dear Dr. Molner: Until our baby was born with a bare lip and cleft palate, I didn't realize that this happened frequently. What causes it? Will our grand-children have it? Our other children are perfect. — Mrs. G. H. R.

This deformity occurs when the baby is in a quite early formative stage. The upper lip and palate begin as separate sections which normally fuse together. When the left and right side do not fuse, the result is one or the other or both...

of these fives.

Weekly Livestock Review

TORONTO (CP)—Trading on slaughter steers was active at steady prices and about steady or, top grades of heifers at the Ontario public stockyards this week.

Medium and good cows sold lower, canners and cutters were firm, bulls were active and strong and replacement cattle were active and strong especially on the better grades.

Veal calves sold unevenly at steady prices, the hog market opened slightly lower but maintained an upward trend, feeder lambs were lower and spring lambs sold at steady prices.

Silver, Gold, Oil Shares Go Higher

By LARRY DWORKIN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Silver, gold and oil shares attracted a heavy wave of speculators and investors on Canada's major stock exchanges this week, although there was no news of a major find.

The prospects of future oil discoveries, higher earnings and the hope a major gold producer may be entering the uranium business sparked the demand.

Silver issues were bid sharply higher in Friday's session following a United States government decision to restrict the sale of silver.

The move was brought on by an unprecedented rise in silver sales during the past week, and since 1964 the government's silver stock has declined about 50 per cent.

Brokers said Canadian producers may switch part of their production to the London Metal Exchange, to meet an anticipated increase in demand.

The London exchange is a free market and the price of silver is not fixed as in the United States.

Most gains were made by small mining concerns.

At Toronto, Patco climbed 1.43 to 4.85, United Keno Hill 1.5 to 5.35, Siscoe 90 cents to 7.75 and Silverfields 80 cents to 3.20.

"Astonishingly frank! An unabashed look at real-life sex. Remarkably uninhibited and specific in its recording of the way lovers talk and touch and think!" — Robert Kotlad, Life Magazine

"A tender and lusty study of love, 'Dear John' is a tour de force of erotic realism. Lovemaking better ...as explicit as the law allows!" — Time Magazine

"Altogether it is a stunning picture, a compelling picture! A frank and unlabbished exposition of the on-rush of physical desire, after another scene expands upon the brash techniques of courtship and the clamorous fulfillment of desire!" — Bosley Crowther, N.Y. Times

Egypt Closes Gulf of Aqaba

From Reuters - AP

CAIRO (CP) — Egypt announced today it had closed the Gulf of Aqaba to Israeli shipping, sealing off the major Israeli port of Elath from the Red Sea and trade routes beyond, heightening the danger of war in the Middle East.

But a Panamanian freighter, identified as the 3,500-ton Amalie, sailed into Elath's harbor at dawn today. It crossed the Straits of Tiran at the mouth of the gulf after dusk Monday night.

Egyptian President Nasser told airmen at a front-line base in Sinai: "The Israeli flag will not pass through Aqaba Gulf and our sovereignty over the gulf entrance is not negotiable. If Israel wants to threaten us with war they are welcome."

The authoritative Cairo newspaper Al Ahram said Nasser also banned ships of other nations from carrying strategic materials to Israel through the gulf.

Ships entering the strategic gulf would have to pass Sharm el Sheikh, where a towering fortified post guards the southern approach to the gulf. The Egyptian Army was reported to have occupied Sharm el Sheikh Monday after United Nations troops left it at Nasser's demand.

It was from Sharm el Sheikh that Egyptian artillery blocked Israeli-bound shipping for eight years until Israeli troops occupied the post and nearby positions at the mouth of the gulf in November, 1956.

They later withdrew and handed the strongholds over to the UN emergency Force.

In Israel, Premier Levi Eshkol met top ministers and officials for emergency talks today after receiving reports of Nasser's speech.

Informed Israeli sources said:

EGYPT

Blockade Could Mean War

TEL AVIV (CP)—Armed interference with Israeli shipping in the Gulf of Aqaba could mean war, informed Israel sources said today.

Officially Israel is saying only that it is standing on a 10-year-old statement to the United Nations by former foreign minister Golda Meir.

She told the General Assembly March 1, 1957, that "interference by armed forces with ships of Israel's flag exercising free and innocent passage in the Gulf of Aqaba and through the Straits of Tiran will be regarded by Israel as an attack entitling it to exercise its inherent right of self-defence under article 51 of the charter and to take all such measures as are necessary to ensure the free and unhindered passage of its ships in the gulf and in the straits."

Israel Prime Minister Levi Eshkol held emergency talks with his top advisers today and was expected to call a cabinet meeting later in the day.

The announcement by President Nasser of the United Arab Republic that he intends to close the Gulf of Aqaba to all Israeli shipping and other ships carrying strategic materials quickly spread throughout Israel.

Tension visibly mounted.

To the man in the street here, the Cairo announcement meant only one thing—the die has been cast.

Washington's warning that American tourists should stay out of Israel and those here should depart at once in effect, many tourists of all nationalities, including those stranded at hotels and long lines began forming in front of airline offices.

Eshkol met the Knesset Monday that the Egyptian build-up in Sinai comprised some 80,000 troops, infantry and armored divisions and in addition a reinforced "Palestinian force."

On the Israeli side, forces were deployed in key positions in the Negev to anticipate any possible moves from across the border.

260 Missing in Brussels Fire Possibly Set by Belgian Reds

BRUSSELS (CP)—Arson was suspected by Belgian police today as the cause of a fire in two stores in which some 260 persons may have died.

Police listed 21 dead and 100 injured. Store officials had said 260 persons were missing, with most of them probably still in the wreckage.

Police limited their count to bodies recovered from the ruins of L'Innovation, giant department store in the heart of the city's shopping centre and a neighboring store.

Belgian Premier Paul van den Boynats told reporters when he visited the disaster Monday night: "We must unfortunately expect several dozens of victims."

A spokesman for the store said the list of the missing was still growing. It was feared it would be the world's worst fire since 223 persons were killed in a circus fire in Niteroi, Brazil, Dec. 17, 1961.

The fire roared through Innovation at the peak of Monday's mid-afternoon shopping crush.

Scores of shoppers and staff were trapped in the inferno and others plunged to their deaths from windows in desperate attempts to escape.

Innovation and a smaller store, Priba, were destroyed an adjoining silk products company and several other buildings were still blazing hours later.

It was not yet known today how many of the more than 1,000 persons in the stores were able to escape.

Asked by reporters whether sabotage was suspected, Brussels Police Chief Andre de Gryse said: "We will examine every possibility."

Police were investigating a theory that it might have been linked with opposition to U.S. policy in Vietnam.

A store official said a number of threatening telephone calls and letters had been received criticizing the store for a two-week campaign to sell American goods.

May 13, a group of young pro-Peking Belgian Communists entered the store to protest against the sales campaign. They wore white shirts with anti-American slogans lettered in red."

One of the young demonstrators was quoted in the Communist weekly Voix du Peuple as saying: "Neither arrest nor jail nor firing squad will ever stop us."

Pierre Bolle, vice-president of Innovation, said the fire broke out simultaneously at opposite corners of the building on the first and third floors. He said the whole building was in flames in 10 to 15 minutes. A police officer spoke of other places where the fire seemed to have flared at the same time.

Brussels radio sent out repeated calls for witnesses of the fire to help police in the investigation.

A girl of the Innovation staff said of the tragedy: "The most terrible thing is to discover people who don't believe you. Relatives of missing persons don't want to accept the truth. We keep telling them that all those trapped in the fire are dead. They keep hoping. They keep waiting."

"The basement, ground floor, first and second floor were evacuated in relative calm," said Bolle. "But it was very different with the upper floors."

"The people were out of their minds," said one fireman, "running wildly in all directions, scrambling over each other."

"Some were lying on the floor. We managed to evacuate a number of people by ladders and there were some perilous escapes over roofs to neighboring buildings."

Some victims slid down ropes that broke.

Liquid gas stored in Innovation exploded in the blaze, shaking the downtown district.

The blackened front walls of the steel - and - concrete stores were still standing today, but most of the interior was burned into wreckage. Reinforced concrete pillars were broken and twisted.

Trenton Low of 29 Is Record

TORONTO (CP) — Record low overnight minimum temperatures for May 23 were registered early today at several Ontario centres. At Trenton it was 29, compared to a previous record of 30 in 1935. Killaloe had the lowest new record, 26 compared with 27 in 1962.

Rash of Sunday Fires Here Deliberately Set

By HARRY BULHALL
Staff Reporter

A small rash of weekend fires, deliberately set, are being probed by fire investigators and police in Belleville today.

Most serious outbreak was in a vacant house on the north side of Victoria Avenue hill where firemen broke in Sunday morning to trace flames to a small fire burning in the centre of a ground floor room.

The flames spread through the walls to an upstairs room and along rafters.

"We got there just in time to prevent it getting into the attic," said fire chief Ted Foster. It caused quite some damage.

The chief said the fire had been deliberately set after the culprits forced a rear door.

An hour earlier, firemen had been called to 303½ Front Street where a pile of rubbish was burning.

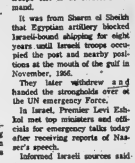
Fire was discovered in the front and rear seats of a 1948 automobile, owned by a nearby apartment dweller.

It couldn't have come from the rubbish since all the car windows were up, but the car was parked there unlocked," said the chief.

While dousing the blaze, firemen noticed smoke in a nearby laneway. Investigating they found a big shipment crate burning against a rear door of Moira Furniture.

Smoke filtered into the store and an upstairs apartment before firemen quickly struck out the fire.

"We got there just in time," said Chief Foster.



The fires were discovered while officials were still probing a fire Friday night at the vacant Cash and Carry premises on Pinnacle Street.

Chief Foster said a boarded, rear window had been forced and his men discovered paper burning in the middle of an office floor.

Inspector Del Hope, of the Ontario Fire Marshal's office stationed in Belleville, will take over investigations into the fires.

OTTAWA (CP) — Claude Jodoin, president of the Canadian Labor Congress, was listed in unchanged condition Monday after suffering a major stroke.

TORONTO (CP) — A healthy baby girl, the second infant abandoned on the ground in Metropolitan Toronto in the past four days, was found in a yard Monday by two children. Scott Elliott, 13, and Daniella Van Eisseik, 9, found the baby, between six and 12 hours old.

Leftist Workers Strike at Hong Kong

HONG KONG (CP)—After 11 days of wild anti-British rioting, Hong Kong's leftist Chinese shifted their attack on the colonial administration to the labor front.

Drivers from leftist unions went on strike, making idle more than 400 doubledecker buses and severely crippling public transportation on Hong Kong Island.

Three thousand dockyard workers went on a sitdown strike.

Leaders of the seamen's and textile workers' unions were reported planning strike calls.

The Communists also were said to be planning to try to disrupt the supply of water, gas and electricity.

Pro - Communist labor agitators moved throughout the colony, threatening retaliation against all Chinese who do not join the anti-British drive. The colony's labor force is 90 per cent Chinese.

Government broadcasts, repeated every few minutes throughout the day, assured the colony's 4,000,000 Chinese that the colonial government, "with the full backing of the British government," could and would maintain law and order.

To do this, the government has more than 20,000 armed police, 7,000 British garrison troops including three battalions of Gurkhas from Nepal, and some 2,000 local reserve units.

The broadcast said workers who lost their jobs because they resisted intimidation would be given other jobs by the colony's "many responsible industrialists" who oppose the labor strife.

The mob violence and rioting that had wracked the colony for 11 days subsided, at least temporarily. Small gangs of Chinese formed on side streets in defiance of a ban on all public assemblages. There were scattered incidents of rock throwing and threats to police, but no major violence up to the late afternoon.

Chinese Official Walks Out As Briton Protests Consulate Closing

PEKING (Reuters) — China's deputy foreign minister walked out when British Charge d'Affaires Donald Hopson tried to deliver a protest Monday night against orders to close the British consular office in Shanghai, informed sources said here today.

As Hopson's protest was being translated, the Chinese official, Lo Kuei-po stood up and walked out of the room.

The deputy foreign minister accused British Foreign Secretary George Brown of using "shameful imperialist language" and taking an "unreasonable, rude attitude" towards Chinese diplomatic representatives in London last week.

Brown summoned Chinese Charge d'Affaires Shen Ping to the foreign office May 18 to deliver a stinging protest about the treatment of British diplomatic representative in Shanghai, Peter Hewitt, who was manhandled by Chinese Red Guards.

The deputy foreign minister charged that Hopson call on Britain to make a speedy reply to five demands raised by his ministry over recent incidents in Hong Kong.

He charged that "fascist atrocities" by the Hong Kong authorities were continuing to spread, the agency report said.

Meanwhile, China released a British merchant ship held for a week after its members were accused of handing portraits of Mao Tse-tung, British sources said today.

Mobs Fill Hong Kong Streets

Original Thinkers Penalized Needham

TRENTON — A self-declared dissenter, Toronto newspaper columnist Richard Needham Sunday offered a Trenton audience some of his patented, "merely idealistic suggestions."

The widely - read satirist was keynote speaker at a Sunday conference planned by Trenton High School teacher Dr. Peter Miedema as a "critical discussion" of the present-day educational scene.

Some of the 10,000 letters he receives each year lead him to believe high schools have lost sight of their educational function, says Mr. Needham, noting "there is far too much worry about the ultimate income a student will be earning — whether it will be $12,000 a year instead of $19,500."

"High schools are becoming institutions where people are 'trained,' rather than educated. The existing system tends to reward memorizers and penalize original thinkers. The aim of education should not be to inspire a 'zoom-like' quality in students just to prepare them for examinations. Some people are good at passing exams and nothing else."

About 50 persons, half student age and a number of area teachers, heard Mr. Needham decry what he claimed was an overriding regimentation in today's school system. "There was too much secrecy about a so-called "student discipline problem." Ing "I don't believe in such great teachers as Socrates, Buddha, or Jesus handed out directions for students concerning their hair too long, or their skirts too short. If young people are treated with respect, they, in turn, will behave in a responsible fashion. Our students should only be required to uphold the rules that govern our everyday lives."

Voluntary class attendance and student choice of teachers were prominent planks in Mr. Needham's "ideal" educational platform, and he criticized school boards for being primarily concerned "with money and administration — not education."

"People ask how we can meet the rising costs of education. But we're squandering $6 billion yearly on defence.

"Defence against what?

"There are only three countries in the world that might conceivably attack us — Uncle Sam, Chine, or Russia. If Uncle Sam attacked us, not even Paul Hellyer could stop him, and if either of the others tried, Uncle Sam would almost certainly rush northward and protect our virginity.

"In any event, any good high school classroom teacher is worth more than twenty-five thousand dollars a year," he said.

"Ideal" School System

TRENTON — An "ideal" high school system as advocated Sunday by Trenton newspaper columnist Richard Needham would embrace the following principles:

- Basic classroom teacher salaries of $20,000
- Voluntary class attendance by students
- Choice of school, teachers, and subjects for students
- Abolition of rules — except those "that govern our everyday lives"
- Abolition of examinations
- Teachers to have recourse to refuse to teach students indicating an unwillingness to learn
- Replace standard desks with discussion tables; allow smoking, coffee breaks
- Abolish P.A. systems and bells
- Send students out to schools more often for educational purposes; bring more outsiders into schools
- International and interprovincial student exchanges on a regular basis
- Relieve teachers of all responsibilities except that of teaching

Mr. Needham told a Trenton audience establishment of situations similar to those above would remove the existing "box" syndrome of high schools, which he claimed rendered today's high school regimented "training institutions."

Teach, Not Train Said School Job

TRENTON — Continuance of today's educational trends will spell society for a "1984-like" existence, a Trenton high school teacher claims.

Organizer of Sunday's conference on education here, Dr. Peter Miedema confirmed his current crusade against the "totalitarianism" of Ontario's education system.

"Society dictates what students are to learn and so that they may enter the labor "market of horsepower and manpower. But education should not be training for a job — it should be teaching a person how to live."

A former minister, the Netherlands - born language teacher holds two doctorates, the degrees from Queen's University and the University of Utrecht.

"Students are being processed," emphasized Dr. Miedema.

"The future has no place in our curriculum, except to cut a better job." He slammed education minister William Davis, whom he quoted as saying "we must prepare our students for their place in our society."

"A teacher must be able to make student surroundings as realistic as possible for the development of student potential — this means no regimentation."

Dr. Miedema, another teacher and a number of high school students hope to put a better job." He slammed education minister William Davis, whom he quoted as saying "we must prepare our students for their place in our society."

"A teacher must be able to make student surroundings as realistic as possible for the development of student potential — this means no regimentation."

Dr. Miedema, another teacher and a number of high school students hope to put on a two hour session of a 4-page tabloid called the Centennial Rebel in an attempt to stimulate local residents to re-assess the education system. He is currently organizing a six-week summer school in languages and philosophy, open to interested students in the area.

Large Crowds Attend Air Show

TRENTON — Armed with a barrage of cameras, binoculars, and warm clothing, several thousand spectators invaded Trenton's Canadian Forces Base for Saturday's 1967 edition of one of the biggest open house sessions around.

Everyone connected with this year's Air Force Day was being extremely careful not to call the event Air Force Day, however, what with armed forces unification and all. But those who came to see the men in blue sport their wares weren't worrying about semenclature.

In fact, if they were worrying about anything, it was an unexpected chilly temperature drop made even more acute by brisk winds sweeping across the unsheltered CFB renton tarmac areas.

Main attractions included the precision aerobatics of the armed forces Golden Centennaires team of Tutor jet trainers, a supersonic flights demonstrations by Canadian Forces Voodoo and Super Starfighter aircraft, and popular ground static displays of the varieties of aircraft that operate from Station Trenton.

Although the Centennaires are vividly colorful than their disbanded Golden Hawk predecessors, their more tendency to work in their favor, with their aerobatics not offered to audiences strictly on a "now - you - see - it - now-you-don't" basis.

The high - speed Voodoo and Starfighter, on the other hand, set the stage for the precision flying team by providing a lightning - fast deafening exhibition of air skill.

Adding to the entertainment were three bands and a Trenton "sing - out" group.

One complaint — there was not a cup of hot coffee at any stands to serve as antidote for the chilly weather.

Firecrackers Believed Fire Cause

Youngsters with firecrackers, celebrating the Victoria Day holiday, may have caused an expensive bonfire in Belleville Sunday.

Fire officials today are probing destruction of a storage warehouse on South Fetchimer where firecrackers were found stuffed in keyholes.

Fire chief Ted Poste said a caretaker on the site had repeatedly chased away children from the building Sunday.

The warehouse was owned by Louis Radonicich and flanked a metal building once used as a boat building workshop, later by a small company producing paper towels.

Chief Poste said the building was not insured.

Resolution Requests Autonomy

TRENTON — Notice was given at Sunday's informal "conference" on education here of a resolution calling for the organization of autonomous high school governments representative bodies of teachers and students which would set policy and direct activities.

Formulated by a group headed by Trenton High School teacher Dr. Pieter Miedema, the resolution claims "today's educational system is more and more becoming an instrument in the hands of a small group interested primarily in the needs of business and industries."

The "ideal" high school proposal advocates, among other things, "complete freedom and authority for teachers in matters of curriculum."

Dr. Miedema said the resolution is to be circulated throughout the area to determine the public's reaction to it.

Light Up the Sky!

Brilliance of Monday night fireworks at Fairgrounds is captured by time exposure. Big show sponsored by Parkdale community, brought curtain down on Victoria Day holiday.

Festivities Hurt By Cold Weather

Queen Victoria cast a l n by wouldn't have been amused the way weather withered weekend celebrations of her birthday in the Quinte area.

While most events went on as planned, much enthusiasm went out of them as cold, even breezy, weather prevailed for most of the holiday weekend.

Cottages and boat owners used the three - day break as an opportunity to check out their properties for another season.

Cold weather or not, many turned east and travelled to Expo.

Provincial police reported the MacdonaldCartier Freeway heavily travelled Friday and Monday nights.

Travel from Belleville bus and train terminals was in heavy volume with most people headed for Montreal or Toronto.

In Prince Edward County there were all set for an apple blossom festival at Harold Bonter's Albury farm. Ontario Agriculture Minister Steward was to attend.

Everything turned up but the blossoms, retarded by the cool spell. An inter-denominational church service was held as scheduled in Albury United Church Sunday morning. The rest of the festival was adjourned one week to give the weather — and the blossoms — one more chance.

The unofficial opening of Zwick's Island Park also drew poor response Saturday because of bad weather.

Bellevillians came fruitlair during the three days, some to briefly use the recreational facilities, others just to watch from their cars.

The warmest weekend event occurred Sunday evening when more than 30 graduates from Belleville General Hospital's nursing school turned their student uniforms on the Island.

The fledgling nurses cycled from the hospital to the spot and sang as the uniforms caught fire.

However, the gala attraction of the weekend — Park Dale community's big fireworks display at the Fairgrounds—went over as planned, crowd enthusiasm and all.

While waiting for nightfall, the grandstand crowd was entertained by Canadian Forces Base band from Trenton and the Madoc high school band, sponsored by the Hastings and Prince Edward regiment.

The musicians played with verve, even bellicose, if they were blowing on their fingers in the cool, night breezes.

That's A Sweet Sound!

Band leader Ron Hachle, of Madoc high school band, has happy reaction as girl glockenspielers test out tune during gala fireworks show at Fairgrounds.

Believe Man Died From Natural Causes

The body of a 65-year-old Deseronto man, found near the old Mohawk airport, touched off an intensive police investigation Sunday.

James Sero had been missing several days when he was found dead near a creek emptying into the Bay of Quinte.

Provincial police from Belleville searched out all circumstances concerning his background before being satisfied he died from natural causes, probably a heart attack.

Mr. Sero's body was found in a sleeping position by Joseph Hill who has a cottage on the bay shore.

The investigation was launched while a crowd watched celebrations marking the 178d arrival of Mohawk Indians in the Bay of Quinte about a mile away.

Mr. Sero was predecessed by his wife, Annie and two brothers. He leaves two sisters, Mrs. Peter (Therese) Green, of Point Anne and Miss Alfreda Sero, R.R. 1, Deseronto.

Two Big Centennial Events Scheduled for Tyendinaga Twp.

With May 24th holiday events getting a cool reception from the weatherman, residents of Tyendinaga are hoping for warmer temperatures this coming weekend for two big events on their Centennial calendar.

Saturday, May 27, Chisholm's Roslin Ltd. will officially open their new lumber mill at Roslin with a full afternoon of events ranging all the way from log sawing contests to dancing.

Then on Sunday the Village of Lonsdale on the 3rd concession of Tyendinaga, is holding a lilac festival which with an assist from Mother Nature should prove an interesting event.

In addition to viewing nature's display of lilacs, visitors will have the opportunity of inspecting the picturesque old grist mill built around 1820, together with the church, the old stone school and other old structures which at the time of confederation formed part of a thriving rural community.

Since the old school will be shortly closed for good, an "open house" is being held to enable former pupils and teachers to have a last look. The old Lonsdale school, along with other one-roomed schools in the township is scheduled to close with the completion of the new central school now under construction.

The new sawmill at Roslin replaces the mill completely destroyed by fire about a year ago. The Chisholm family has operated saw, planing and feed mills on the site since 1857.

Frequency of Showers Holding Up Seeding

It's the frequency of the showers, not the total amount of rainfall which is holding up spring cultivation in the Bay of Quinte district.

Then, too, the cold weather has had something to do with farmers being unable to get on the land.

Officials at the city pumphouse in the west end of Belleville report that while there has been considerable rainfall during May, it has not been too much more than normal.

So far this month there has been 2.67 inches of rain. There was 2.22 inches in April and only .86 inch of precipitation during March.

However, as any farmer will agree, the rains have been sufficiently frequent to keep the fields in a quagmire and make it impossible to get spring cultivation done.

But even early seeding on higher ground is weeks behind schedule because of the cold and wet weather.

Spring grain sown weeks ago is only now starting to show above the ground while grass growth has also been held up by the cold weather.

Keen Interest Shown In Driver Course

Keen interest is being shown in the driver training course for teen-agers scheduled to commence at Moira Secondary School next September, School principal Linton Reed reports that already sufficient students have enrolled for the course.

Local auto dealers, auto insurance agents and the department of transport are co-operating in the program which is being underwritten by the Bay of Quinte District High School Board. This summer two of the teachers, Norman Storms and Leo McKenny, will be taking special training to prepare them as instructors for the fall.

Successful students of the course will be eligible to try the department of transport tests for driving permits.

The school principal at Moira is already accepting applications for a second course after the Christmas holidays.

Eastern Breeders Join In Record Bull Purchase

GLANWORTH, Ont. (CP)—Weavers Reflection Apex, a six-month-old Holstein bull owned by Weaver Brothers of Bedford, sold Sunday for a world record $115,000 to a syndicate of Ontario artificial breeding units at the Steinda Canadian Classic Holstein Sale.

The bull, born Nov. 22, 1966, was sired by ABC Reflection Sovereign. The dam was ABC Inka May.

The group included: Eastern Breeders Inc., Kemptville; Central Cattle Breeding Association, Maple; Waterloo Cattle Breeding Association, Waterloo; Ontario and District Cattle Breeders Association, Woodstock; Hamilton and District Cattle Breeding Association, Hannon; Lambton Cattle Breeders Association, Wyoming, and Essex Cattle Breeders Association, Essex.

Previous record for a bull sold at an auction was $108,000 last year in Connecticut.

A world record average of $6,323 for 28 dairy cattle sold at a consignment sale was also set. The former high was $3,440.

William Potts, supervisor, at the Eastern Breeders' Inc. fledling barn at Belleville, said in all probability the young sire would be stabled in the Guelph or Waterloo area when he would be close to the best veterinary clinics and semen freezing facilities.

It was expected that when the bull goes into service in about six months' time a premium fee would be charged. This was the case when the breeding unit syndicate owned a top bull some years ago.

Taxes Are Up

Belleville's increase in property tax for the 1967-68 period — an approximate jump of eight per cent — brings the mounting cost-of-living trend even closer to home.

Estimates provide for an expenditure of $6,238,265, an increase of $670,163 over the previous year. More than half of this increase stems significantly, from increased salaries in all city departments.

As detailed in last week's budget report, for the home owner with a residence assessed at $10,000, the tax increase will amount to $27 for a total (not including local improvements) of $360.

Education is the biggest single item in the budget. It absorbs $1,598,906 of the more than six million dollar outlay and is a reflection of the swift-moving advances being made in all phases of learning today.

Of the total $4,329,012 tax request, $648,090 will be for public schools, $93,918 for separate schools, and $809,727 for high schools. The overall figure would have been still higher had it not been decided to postpone construction on a proposed administration building addition. Debt charges of $800,000 and public works at $745,584 are the next highest expenditures.

Increases in salaries, as Mayor Ellis has pointed out, were unavoidable. The Mayor, however, has expressed disappointment at the refusal of the provincial government to increase school grants. He says the most recent capital cost school grant actually has meant very little to the city.

Mounting costs and increasing taxation of course are among the economic facts of life, and Belleville is no different than anywhere else in this regard. This is the price of progress. At the same time the more industries that can be attracted to the city the easier it will be to share the burden of taxation, and the greater will be the output of marketable goods. In this way the city will be able to offset some of the additional costs ratepayers are being called upon to shoulder in the ensuing period.

Freedom Is Relative

Dictatorship essentially is the exercise of power by the strong over the weak.

And who is to deny that in some countries at least — the ones where the people at large are not preoccupied with basic issues of survival, food, clothing and shelter — dictatorship is the most effective form of administration?

Cuba is a prime example of the evils of dictatorship, with its jails filled with political prisoners, the suppression of democratic dissent silenced, and the country's economy in decline to the point that it must rely largely on support from the Communist-bloc, whose overall principles it espouses, to survive.

At the same time it must be recognized that Cuba has in fact survived, despite United States' sanctions and an ill-starred invasion of the country. Under Castro the country at least has acquired some kind of national spirit and purpose. Although they may be misguided, "brainwashed" in the tenets of Marxism, its young people can look forward to a future no worse — and perhaps better — than they might have enjoyed under the Batista regime.

Even free democratic countries such as Britain and the United States have their problems — racial trouble for example, the kind of issue the communists are quick to exploit for propaganda purposes, even to the extent of encouraging such disorder as part of its grand design to weaken western democracy.

The present disturbances in the States — incidental such as the gun battle between police and Negro university students in Texas — are certainly no recommendation for the American way of life. And last Canadian find smug about the relative peace and stability of our own, there too might stop short at the plight of the Indians and the fact that racial discrimination generally has not been eliminated.

Yet for all our weaknesses, as a people we do enjoy a degree of freedom and prosperity unknown in Cuba and other parts of the communist world — or even in regions where there does not hold complete sway, such as Spain, Greece, Portugal and Spain.

Democracy too often is tied to the stake, as Illingworth, cartoonist of the British magazine Punch, recently depicted, and surrounded by men like Nasser, Franco, the new man in Greece, and even Premier Ky of South Vietnam, whose recent utterances place him in the same category. Africa also boasts half-a-dozen or more military dictatorships, and all have evolved since receiving their independence.

Canadians should draw a moral from this. We cannot afford to be complacent in this part of the world. Our democracy should be a vital and positive thing. We should never let it go by default, and as ever must be prepared to defend it, even by force of arms.

Middle East Vacuum

UN Quits Egypt—and Vietnam Poses Global Threat

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

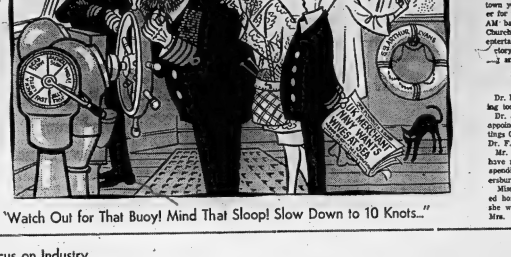
The machinery of world peacekeeping appears to be crumbling at a time when a number of experts agree with UN Secretary-General U Thant that the dynamics that could blast the third world war into being already has been placed.

Among the experts, a strange mood of inevitability has replaced a previously widespread expectation that growth of international tension could be safeguarded by a mobile United Nations police force patrolling the world's trouble spots.

Hope for such a force is being diminished by events on two dangerous fronts: Vietnam and the Middle East. The Vietnam war now has reached the point of escalation where, in effect, the prestige and power of both the Soviet Union and China are being challenged.

Air strikes, which the United States has launched directly at Hanoi, may even have the effect of reducing the Soviet-Chinese split and increasing their cooperation in providing more military assistance to the North Vietnamese.

Both Communist powers are doubtedly will find it intolerable to allow destruction of Hanoi's effectiveness. U Thant has suggested that a direct clash between the U.S. and China is inevitable. Other experts have suggested that the Soviet Union cannot long remain on the sidelines.



The Soviet Union would not necessarily have to strike directly at the U.S. through Vietnam. It has a choice of extending and draining U.S. resources by forcing increasing U.S. intervention in the Middle East.

The border between Israel and the United Arab Republic at times, open and vulnerable. Both sides are ready for a test and, with the withdrawal of UN forces, clashes of increasing intensity are likely. The overriding factor in terms of world peace is that if the UN cannot hold the antagonists apart there is great doubt it can do so anywhere else.

Effectiveness of the UN is undergoing a crucial test of its own. So far it has been found wanting, adding to the despondency of those who previously had dreamed of an eventual harmonious world community.

The big powers have been pouring arms into the Middle East. The Soviet Union has given great support to President Nasser's U.A.R. forces and since it would be politically difficult for President Johnson to ignore the plight of Israel, an Israeli-U.A.R. clash could precipitate big power intervention.

Once the big powers get involved on a world scale, the voices of the little countries could be drowned in the blood of war escalating into nuclear conflict. The UN, with all its shortcoming, still remains the only effective forum where the little voices can be heard.

By-elections Give Impetus to the National Scene

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — Timing for politicians, like comedians, is an essential element of success.

It seems to take on even greater importance on the eve of elections. With five by-elections scheduled for Monday, May 29, the federal government is expected to time a couple of announcements for major impact on the voters.

The first appears to be aimed at the Sudbury seat where the Liberals are fighting to beat off a threatened New Democrat coup. The NDP ran a close second to the Liberal in the 1965 general election.

Informants say the government will make public late in the week the new set of standards to measure whether an area qualifies for incentives to industry to establish new enterprises.

The general expectation is that the new criteria will make it possible to designate virtually all of Northern Ontario, including the Sudbury area, for such aid to new industry.

Incentives can go as high as $3,000,000 in cash grants, exempt from federal income tax, on new machinery, equipment and buildings plus accelerated capital cost allowances of up to 50 per cent on new production machinery and equipment and up to 20 per cent on new buildings or significant extensions of existing buildings.

The same sort of electoral benefits can be sought the day after the Sudbury voting when Nova Scotians go to the polls for a provincial election.

Dr. Brewer Hunt Examines Satellite Antenna

First Manager of NE Here Retires

Well-known in Belleville circles in the late 40s, Dr. A. Brewer Hunt is retiring from the Northern Electric Company with a total service of over 40 years. Early in 1947, he was given the task of setting up the first company plant outside of Montreal. Belleville was the site selected for the move of the electronics division, an organization which had grown from almost nothing during World War II.

In order to get manufacturing operations under way as soon as possible, Dr. Hunt arranged to rent the Water Street plant of J. P. Morch and Co. and late in the same year the company's radio receivers began to roll off the first production line.

The products of this plant expanded to include Hammond Organs and broadcast equipment, while a big new factory was being built on Sidney Street. In the spring of 1948, the big influx took place into the new plant, and Belleville became an important spot on the Northern Electric map.

Dr. Hunt and his wife Marion quickly became known and liked in Belleville circles, and their house on Mount Pleasant saw many delightful gatherings. He became a member of Rotary, the Chamber of Commerce, the Belleville Club, the Bay of Quinte Golf Club and of St. Thomas' Church.

His wife interested herself in church and golf club, as well as in the Home and School, as one of the founder members of the Pine Street School Association.

An important post in Montreal took Brewer Hunt and his wife away. Since promotion to Montreal Dr. Hunt has been general manager of three different divisions of the company, and since 1960 he has been vice-president of research and development, in charge of the rapidly expanding laboratories with their headquarters in Ottawa. He has seen this organization grow until now it is the largest industrial laboratory in Canada, and among the top ten persons on the North American continent.

A fitting climax to his distinguished career was reached on April 10 this year, when Carleton University awarded him the honorary degree of doctor of engineering in recognition of his contributions to Canadian engineering.

At a party held in their honor in Ottawa, Dr. and Mrs. Hunt were presented with gifts and momentos by a large gathering, many of whom were present or former Belleville residents. J. C. R. Punchard and R. H. Tanner were among those making presentations.

Egypt Closes Aqaba

Nasser's latest move could mean war.

Reliable sources reported an Egyptian cruiser, four torpedo boats and two submarines passed through the Suez Canal earlier, and observers here believed they were headed for the Red Sea and a gulf blockade.

Estimates put Egyptian troop strength in Sinai at 60,000 men today after a week-long buildup.

Nasser and UN Secretary-General U Thant for his quick response to Cairo's demand that the UN troops leave their posts on the border between Israel and Egypt.

Hopes for an easing of the crisis centred on Thant, who left New York Monday night for Cairo to confer with Nasser and other officials. Thant said he also plans to meet with Israeli leaders "at the appropriate time."

During a stopover at Paris, Thant discussed the latest Middle East events with UN officials. He refused to talk to reporters.

Before leaving on his mission, Thant met individually with U.S. Ambassador Arthur Goldberg, Soviet Ambassador Nikolai Fedorenko, French Ambassador Roger Seydoux and Lord Caradon, the chief British delegate to the UN.

Thant also conferred with Israeli Ambassador Gideon Rafael, who told reporters he assured the secretary-general that Israel wants peace but is determined to defend itself against any Arab aggression.

Today, the British government warned all its subjects to leave Israel, the United Arab Republic and the west bank of Jordan, unless they had essential obligations there.

In Washington, the state department advised tourists and Americans on non - essential business to leave Israel, Egypt, Syria and Jordan. About 10,000 Americans are estimated to be in the four countries.

A few hours before Nasser announced he would block the Gulf of Aqaba, state department officials told editors and broadcasters at a foreign policy briefing that the United States would consider the closing of the waterway a very serious matter.

A 1957 U.S. commitment to Israel, considered still in effect, defined the gulf as an international waterway and said the United States "is prepared to exercise the right of free and innocent passage" on behalf of American ships.

In Damascus, Soviet Ambassador Anatoli Berkovski conferred with Syrian Premier Youssef Zayyen amid rumors that Russia was urging the leftist Syrian regime to refrain from any action that could touch off a war.

Nasser, praising the UN force for doing its duty "honorably and conscientiously" for 10 years, said if it had not withdrawn when Cairo asked it to, "we were going to disarm it by force and consider it as allies."

Directed Couple To House Says Painter

The preliminary hearing into a manslaughter charge against a 66-year-old Belleville chiropractor resumed today after a four-month adjournment.

Magistrate T. Y. Wills resumed hearing evidence at Hastings County Court House against Dr. Robert A. Wyatt, charged in the death by alleged abortion of Gertrude Ellis, a Jamaican nurses' assistant at an Ottawa hospital.

The hearing was adjourned January 24.

Among the first witnesses today was Andre Duclos, a Belleville painter.

Duclos testified he was painting the home of Dr. Ross Burtt at Dufferin and Dundas streets last Labor Day weekend when a negro couple approached him.

He said they were looking for Dr. Wyatt's office and he directed them to Wyatt's home on Applewood Drive.

Malcolm Robb, Barrister, of Toronto is counsel for Dr. Wyatt.

400 Farmers From 2 Counties Expected for Ottawa March

Approximately 400 farmers from the Hastings and Prince Edward County areas are expected to take part in the farmers' march on Ottawa Hill scheduled for Wednesday.

March op - ordinators from the two counties, said today that approximately 200 farmers from each area are expected to take part in the march.

Burton Hubble, march co - ordinator for Hastings said today that tomorrow's march on parliament hill will be the biggest thing in Ottawa.

He made the comment following a telephone conversation with Ontario Farmers Union president John Dolmer who he quoted as saying that as many as 10,000 farmers would take part.

"This is going to be an orderly march," Mr. Dolmer is quoted as saying. "We will be there to make an orderly presentation...to the government and we will have marshals from each area to see that things go orderly."

Marshals from Hastings county include Bernard Murphy of Marysville; Lorne Jarrell, Thurlow; Horace Knight of Sidney; Mrs. Shirley Reid of Rawdon; Cecil Wright, Madoc, and W. Cassidy of Tweed.

Prince Edward marshals are Harry Evans, Bernard Keough, Ross Pierson, Keith Foster and Alfred Cairns.

As well as the Ontario Farmers Union, the march on Ottawa will be made up of representatives from the OFA, and the Quebec UCC.

Federation president Charles Munro said last week that farmers have a duty to themselves, their neighbors and to their industry to turn out for the march.

"Nobody had better come to me complaining of the farmers' lot if they do not take part in the march," he said.

In Prince Edward County buses will leave from the Picton fairground with two stops between there and Tobe's County Gardens.

In Hastings buses will leave from Stirling and Springbrook at 7.00, from Shannonville at 7.30 and from Foxboro and Cannilton at 8.00 o'clock.

Mr. Hubble said there were a few seats still available on the buses leaving from Hastings, this the result of four buses cancelling following farmers to get on the land.

The fine weather isn't going to keep Mr. Hubble home.

"I haven't sown a kernel of grain yet this spring, but nothing would keep me from going to Ottawa," he said.

Farmers are advised to pack a lunch and in case of showers to take along a raincoat.

Cream Puffs in a Pyramid Form Spectacular Dessert

By MARY MOORE

A seasoned air traveller stated by us said, "How on earth can Air Canada serve this pleasful of people so expeditiously and beautifully?"

I too wondered how on earth they prepared such a spectacular dessert as Croquembouche which the steward so proudly rolled in on a hostess trolley—but so deftly served on the omnibusser flight between Toronto and Vancouver. When I came back to earth at home I made Croquembouche. It is a tall pyramid of creamy-custard-filled Rich cream puff balls stuck angr. I served it to six guests last night and discovered that we ordinary kitchen cooks can do it too. Maybe not 15' high as Air Canada's was but you could build a six- or seven inch pyramid.

BONES CLARK

Dear Doris: For the third year in a row British Columbia is proclaiming May 21st as Non-Smokers' Day.

Rules are simple. Smokers are asked to quit for the day. Many take the challenge. This makes their lungs and throat so grateful that many stay quit from then on.

People who want to quit longer than just that day may do so with our full permission, approval, and even a fanfare of trumpets — Bob Ludwig Non - Smokers' Association of Canada, Vancouver, B.C.

Dear Bob: Good for you. I understand a number of courses in Canada and U.S. are now on the bandwagon.

For the benefit of the uninitiated, the official-sounding Whereas clauses include the following statements: ——

(1) In 1966, the British Columbians died of lung cancer.

(2) The total death rate increases (a) with number of cigarets smoked per day, and (b) with duration of such smoking.

(3) Total death rate is (a) higher with those who start smoking at an early age; and (b) lower in those who have stopped smoking than in those who keep smoking.

Proclamation is made by the BC Minister of Health on direction by Order-in-Council from the Lieutenant-Governor.

Dear Doris: What causes an eight-year-old boy to chest playing games? He doesn't steal and is a good boy otherwise.

Every school and takes music; has two sisters and two parents who are good to him. Lots of love given. He is not neglected, and it is a Christian home. — A Worried Relative.

Dear Relative: I need more clues. Is he younger than the sisters? Is somebody short-changing him when it comes to a build-up? Has father any time for him?

Somehow he has the idea that smoking, no matter how, can bring him admiration. He may be needing more spotlight; help with seeing the value of good sportsmanship; praise when he plays it straight and loser without grumbling.

Aim to remove the inferiority feelings and my guess is he'll return.

Successful Living

Province Proclaims Non-smokers Day

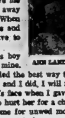
Dear Doris: When we have a date I rush around getting ready, only to have my steady, show up an hour late because he was playing pool. Then when I do sit around and take my time he shows up early and is mad because he has to wait.

He spends more time playing pool than anything else. He explains to me that he enjoys it so much that he loses track of the time when he's playing.

I am tired of playing second fiddle to a pool table, but I do have a date with him when we go out. — J. T.

Dear J. T.: Were him that second time you're not waiting in for him. Then he goes, if he is more than 15 minutes late.

Or put up with it all and be content to hold dinner for him every night for the rest of your life. People can learn to ill time.



Doris can help you with that puzzling decision. Write to her, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.

Ann Landers

Pregnant Teen-ager Not One Bit Sorry

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This letter may shock you but I am going to be perfectly honest and tell you exactly how I feel. I am 16, pregnant, not married, and I'm not one bit sorry about what happened.

My folks always bought me everything I wanted, but they were too busy to give me love. I was raised by servants and sent away to school when I was 11 years old. When vacation time came, I was sent on trips and tours — anything so they wouldn't have to bother with me.

ANN LANDERS

Last year I started to go with this boy who came from a home just about like mine. Plenty of money but no love. I decided the best way to get even with my folks was to get pregnant, and I did. I will never forget the look of horror on my mother's face when I gave her the news. It was wonderful. I'll be able to hurt her for a change.

My parents want me to go to a home for unwed mothers and put my baby up for adoption, but I want to keep my child and give him the love my parents never gave me. Do you think I can do it? — PG AND PROUD OF IT.

DEAR PROUD: You have neither the maturity, nor the emotional stability to raise a child. I hope, for your sake, as well as for the sake of that innocent baby, you will abandon your foolish plan.

Your true motivation for wanting to keep the baby is as ill and twisted as your reason for becoming pregnant. You want to use your out-of-wedlock child to humiliate and punish your parents. Give your child a break and let him grow up with both a mother and father. And give yourself a break and get some psychiatric help.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Every day I queue up at a certain corner to catch my bus. A few weeks ago I noticed a group of those who were there first. Not wishing to make a scene, I have always remained silent. Yesterday, can of these notorious loafers slid in line ahead of me. I decided the best way to get rid of him was to give him a shove. He fell to the sidewalk, but the woman who had behaved offensively.

I'm a man of good upbringing and would never let an elderly or pregnant woman stand while I sat, but I feel a man need not surrender either his bus seat or his place in line to able-bodied females who consider themselves our equals in the business world. Am I right or wrong? — ALF.

* * *

DEAR H.T.: If all the men allowed the women to get on the bus first, the female working force would be home three hours before the males.

I see no reason for a man to remain silent under the conditions you described. You were right to speak up and I hope you will continue to do so.

* * *

Confidential to SORRY FOR THE MIDDLE ONE: Being sorry doesn't help him. You can and you must put an end to the comparisons. When a well-meaning (but insensitive) friend or relative compares your children, give them in mid-sentence. Say: "Sorry, but we don't compare our children. Each one is different and each one has his strengths and weaknesses." Then change the subject.

New Therapy Technique Is Working Out

TORONTO (CP) — A 20-year-old woman who hadn't spoken a word in 15 years began to talk and became a member in the mental hospital to which she had been confined.

A result but who had screamed day and night through nights of terror for months poured out the relationship of drowning of children, and three weeks later the dreams stopped.

Prof. Fern Lemieux of McGill University administers these and other successes to her "object relations" therapy at Allanbrook.

A method worked out with her feels husband Bernard, 13 years ago, is in used with two types of patients—neurotics and severely repressed psychotic persons who have lost touch with the world.

For the first group, two therapists work with five or six patients, providing points and plasticine and encouraging them to create.

Then the therapists lead the group in evaluation of what the creations are about. Patients who are unable to express themselves are taught art — understanding, Prof. Lemieux says.

"With words, a patient can pretend 'That's cat what I said or what I meant.' But visible objects can't be denied."

For psychotic patients, therapist offer such objects as cookies, balls or apples, recreating early childhood with a permissive mother approved.

"Sometimes, to get a patient to toss a ball or join a circle is the most crucial step in reaching a patient who has not talked or fed himself for years."

Prof. Lemieux, a native of two, was in Toronto for a three-day course in her methods at the Clarke Institute of Psychiatry.

She said the method is useful when psychiatrists are scarce because it can be used by paramedical personnel such as occupational therapists rather than only by psychiatrists.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

It sometimes seems that teen-age girls would rather look in a mirror than eat. This is the age when they primp in public, comb their hair in restaurants, seem to be eternally vain.

Actually, it is not really vanity that has the teen-age girl pulling out her compact and comb the minute she enters the door. It's the lack of security that adolescence brings. All at once, the teen-ager is afraid she may not look right to her friends.

It's up to mothers to point out that primping in public takes away from an appearance of poise and sophistication. In some cases, it is a habit that is downright distasteful to everyone

And additional reason for giving you this mail-order is that my daughter Marianne wants to know how to make cream puffs.

So today I will give you the recipe for cream puff pastes known as Choux Paste. Once you know how to make it you can make cream puffs, eclairs, bouchees and the now famous Croquembouche. Tomorrow I will give you careful details for filling and assembling Croquembouche. The filling may also be used for cream puffs and eclairs

CHOUX PASTE

For cream puffs, eclairs, bouchees and croquembouche)

NOTE: This is a simple procedure anyone can follow.

1 cup hot water
½ cup (¼ lb.) butter
1 cup sifted all-purpose flour
4 large eggs (room temperature — not cold from refrigerator)

Into a medium-large saucepan measure the hot water and butter and bring to boil over high heat. All at once add the flour and with wooden spoon stir hard until it forms a mass around the spoon and leaves sides of pan. Remove from heat, stir in eggs, one at a time, beating until each egg is incorporated into the paste.

For Cream Puffs shape into 2½" tall mounds on ungreased cookie sheets at least 3½" apart and bake at 400 deg. Fahr. 1 hr. Test one after baking 35 min. by standing in stove top. If it is baked through it will not collapse. If it is not baked through it will fall a little at the top — so put it back and bake 10 minutes longer.

For Eclairs shape into long ovals instead of rounds on ungreased baking sheets and bake at 400 deg. Fahr. 1 hr. (See test for doneness under cream puffs.)

For Bouchees ("Mouthfuls") shape paste into 1¼" mounds on ungreased baking sheets and bake at 400 deg. Fahr. 30 to 35 min. or until they test done (see under Cream Puffs).

Tomorrow watch for: Croquembouche, Creamy Custard filling for filling its little puffs and for filling cream puffs and eclairs; and how to make the caramel and assemble the Croquembouche. Also I will mention the savory variations for filling bouchees to serve as hors d'oeuvres.

WEDDING

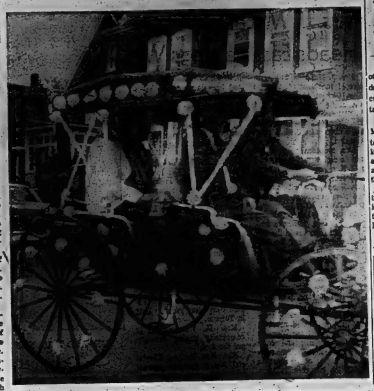
NAYLOR — CAVERLY

A survey with a break-down top carried Mr. and Mrs. Lee Naylor away from their wedding at Christ Church Saturday. The old - fashioned touch for centennial year was made possible by Miss Mildred Jones, R. R. 1, Corbyville, who lent the 1912 product of Canadian Carriage Company, Brockville, and Robert Dunford, R. R. 4, Belleville, who hitched his horses to the carriage for the drive.

Joyce Marie Caverly and Robert Leslie Naylor were united in marriage by Rev. L. B. Weight at 12 noon. John Withers played the wedding music and accompanied selections sung by six choir boys.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carmen A. Caverly, Belleville, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Naylor, R. R. 2, Picton.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white floor - length A - line gown of peau de soie with Empire waistline and round neckline. Crochet lace daisies trimmed the bodice, elbow-length sleeves and the peau de soie train which flowed from a bow attached at the shoulders. Her elbow - length veil fell from a pearl-edged appliqued headdress trimmed with seed pearls and crystals and she carried a cascade bouquet of white shasta daisies and yellow rose-buds.



Miss Jean Parry, maid of honor, wore a deep pink floor-length peau de soie sheath with Empire waistline and bodice of crochet lace daisies. The bridesmaids, Mrs. Joan Aumell, sister of the bridegroom and Mrs. Beverly Lewis sister of the bride, wore similarly styled gowns, Mrs. Aumell's in turquoise and Mrs. Lewis' in daffodil yellow. They carried cascade bouquets of white shasta daisies and wore matching daisy headbands.

Miss Julia Lewis, niece of the bride, was flower girl. She was attired in a short white nylon dress trimmed with white lace and a matching cap and carried a basket of yellow mums.

John Mitchell attended the bridegroom and the ushers were Robert Aumell, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, and Ronald Caverly, brother of the bride.

Mrs. Caverly wore a dusty rose crepe dress with crochet lace top, white accessories and a white carnation and stephanotis corsage sprayed with silver. To assist her in receiving guests at the reception at Christ Church Parish Hall, Mrs. Naylor chose a coral blue crepe dress with lace bodice and jacket, white accessories and a white carnation and stephanotis corsage sprayed with gold.

For her wedding trip to the United States the bride chose a suit of yellow crepe, blue coat and white accessories and an orchid corsage. On their return, the couple will live in Dan Mills, Toronto.

Bridal Carriage

Mr. and Mrs. Les Naylor leave the church following their wedding Saturday in a rose-bedecked 1912 surrey driven by a team of horses.

1879 Wedding Gown Will Go to Museum

CHATHAM, Ont. (CP) — Although other items an 1879 wedding dress would be an interesting curiosity, its Centennial Year importance takes on historical significance.

Possessor of such a dress is Mrs. C. C. Warner. It was left to her by Mrs. Donald Sutherland, who died in 1953 at the age of 104. Mrs. Sutherland was a cousin of Robert Simpson, the department store founder.

The bequest was in appreciation of Mrs. Warner's kindness in dropping by to read the Bible to Mrs. Sutherland during the last years of her life.

Along with the taffeta wedding dress came a pair of calf-length black kid shoes, several petticoats, a pale blue duster, a flowered blue wedding nightie, a short blue velvet coat, a black crepe "widow's bonnet", and two floor - length black crepe skirts.

The bonnet and coat have been lent in recent years during which Mrs. Warner lent them to several dramatic groups.

As part of an IODE centennial project, the rest of the collection will be displayed in a Chatham shop from June until late August when it will be placed on loan in the Royal Ontario Museum in Toronto.

TRINITY U.C.W.

ROSLIN — The May meeting of the Roslin Unit of Trinity United Church Women, Roslin, was held at the home of Mrs. W. H. Chisholm with the leader, Mrs. John Pargey, presiding over the meeting.

It was decided to plant three flowering crab-trees in the yard of Trinity United Church, Roslin, as a centennial project.

The devotional part of the meeting was conducted by Irene Chisholm and Lois Meeks on the theme "Mothers." Many interesting poems were read, all of them concerning mothers.

Dairy foods go with good living

And now there's a special ice cream to go with Canada's Centennial living. Latest in the good flavour combinations found in ice cream are packages of 'Centennial' Ice Cream. Vanilla ice cream surrounds the Centennial symbol featured in a separate flavour in the centre of each brick.

How about a Centennial Flame Dessert? Slice ice cream into chilled dishes; surround with sundae sauce. Sauté sugar cubes with fresh lemon extract. Place one on each slice of ice cream. Set the cubes aflame and serve.

Join the bandwagon: serve a Centennial surprise package for dessert.

CENTENNIAL SURPRISE

baked slab of brownies
1 pint 'Centennial' ice cream
4 egg whites
½ cup sugar

Cut brownies 1" larger around than pint of ice cream. Place on board. Beat egg whites until frothy; gradually beat in sugar; beat until stiff peaks form. Place ice cream on brownies; cover completely with meringue. Store in freezer until ready to serve. Bake 5 minutes in 500°F. oven. Serve immediately.

Let the little people in your family capture the Centennial fun—build them an ice cream Centennial train for their next party. Turn bricks of 'Centennial' ice cream out on a long serving plate. Join together with peppermint sticks. Press chocolate bars on top and candy coins in place for wheels. Stick small Centennial flags out the side of each coach. Freeze until ready to serve.

Centennial Ball Was Success

LONDON (CP)—The Canadian Centennial Ball here in April was a roaring financial success, making a profit of more than $30,000, the organizers reported.

A sum of $21,000 will set up a centennial scholarship fund to bring Canadian post-graduates to British universities, while the remainder goes to charities served by the seven Canadian societies that organized the mammoth birthday party.

"We are all extremely proud to announce this very gratifying and rewarding result," said the ball's chairman, Mrs. Harold Shenkman, an Ottawa hostess who is married to the chairman of the Canadian Women's Club in London.

The ball, attended by Princess Margaret and Lord Snowdon, six Canadian cabinet ministers and 1,900 guests April 18, was her brainchild and took a year to organize.

"The response has been wonderful and much more than we could have hoped for," Mrs. Shenkman added.

The seven Canadian societies which pooled their efforts to organize the ball at Grosvenor House hotel were the Canada Club, Canadian Women's Club, Imperial Society, Canadian Universities' Society, Canadian Veterans' Association, Maple Leaf Club and Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

To See Son First Time In 25 Years

HAMILTON (CP) — Her Mother's Day present was more than a week late, but Frances Tuck was delighted she already had waited 25 years.

The occasion was a visit from her son Herb, now 43, whom she had not seen since he left home to join the navy in 1942. They lost track of each other and Mr. Tuck, who lives in Vancouver, thought she had died.

But last week the Hamilton Spectator printed a picture of a warden in Vancouver's Stanley Park. Mrs. Tuck, now 79, recognized the warden as her son and immediately sent a letter to the City of Vancouver. Mr. Tuck received the letter at 9:30 Thursday morning. By 9:45 he had arranged for 10 days off work. He sent a telegram to his mother in Hamilton, then boarded a train.

Britain Say 1932 Tariffs Now Unfair

LONDON (CP) — Britain has come to the conclusion that the 1932 Commonwealth preferential system is unfair and should be revised.

Douglas Jay, president of the government's board of trade, said Monday he hopes changes can be made in consultation with Commonwealth partners.

Under the 1932 Ottawa agreements, the Commonwealth reduced or eliminated tariffs on trade within the family while maintaining a network of higher rates on products produced outside the association.

At that time such countries as Canada and Australia were considered only partially developed and got greater concessions in the British market than they provided in their own markets.

Now Canada and Australia are considered fully developed and they "give us only special free entry for industrial goods while we give them nearly 100 per cent free entry in return," Jay said in a luncheon speech before the Commonwealth Correspondents' Association.

Jay's presence at the luncheon session stimulated a great deal of interest since he has been widely reported as being critical of Britain's new bid to join the European Common Market. But, as one big London daily noted, Jay "played it cool."

"There is nothing in principle incompatible between membership of the European Economic Community and membership of the Commonwealth any more than there is with membership of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade," he said.

Indeed, now that the free world has agreed to cut tariffs under the Kennedy round negotiations at Geneva, Britain's adherence to the European Common Market could help in a positive way to build an outward-looking community "of advantage to all."

However, Jay insisted that any British membership in the community should be conditioned on protection for "essential British and Commonwealth interests" and the ability of other European countries on the fringe of the Common Market to join.

Trade with one area does not prevent trade with another, Jay said. Providing tariffs are lowered and not raised, the growth of customs unions and free trade areas invariably increased trade of the enlarged group with the outside world.

"Many Commonwealth countries, for instance Canada and Australia, have expanded their trade both with the United Kingdom on one hand and with the United States and Japan on the other in recent years."

Asked whether he believed entry to the Common Market was absolutely crucial to Britain's future, Jay suggested that while trade with the Common Market is important, he did not believe any one development dominated the future to the exclusion of everything else.

Full Share or Strike Reuther's Ultimatum

DETROIT (AP) — Walter P. Reuther, United Auto Workers Union president, told the union's Ford council Saturday "we will strike unless we get our full, fair share of the economic benefits" reaped by the auto companies.

"We will go to the bargaining table united and determined to go forward," Reuther said, "We will ask for nothing more than our fair share. We will settle for nothing less."

The council's 300 delegates represent the 160,000 UAW members in Ford Motor Co. factories.

He said the union would not enter the labor contract negotiations, starting in July, predetermined to strike, but he told delegates that if they want to win economic justice "striking will not make it so."

The council [illegible] opened a resolution Friday asking that Ford be made the prime target in this summer's talks.

The 1,400,000-member Union's major goals include a substantial, but unspecified, wage increase, raising pay of Canadian auto workers to the levels of men working in the U.S. plants and guaranteed annual income.

All Canada Except Quebec Celebrates Victoria Day Holiday

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Two royal visits, a fiddlehead festival, a "love-in," a contentious sports festival, trips to the cottage, crowded highways and fireworks earmarked Canada's Victoria Day weekend as a festive occasion.

The Dominion Drama Festival finals opened at St. John's, Nfld., 600 students presented a music program on Parliament Hill and Expo 67 packed them in.

The world's fair had more than 1,000,000 visitors during the weekend. Air Canada reported that traffic bookings at Montreal Sunday totalled 4,027—the first time the 4,000 mark has been topped during a single day at Montreal.

Britain's Princess Alexandra spent Saturday and Sunday in Vancouver and Victoria, then headed for Banff and a two-day rest before continuing her 26-day visit to Canada.

Queen Juliana of The Netherlands flew to Calgary Monday after a two-day stop in Toronto. She spent Victoria Day afternoon touring Alberta ranch country—and was to fly to Victoria today.

On the East Coast, Malliest inclines and others gathered on Savage Island near Fredericton for a weekend-long fiddlehead festival featuring a wedding, sports events, dances and suppers.

The Malliests began harvesting fiddleheads—edible ferns—on the island in the 1700s.

Elsewhere in the Maritimes, athletic events and fireworks were the feature attractions of the holidays. Most of the Maritimes had 50-degree weather Monday.

Quebec did not officially recognize the Victoria Day holiday, but for several years separatist elements have used the occasion to stage demonstrations in Montreal.

This year, Montreal police reported no trouble.

Schools and stores opened Monday in Quebec City and other parts of the province, but 21-gun salute marked the day in the provincial capital and in Montreal.

Massed choirs and bands gathered at the Parliament buildings in Ottawa to open a summer-long program of music and dancing. Governor-General Michener presented centennial medallions to a group of youths representing Canada's 6,000,000 students.

Toronto experienced a love-in. Thousands of hippies and onlookers swarmed Queen's Park to sing, dance and play.

Monday morning rain dampened holiday spirits slightly in parts of Manitoba, but the weekend was capped off with a mammoth fireworks display at Winnipeg Stadium.

Alberta and Saskatchewan basked in summer-like weather with temperatures up to the low 80s. Provincial and national parks were open and crowded.

A 60-week centennial sports festival drew large crowds to Calgary.

Twelve Killed in Plane Crashes

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Six airplane crashes during the Victoria Day weekend killed 12 Canadians and injured five others.

The bodies of two Vancouver men were found Monday in the wreckage of a light plane at Harrison Lake, 60 miles east of Vancouver. The plane was on a routine flight when it slammed into a stand of timber.

Four other B.C. men, a pilot and three skydivers, were killed Saturday when their single-engine plane crashed at the 3,500-foot level of Vernon Mountain southeast of Vernon in the Okanagan Valley.

Three veteran Air Canada pilots died Saturday night in the crash of a DC-8F jet at Ottawa International Airport. The pilots were on a training flight at tempting a simulated landing when the four-engine, 131-seat aircraft plunged to earth.

Two Quebec men were killed and another injured Saturday when a single - engine Piper Champion smashed into the side of a hill in Mont-Tremblant provincial park, 100 miles northwest of Montreal. It was believed the pontoon - equipped plane was attempting to land on a lake during bad weather.

A Toronto man died Friday night when his two-engine plane caught a shoulder of the Macdonald - Cartier Freeway while attempting a landing at Toronto International Airport. The light plane flipped across the busy highway and burst into flames in the opposite ditch.

A single-engine plane crashed and sank Friday night as it attempted to land on Whitewater Lake, nine miles northwest of Sudbury. Four Sarie men were injured.

Three other Ontario men were injured earlier Friday when a light aircraft crash - landed about 25 miles east of Sault Ste. Marie, while a Hamilton man escaped injury when he was forced to land his plane on a Burlington, Ont., golf course after it ran out of fuel.

Air Canada Crash Near Ottawa Kills Three Veteran Pilots

OTTAWA (CP)—An Air Canada DC8F was making a normal approach Saturday when it dropped 150 feet and exploded in a bare field about one-half mile short of an Ottawa International Airport runway, a federal investigator said Monday night.

Three veteran pilots, the only ones aboard the $8,500,000 jet, were killed.

Richard L. Bolduc, chief of air-crash investigation in the federal transport department, said the plane was on "a direct line approach."

The jet was No. 813, the same plane that ploughed into a London cabbage patch Nov. 6, 1963, in an abortive take-off. The 90 passengers and seven crew escaped but it cost $2,000,000 to rebuild the jet. This time No. 813 was on a training flight.

Capt. William A. Robinson, 46, a flight instructor, was in charge. Capt. Donald J. Orr, 46, Brampton, Ont., and Capt. Clark Henning, 48, Oakville, Ont., were being trained in what was described as a conversion flight.

A study of the flight data recorder, recovered from the wreckage, started Monday. Signals from about 33 systems on the jet are taped on the recorder and decoding them takes some time, said Bolduc.

The crash occurred in clear weather. The northwest wind that was gusting up to 25 miles an hour wasn't considered strong enough to affect the big jet, even at the critical landing stage.

Novelist Taylor Caldwell Clashes with Judy LaMarsh

BUFFALO, N.Y. AP)—Judy LaMarsh drew a finger-pointing interruption from Taylor Caldwell, a best - selling U.S. novelist, when the Canadian secretary of state said Sunday night Canada stands ready to help bring about an honorable peace in Vietnam.

The woman novelist stood up and accused Canada of being "very pious" when Miss LaMarsh told a dinner commencement Canada is neither hawk nor dove regarding the United States' Vietam policy and is ready to help effect peace.

Miss LaMarsh told the D'Youville College dinner that Canada is trying to assist the U.S. wherever it can, although it wishes the U.S. had not become embroiled in Vietnam.

Miss Caldwell, grandmother of two U.S. armed servicemen in Vietnam, asked Miss LaMarsh why the Commonwealth was so anxious for American intervention in the Second World War and why Canada is providing China with "material and wheat to kill our boys" in Vietnam.

Miss Caldwell was cut off by Sister Francis Xavier, president of the Roman Catholic college.

Fulbright Fears Mid-east War Might Find U. S. Over-extended

WASHINGTON (AP) — State Secretary Rusk faces a barrage of sensorial questions on the intensified war in Vietnam and the extent of U.S. peacekeeping commitments in the boiling Middle East.

Chairman J. W. Fulbright said in advance of a scheduled appearance by Rusk today at a closed session of the Senate foreign relations committee that he fears an outbreak in the Middle East might find the United States overextended militarily because of Vietnam.

The state department said Monday the United States stands behind a 1950 guarantee of territorial integrity in the Middle East.

Committee members want to know if President Johnson has appealed to Moscow to help prevent a military explosion between Israel and the Arab nations in the Middle East.

A White House spokesman said Monday that the U.S. has been in touch with all parties concerned in the Middle East dispute. But Press Secretary George Christian neither would confirm nor deny that the president had urged the Russians to help head off a conflagration.

Rusk has indicated that some move to bring the Vietnam conflict before the United Nations may be in the making.

But Soviet Ambassador Nikolai T. Fedorenko told a special session of the UN General Assembly Monday that his government was "determined to repel the attempts of leading circles in Washington to use the United Nations in their criminal designs."

Park Work Delayed by Bad Weather

DESERONTO — Last week's meeting of the Centennial Park Committee brought to light the quickening interest in the project, especially evidenced since there is now visible proof of the wisdom of the months of planning.

Last year at this time bulldozers were at work clearing and levelling the land. Today the grass is green over the whole main area, half the 400 trees are planted, and the buildings are ready to have the roofs put in place. The work has been severely delayed by the weather but much has been done.

For the first time, doubt was expressed that the park would be ready for its official opening July 1, which has been the goal from the first. The matter must be settled very soon but at least the committee wants it understood that there is reason to prevent the full use of any part of the park when it is ready for use. The formal, official opening may have to be delayed, however.

The main drawback is the parking area, Jack Layfield, committee secretary states. The county has not yet installed the tile drains along the roadside, and after that is done, the parking area must be built up and surfaced. It all hinges on the speed with which the county can be persuaded to do it.

Lions to Sponsor Home Competition

DESERONTO — As its Centennial project, the Deseronto Lions Club is sponsoring a home improvement competition in the town. The announcement was made Friday by George Lyons, chairman of the committee. Peter Morris and R. Bradshaw are the other members.

Substantial prizes are being offered, the first prize $100. Second and third prizes are $75 and $50, respectively, and there are three $25 prizes.

Two inspections of the house and its surroundings will be made, the first early in June, and the second some time during the last two weeks in September. More points are being awarded for the surroundings than for the house, encouraging householders to dispose of rubbish, and to make their yards as attractive as possible. Even the street in front of the home is considered. Shade trees, shrubbery, flower and vegetable gardens all come into the picture.

Application forms are available at Lyons Groceteria, and must be in by June 15. The application form contains the assurance that improvements made will "in no way increase the assessment on land or property." Also, "This contest is not open to Lions Club members."

The owner of a small property will be on an equal footing with the owner of one twice the size, the chairman states. It is not the value of the property which will influence the judges, but rather the amount of work which the owner does to improve what he has now.

No Fatal Accidents Over Weekend

NAPANEE — Until 6.00 p.m Monday the Napanee detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police had had no fatal accidents over the holiday weekend. Three minor property accidents were reported Sunday and one Monday.

Monday afternoon, however, there was a more serious accident with at least two people taken to the Lennox and Addington County Hospital, but the extent of their injuries had not yet been ascertained. The accident was still being investigated Monday evening.

Hoffa Gets New Hearing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court has ordered a new hearing for Teamsters Union President James R. Hoffa on his 1964 federal mail-fraud conviction.

The hearing, the court said Monday, is to determine whether Hoffa's trial was affected by admitted government eavesdropping on a co-defendant.

The federal court in Chicago that Hoffa's conviction was tainted by eavesdropping, the court said, "it would then become its duty" to grant him a new trial.

Hoffa drew a five-year prison sentence on the mail-fraud conviction.

The court's action Monday has no bearing on his unrelated conviction for jury tampering. He is serving an eight-year sentence on that conviction in the federal penitentiary in Lewisburg, Pa.

Manning Seeks 9th Straight Mandate in Alberta Election

EDMONTON (CP)—A Social Credit administration that has held power since 1935 bids for an unprecedented ninth term of office in today's Alberta election.

Its leader, Premier E. C. Manning, who became Canada's youngest cabinet minister when William Aberhart appointed him provincial secretary and minister of trade and industry at the age of 26, took over on the death of his chief in 1943 and is fighting his seventh election as premier.

At 52, Mr. Manning has not yet progressed the full distance from political prodigy to elder statesman, although only two other men elected in the original Aberhart sweep — Municipal Affairs Minister A. J. Hooke and Edmonton MLA William Tomyn —are candidates today.

He wound up his campaign Friday night with a characteristically vigorous attack on his opponents and a plea to all supporters of free enterprise to unite behind Social Credit and keep out "state planning and a state society."

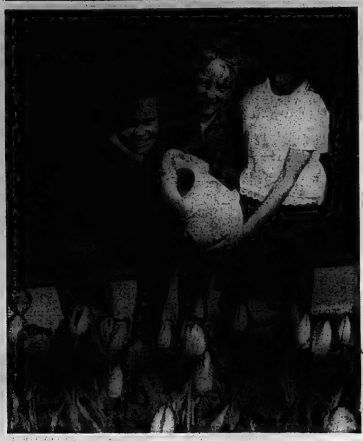
The premier's target was the New Democratic Party, the only group besides his own to enter candidates in all 63 constituencies seeking a mandate from 802,000 eligible voters. The other main contenders are the Progressive Conservatives, with 48 in the field, and the Liberals with 45.

Also running for office are eight Independents, three coalition candidates with joint Liberal and Conservative support, two Independent Conservatives and an Independent Social Crediter.

The polls are open from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. MST.

In his last election four years ago, Mr. Manning's government captured 60 seats to three for the combined opposition — two seats were added last year by redistribution — with only two Liberals and a coalition member surviving the Social Credit landslide. His share of the party vote was a comfortable 54.1 per cent.

Only the Liberals had their leader sitting in the legislature and they accomplished the feat by upsetting 52-year-old Mike MacCagno to the post last January after he had won three terms in Lac la Biche.



NDP Leader Neil Reimer, badly beaten in his first try in 1963, lost to Liberal Bill Switzer by 90 votes in a byelection in Edmonton two years later and is trying to reverse the decision today.

Peter Lougheed, the youngest leader at 38, took over the Conservative helm two years ago and is trying to overturn a 1,074-vote Social Credit majority in Calgary West in his first electoral bid.

Mr. Manning, whose 4,213-vote majority was the largest in the province in 1963, is running again in the Edmonton constituency of Strathcona East.

The campaign has produced few clear-cut issues.

Gerth Turcott, ND member of the last house for Pincher Creek-Crowsnest, enlivened the last session of the legislature by accusing Municipal Affairs Minister A. J. Hooke and E. W. Hinman, former provincial treasurer, of using or attempting to use their office for personal gain.

Union Plea Rejected, Boats Loaded

PRINCE RUPERT, B.C. (CP) — The two-month-old lawp of this northern coastal city's halibut fleet ended Monday when 500 United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union members returned to work despite orders from the union executive.

A few shoreworkers were still picketing the fish plants, but 24 vessels, owned by members of the Prince Rupert Vessel Owners' Association, were loaded with ice and bait.

The UFAWU refused earlier to load the vessels in defiance of court injunctions which resulted from a jurisdictional dispute between the UFAWU and the Deep Sea Fishermen's Union. The boats were boycotted in an effort to persuade owners to sign contracts with the UFAWU.

International Secretary Homer Stevens said earlier the shoreworkers should apply union principles and their consciences in deciding whether to obey the injunctions ordering them to load the boats.

Fifty women, most of them wives, accompanied shoreworkers to their jobs at the Prince Rupert co-operative plant Sunday and 24 vessels were baited and iced.

Mayor Frank Lester said: "Public opinion throughout the town is dead against the UFAWU shoreworkers for refusing to work."

A telegram bearing 6,000 signatures, about 40 per cent of the town's population, was sent to Attorney-General Robert Bonner urging government action to end the dispute. Mayor Lester said Mr. Bonner had not replied.

Mr. Lester said Homer Stevens had placed himself in the impossible position of fighting the whole city.

More than 50 per cent of the city's economy is based on the fishing industry. The dispute could have cost an estimated $7,000,000, plus the estimated loss of more than $1,000,000 in wages to the unemployed workers.

Supply Debate Opens in House

OTTAWA (CP)—A two - day supply debate is scheduled when the Commons resumes today but Vietnam and the explosive Middle East situation may take the spotlight.

Opposition members will again have the opportunity to test confidence in the government as the supply motion opens the way for Parliament to examine $11,009,000,000 in government spending estimates for the 1967-68 fiscal year.

The Liberals handily survived four non-confidence motions during the eight-day throne speech debate that ended Friday before the House rose for the holiday weekend.

Government policy on foreign affairs and housing became the issue as the Liberals safely came through the throne speech debate.

Vietnam and statements about it by Privy Council President Walter Gordon attracted considerable attention last week and Friday MPs virtually cross-examined Prime Minister Pearson and External Affairs Minister Martin on Middle East developments.

Bunny Ahearne won't want it — the Russians do — and its about time Canada did something about skewing the rest of this cockeyed world just what country has the best hockey team in the global arena.

An official Soviet embassy (Ottawa) publication suggests the time has come for a contest between the Russian national team and one of Canada's National Hockey League clubs either the Toronto Maple Leafs or the Montreal Canadiens.

"Soviet players and coaches are in favor of it," a hockey article in Soviet Union Today reports. The monthly magazine is written in Moscow and printed in Ottawa.

"The next season's high scorer Firsov said the time has come for such a test against the pros. It would show up the strong and weak points."

"The top coaches Arkady, Chernashev and Anatoly Tarasov also believe an exchange is in order and that both sides would benefit," the article states.

The magazine does not refer to any specific proposals being made or expected the outcome of such a meeting. In the past the move has been blocked by the world amateur hockey body which strictly forbids affiliations with professional teams.

Okay fellers up and at 'em. They asked for it. Let's give it to them. The dance with Ahearne and his phony amateurism. The European national teams especially Russia are as amateur as Mickey Mantle or Arnold Palmer.

Ahearne won't buy it and will do his best to thwart such a situation. I can hear him crying as those golden shekels he collects at every world tournament with his travel agency are diverted elsewhere.

I recall a press conference back in 1959 in Bratislava, Czechoslovakia while on the Hurlands junket when Milt Dunnell of the Toronto Star asked him why not allow the Canadian professional teams play in Europe.

Ahearne snorted — "Why," he shrilled, "those people over here are hockey crazy. Why give them the dollar (pro) stuff when they will pack the arenas with the ten cent kind (amateurs)."

The so-called "amateur standing" of the Russian team still brings belly laughs from hockey men this side of the Atlantic. Hockey is their life twelve months of the year. They are subsidized by the state and well paid for their training. Interview in Europe is a phony as it is in Canada. As Mushmouth once quipped, "the only amateur sportsman in the true sense of the word is the unborn baby."

And that brings up another point. I notice in the Soviet magazine article that rules are not mentioned. The Reds likely will demand that international rules be given the play. Okay let's try this once. Play our rules in another game.

It is understandable that the Russians feel they can give a real Canadian professional team a run for the money, if not they've won the so-called world amateur championship the past four years, and have seen our pro teams play.

And perhaps the biggest roadblock to the plan would be the selection of referees. After the pitiful exhibition of last year in world hockey the Canadians will have something to say about it.

The Canadian National team claimed that European refereeing had a lot to do with their failure to bring the bacon. After seeing the films of the club's activities over there, it seemed to me that a lot of off-the-ice antics contributed in no small measure.

This Russia versus a Canadian National Hockey League team clash has been going the rounds for a few years, but has always been side-tracked. If memory is correct the Toronto Maple Leafs brass said it would have no objections but the little Bandit from Britain" mounted his paltrey, drew his guns and came ashootin'.

Now the Russians have asked for it. So let them have it. They could take on the Boston Bruins for size.

Soaring Birds Blank Yanks On 2 Hits

By DICK COUCH
Associated Press Sports Writer

Baltimore's Tom Phoebus, who started going places when he returned home, has given the wondering Orioles a new look at their old neighborhood.

Phoebus, a Baltimore native who came up from the minors late last year and pitched shutouts in his first two starts, blanked New York Yankees 7-0 on two hits Monday night, lifting the Orioles back to the .500 level.

The 23-year-old right-hander, who lives less than two miles from Baltimore's Municipal Stadium did not allow a hit until the seventh inning and struck out 11 Yankees.

The triumph, seventh in the last nine games for the world champions, sent them into a third-place tie with Kansas City Athletics and Minnesota Twins in the American League.

TOM PHOEBUS

Minnesota edged Chicago 5-7 to knock the White Sox out of a share of first place with idle Detroit Tigers while California Angels topped Kansas City 6-3 and Cleveland Indians blanked Washington Senators 4-0 in other AL action.

Frank Robinson crashed his 15th home run — taking the league lead—and Dave Johnson and Andy Etchebarren also poked homers for the Orioles.

Minnesota's Cesar Tovar, who had two homers and four hits in Sunday's victory over California stayed hot with two hits and a pair of RBI against the White Sox. The Twins came from behind with a three-run burst in the sixth inning, Zoilo Versalles singling home the go-ahead run.

Don Mincher drove in three runs with his eighth homer and a two-run single, backing Jim McGlothlin's six-hit pitching as the Angels overcame Kansas City's early 3-1 lead.

Steve Hargan stopped Washington on four hits and drove in the only run he needed with a second-inning single. Leo Maye and Chuck Hinton rapped bases-empty homers for the Indians.

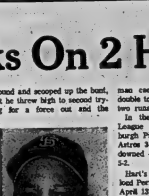
When Willie Mays hits a home run or makes a great catch, that's predictable.

Then there are the times Willie Mays is unpredictable.



Like the other day when he dropped a fly ball. On Monday night, when he bunted.

The bunt helped San Francisco Giants beat Philadelphia Phillies 3-1.

The play came in the sixth inning with the game tied 1-1, runners at first and second and none out.

"I bunted on my own." Willie explained afterward. "Jim Bunning is a tough pitcher. I've never hit him very well, and I had already struck out three times. We needed only one run, and if McCovey and Hart coming behind me. All it takes is a fly ball."

Bunning charged off the mound and scooped up the bunt, but he threw high to second trying for a force out and the

WILLIE MAYS

Giants had the bases loaded.

Just as Mays figured, McCovey got the ball in the air, but it was a foul pop, and now it was Hart's turn. The third baseman came through, lashing a double to left field that drove in two runs and won the game.

In the only other National League games Monday, Pittsburgh Pirates defeated Houston Astros 3-1 and New York Mets downed Los Angeles Dodgers 5-2.

Hart's hit also brought Gaylord Perry his first victory since April 13. Perry, a 21-game winner last season, had lost four straight.

Tommie Sisk pitched a four-hitter against Houston and helped extend Chris Zachary's winless streak to five. Willie Stargell got the big blow off Zachary, a two-run homer in the sixth inning.

The Mets lashed four Los Angeles pitchers for 12 hits, Ed Charles collecting four singles and Tommy Davis three. Charles singled home a fifth-inning run that put New York ahead to stay.

Away This Week

Softball; Off, Running

Softball swings into its busy summer schedule this week with a couple of city leagues getting under way tonight.

The Trent Valley League, with four clubs, Stirling, Campbellford, Madoc, RCAF and Trenton, got under way last week, with Point Anne's first game scheduled for the Point Thursday, at 6:45, against Trenton Carm's Chargers. RCAF edged Madoc 7-5 in Trenton last night.

Here in the city tonight, the Commercial League swings into action at Alemite Park. As well as the opening game between the defending champion Stewart Warner club and Black Diamond Cheese, entertainment and opening ceremonies are on tap. The game is scheduled for 7:00 p.m.

The five-team Departmental League also opens tonight with the defending champion Intelligencer playing the Weeks-City Combines, at Prince Charles' School, at 8:30. The league will play all games there, one each Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday night.

The Quinte-KASA grouping, with five clubs, opens tomorrow night with Kingston Lake Bus Service visiting the Picton Kinsmen, at 8:15.

Belleville's lone entry, Ellis Printers, open at home against Picton on Thursday. Game time is 8:30 at Alemite Park.

And, as announced earlier, the senior baseball season gets under way here tonight with Brockville and the Lombanks tangling at the Fairgrounds at 8:00 sharp.

Never to be forgotten are the kids. Minor baseball and softball is in full swing.

South Hastings baseball starts tomorrow with Latta at Read and Shannonville at Camilton Place's.

And away we go!

Weekend Tough For Leafs

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto Maple Leafs soon may start wishing they played all their International League games against league - leading Rochester Red Wings.

The Leafs still have to beat the Wings in a series this year, but by the same token they still have to lose a series to Rochester. The teams split a four-game series last week and Monday split a Victoria Day doubleheader. Toronto won the opener 9-4 before losing 1-0.

They weren't so fortunate in a three-game series with Syracuse Chiefs Saturday and Sunday, dropping all three by one run—3-2 Saturday and 9-8 and 1-0 Sunday.

Syracuse and Buffalo Bisons were rained out Monday, but the Bisons need the rest after losing to Rochester 4-1 Saturday and 4-3 Sunday after taking the first of a twin bill 3-1.

The results left Syracuse 2½ games behind Rochester and a half-game ahead of Buffalo with Columbus Jets 4½ games off the pace a half-game ahead of Richmond Braves.

STOPS CANADIAN IN 8th

SYDNEY (Reuters)— World-ranked Australian Bob Dunlop beat the Canadian light-heavyweight champion, Leslie Borden of Montreal, in the eighth round of a scheduled 10-round bout at Sydney Stadium Monday night when the referee stopped the fight.

Wanted! Women Softballers

Efforts are continuing to form a women's softball league in the city, according to a release from the office of the Recreation Department.

Two meetings have been held and much enthusiasm shown.

All women in the city who are interested in playing are asked to attend open practices tomorrow (Wednesday) and Thursday nights, at the Cherry Producer's Field (South Foster Ave.) at 6:30.

If enough players turn out a league will be formed.

AFL To Expand

Cincinnati Likely Choice

NEW YORK (AP) — The American Football League probably will expand to 10 clubs for 1968, with Cincinnati the most likely choice, and the Super Bowl game probably will be set for Sunday, Jan. 14 in Miami's Orange Bowl during pro football meetings opening today.

Under the terms of the merger agreement of last June, the AFL is to add another team by 1968 with the franchise money of about $8,000,000 going into the National Football League's coffers.

Paul Brown, former coach of Cleveland Browns, has been actively promoting Cincinnati as a pro football site for some time. His group is expected to get consideration when a city and owner are selected formally.

The status of Jim Taylor, Green Bay Packer fullback who played out his option and became a free agent, may or may not wind up in the lap of Commissioner Pete Rozelle, who heads both leagues.

Taylor is reported to be anxious to play with New Orleans Saints, newest NFL entry, but the Saints must reach an agreement with Vince Lombardi, general manager of the Packers, on just compensation.

If the two clubs can not agree, the matter would be referred to Rozelle who ruled on a similar dispute between Green Bay and Detroit Lions on the Ron Kramer case a few years back.

Peace Treaty Negotiated
'Major' Juniors Back In CAHA Fold

SASKATOON (CP) — The executive committee of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, in a behind-the-scenes pre-convention meeting during the Victoria Day weekend, negotiated peace with the Canadien Major Junior Hockey League.

Terms for the cessation of hostilities were put before the CAHA's 51st annual meeting Monday and accepted, without dissent, by delegates. It will bring the CMJHL back under CAHA supervision after 8½ months as a suspended league operating in Regina, Moose Jaw, Weyburn, Estevan, Saskatoon, Edmonton and Calgary.

"We decided to put hockey where it should be," president Fred Page told a news conference.

"We never did want to be outside CAHA jurisdiction," said Frank Boucher, commissioner of the CMJHL which, under the settlement terms, will change its name and drop legal action started against five CAHA officers.

The disagreement began last fall when the CMJHL was refused CAHA sanction to operate on the ground the time was not ripe for such a league.

The new pact permits the junior circuit to operate in its present form and to study five applications for new franchises at its annual meeting starting in Regina Thursday.

Boucher said examination and study of a pending new agreement between the National Hockey League and the CAHA during 12 hours of discussion Saturday and Sunday "helped us a great deal to understand what we should do."

He said the name change provision was made on the basis that the words "Canadian Major" seemed to indicate a higher bracket that gave the impression other junior teams were in an inferior position.

The new contract with the NHL will eliminate professional sponsorship of individual amateur clubs. Instead, an over-age draft of junior players will be established with the money obtained from professional teams to be distributed by the CAHA.

The built of the first-day talk in the five-day meeting concentrated on registration and financial statements. The registration committee reported that 245,348 players were registered with CAHA branches and local affiliates in the 1965-67 season, an increase of six per cent from 1963-65.

The balance sheets showed the CAHA share of gate receipts from 1966 Memorial Cup playoff games came to $278,526 and from Allan Cup playoff contests to $162,856. After deducting expenses and $67,132 as its share, the CAHA distributed the surplus among playoff participants with the Canadian junior champion Edmonton Oil Kings collecting $20,271 and the senior champion Drumheller Miners $10,367.

The overseas account showed the CAHA made a profit of $2,039 on the 1965-67 tour of Canada by Russia's national team, $2,011 on a tour by Moscow Selects, $14,179 on a tour by Czechoslovakia's national team and $1,473 on a tour by the Polish national team.

Delegates also defeated a motion from the Quebec association asking transfer of the counties of Terrebonne, Kamp, Norands, Abitibi East, Abitibi West, Pontiac, Hull and Papineau to the Ontario association. However, the Quebec delegation managed to get a commitment for a study of CAHA branch boundaries. The counties in question now are bended by the Ontario and Ottawa and district associations.

Wins $141,500

Damascus; Preakness' Magic Carpet

BALTIMORE (CP) — There will be no winner this year of North America's triple crown for thoroughbreds.

Damascus made this certain Saturday by winning the $194,000 Preakness Stakes at Pimlico.

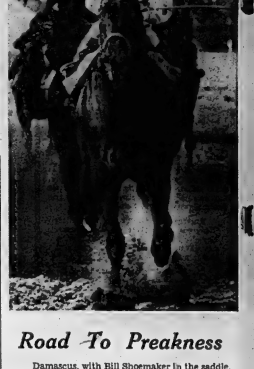
Under jockey Willie Shoemaker, the three-year-old bay son of Sword Dancer, charged from ninth in a field of 10 to take a 2¼-length victory in 1:55 1-5, three-fifths of a second slower for the 1 3-16 miles than the record set by Nashua in the 1955 Preakness.

Second was In Reality while Kentucky Derby winner Proud Clarion finished four lengths back in third.

The Derby, the Preakness and the Belmont Stakes June 3, constitute the three events in the Triple Crown, last won 19 years ago by Citation.

Reason to Hail was three-quarters of a length behind Proud Clarion at the wire followed, in order, by Misty Cloud, Birdie Delight, Ask The Fare, Celtic Air, Favorable Turn and Great Power.

The victory by Damascus returned $141,500 — the biggest Preakness purse in history—for Mrs. William Woodward and her daughter Edith Bancroft, the owners, and Belair Farms.



"Damascus was an entirely different horse today from the one I rode in the Derby," Shoemaker recalled. "He had it handed to him."

The horse finished third in the Derby.

Proud Clarion also came from out of the pack to take third place, but jockey Bobby Ussery said: "I didn't plan to be so far back.

Damascus has finished no worse than third in his career. He has been to the post 10 times, and as a three year old has won four of six starts and earned $260,440.

Damascus returned $5.60, $2.60 and $2.60; in Reality $4.60 and $3.60 and Proud Clarion $3.80.

EOBA Peewees Edge Oshawa In Opener

Belleville's Hiby Rooney peewees made the official opening of the E.O.B.A. a successful one here Sunday afternoon by pushing across one run in the bottom of the final frame to shade Oshawa Legion 6-5.

Oshawa had plated three runs in the top of the fifth to tie the game 5-5 but John Mulvihill singled with two mates aboard in the last of the seventh to drive home the winning marker.

Oliver baseball, both E.O.B.A. and B.M.B.A., go into full swing this week. However some of the B.M.B.A. schedule have not been turned in here.

Allen Wood and John Mulvihill combined for a three-hitter on the Belleville hilltop Sunday. They struck out eight and walked three. Dave Sheridan and Kevin Stone allowed five hits for Oshawa, whiffing eight and passing eight.

Danny Lancette singled twice, Mulvihill, Mike Burley and Stephen Burke once each for Hiby Rooney.

Gary Wilson hit a double and single, Jim Miller a single in defeat.

Opening ceremonies preceded the game, played at Parkdale.

Knudson In Colonial
From Riches To Rags!

FORT WORTH (CP) — Dave Stockton of San Bernadino, Calif. could manage only a two-over-par 73 Sunday, but it was good enough for first place in the $115,000 Colonial national invitation golf tournament.

Playing in wind, cold and mud, Stockton beat off Charles Coody who finished second with a two-under 69, the only sub-par round of the final day. Coody picked up $13,800.

Tom Weiskopf, first to fall away in the chase for the $23,000 first prize, was tied with Stockton entering the final round. But he went one over on both the third and fourth holes and two over on the fifth for let Stockton pass him.

Weiskopf slid to an 81 and ended 11th with 286 while Stockton carried on to 278.

George Archer caught Stockton on the 12th, but went one over on the 13th and finished with 72, good for a third place tie with Ben Hogan at 281.

George Knudson of Toronto wound up 46th at 295 with R. H. Sikes and Paul Bondeson, good for $150. Knudson managed to hold onto ninth place among PGA money winners with an official $36,973 and an unofficial $40,252.

Spurs Didn't Have To Jingle-Jangle To Win Cockney Cup Final

LONDON (CP)— Spurs have the forms of their third English Football Association Cup in seven years, but the feat has been greeted by a barely-stifled yawn.

Spurs, or Tottenham Hotspur, beat Chelsea 2-1 with little apparent effort and less excitement in Saturday's Cockney Cup Final—so called because it was the first professional soccer final between two London clubs.

Most experts had said beforehand that the North London crew was artful enough to beat the temperamental team from arty Chelsea. When the result proved the prediction's accuracy, the forecasters perversely felt cheated.

"A quiet, subdued final," concluded The News of The World. "The game will not linger long in the memory," said The Sunday Mirror. "Tedious," was the verdict of The Sunday Times.

The ingredients of excitement seemed to be there when the teams—Chelsea in rich royal blue, the Spurs in glittering white—flood up on Wembley's luxuriant turf. A cloudburst spectacularly moved off just before the start and returned only briefly late in the game.

Within 15 minutes, Hotspur wingers Frank Saul and Jimmy Robertson had severely tested Chelsea goalkeeper Peter Bonetti. Pat Jennings had his spectacular talents similarly stretched in the Spurs goal during the same period when Tony Hateley looped a dangerous header over the defence and Charlie Cooke hammered a low, hard shot mindsy later.

Thereafter, Tottenham's formidable defenders stolidly declined to give Chelsea a fighting chance, despite the urgent efforts of Cooke and Hateley.

At the same time, Spurs built up their offensive pressure in a workmanlike way, alternating between sweeps down the sidelines by Robertson or Saul and thrusts through the centre by Jimmy Greaves or Alan Gilzean.

Robertson's goal in the last minute of the first half thus came as no surprise. He slammed a rebound from the legs of hapless Chelsea captain Ron Harris past the helpless, kneeling Bonetti.

The other goals were almost afterthoughts. Saul bested Bonetti with an acrobatic effort midway through the second half and Bobby Tambling crashing in on a rare mistake by Jennings with less than five minutes remaining in the game.

The school crowd of 100,000 paid £100,548 ($328,947) to see the game.

With The Trotters

WESTBURY, N.Y. (AP) — Romeo Hanover easily won his 19th straight race and stamped himself as one of the great pacers of all time in winning the $91,864 Realization Saturday night.

Silent Byrd was second. Good Time Boy, owned by Alex Pascone of London, Ont., and Grey Brothers of Providence, was third.

Driver George Sholty took the four-year-old Romeo Hanover, by Dancer Hanover from Crescenda Hanover, to the front at the start of the 1 1-16-mile test, yielded the lead briefly to Overcall at the end of the first quarter, then regained the lead and drew out to win easily.

He went the half in 58 seconds, the three-quarters in 1:29 and finished the race in 2:06 flat.

Sholty just eat still in the sulky down the stretch to finish one length ahead of Silent Byrd, driven by Harold Dancer Jr., and 2½ lengths ahead of Good Time Boy, driven by James LaRente.

Romeo, although making his first start of the year, went off as the favorite and paid $2.20 to win. Silent Byrd returned $2.60 and $2.10 and Good Time Boy $2.80 to show.

TORONTO (CP) — Armbro Gazelle, owned by Max Webster of Brantford, won the $4,710 Leaside Stakes at Greenwood on Monday, edging out Silver Nib Lee by a head.

The win, with Bob Silliphant driving, brought Armbro Gazelle's lifetime earnings to $69,-125.

He paid $3.60 for the win and combined with Silver Nib Lee for a $43.20 exactor.

The daily double of Danny K. Peters in the first and Rough Sketch in the second paid $18.90.

On Saturday night, Blaze Pick, Canada's two - year - old Pacer of the Year last season, displayed grit and stamina to win the $2,500 Champ Volo invitation pace over Dean Herbert and Sykes Hanover.

Blaze Pick paid $9.10, $3.80 and $3.40.

U.S. Open

Knudson, Leonard Out In Cold

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

At least eight Canadians qualified Sunday in preliminary trials for the U.S. Open golf championship set for June 15-18 at Springfield, N.J.

But notable among those not qualifying were professionals George Knudson of Toronto and Stan Leonard of Vancouver.

Leonard tried at Seattle, but picked up after 27 holes because his score was so bad. He had a first-round 79.

Knudson, upset because he was required to qualify after wrecking the Canada field individual honors and the Greater New Orleans Open and because the U.S. Golf Association found a flaw in his original entry form, refuse to rattle an entry and passed the Open.

Johnny Gary Cowan of Kitchener, Ont., an automatic qualifier as reigning U.S. Amateur champion, are Al Balding, Bobby Breen and Frank Whibley of Toronto, Bob Panasiuk of Windsor, Ont., Ron Foth of Saskatoon, Bobby Cox Jr. of Vancouver and Bill Ezinicki, formerly of Winnipeg but now resident of Mashpee, Mass.

The second round of the qualifying tests is set for June 5 and 6 at several courses across the U.S.

Breen and Balding set the pace in the fields in which they advanced, Breen leading 22 professionals at Detroit with an even par 71-72—143 over two courses while Balding shot 73-69 —142 for a four-stroke lead at Buffalo.

But the low Canadian was Foth, who blistered the par-72 Odessa, Texas, Country Club course in 69-66—135 to become one of two entrants there to advance.

Behind Breen at Detroit was Panasiuk with 75-73—148 while Whibley was 10 strokes behind Balding at 76-76—152 to be one of nine successful entrants at Buffalo.

Cox lead the Seattle field after the first round, but faltered in the second to wind up with 70-77 —147 as one of six to make the grade while Ezinicki was a comfortable four strokes in front of the last of nine qualifiers at Boston with his 75-76—145.

Americans Retain Walker Cup

SANDWICH, England (AP)— Bill Campbell emerged from the U.S. Walker Cup victory with an unruffled glory that gave him the edge over every other contender for the British Amateur Golf Championship next week.

The British amateur begins May 29 at Formby near Liverpool in the north of England.

The 10-man U.S. team battled muscle winds and rain Friday and Saturday to retain the trophy 13-7 with four matches halved. It was the 19th American victory in 21 Walker Cup contests. The British have won once and tied once.

Campbell won all four of his matches Saturday to regain playing in the Walker Cup in 1951 he never has lost in the singles.

Reception Wins In A Romp

TORONTO (CP) — Picking the winner in the 100th running of the Queen's Plate here June 24 may be the easiest task since Northern Dancer went off as the overwhelming favorite in the 1964 Plate.

Cool Reception, the winter book Plate favorite, justified his rating Monday at Woodbine race track, winning the $11,625 Marine Stakes by eight lengths and equalling the track record of 1:42 3-5 over 1 1-16 miles.

Cool Reception walked away from Betemight and Pine Point in the two three-year-olds figured to provide his stiffest competition in the Plate.

The victory, worth $6,625 to Cool Reception's owners, Mrs. W. J. Seitz of Montreal and Mrs. V. P. Reid of Toronto, raised his winnings this year to $27,002.

Betemight, purchased by Montreal's Noel Hickey last week for $35,000, finished a distant second. Pine Point finished fourth.

Camden Market, running as an entry with Cool Reception, finished third.

Cool Reception's jockey, Walter Blum, urged his horse, a 1-to-4 favorite, on to the Victorian Era's record set last year.

Indianapolis 500

Experts Like Parnelli And Turbine

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP) — "There's no way," said Dan Gurney, "that we can beat Parnelli Jones and the turbine from winning the Memorial Day race if nothing breaks in his car."

Mario Andretti said earlier that if the Pratt and Whitney turbine car holds together "the rest of us will be competing for second place."

Andretti was fastest qualifier at a record 168.982 m.p.h. in a Brawner Hawk-Ford. Gurney, Santa Ana, Calif., was second fastest at 167.324 in one of his own American Eagle-Fords.

Jones, the 1963 winner of the 500-mile race in a conventional race car, qualified only sixth fastest in the 10-mile trials the last two weekends, 166.075. But he was practising almost that fast last week with a full load of fuel.

Parnelli had to pamper a faulty gear box in the trials but new gears have been installed. The reason the top drivers fear Jones is that the turbine may be able to run all day at close to qualifying speed. The piston engines will be running slower because they have to overcome the amount of nitro methane and other additives in their qualifying fuel, in order to avoid burning the pistons.

The turbine car uses JP1 fuel identical to that used by aircraft.

The STP division of Studebaker, headed by Andy Granatelli, spent three years building the nine-car "Turbocar."

Granatelli contends the car may make the Grand Prix type four-engine cars obsolete, even though the amount of nitro is allowed in the engine. The engine is installed behind the driver. It has an aircraft - originated aluminum honeycomb frame, an airfoil brake flap and four-wheel drive.

Granatelli, himself a former race driver, has been busily knocking down rumors that the two Canadian-built turbine develops 1,000 horsepower.

"Simply not true," he says. "It provides 580 h.p., comparable to that of our competitor."

Jones undoubtedly has much to do with the Turbocar's success, too, and to re-learn to drive, except the steering. The engine produces its power at a relatively low rpm, and he could destroy the transmission and axles by hitting the throttle too hard.

Centennial Canoe Pageant

They Won't Be 'Pad dlin Madeline Home'

By BRUCE LEVETT
Canadian Press Sports Editor

Heading into the great outdoors this summer? Well, have a care because the centennial canoe pageant will be abroad in the land.

From May 24 at Rocky Mountain House, Alta., to Sept. 1 at Expo, 10 canoes, each with six paddlers, will plunge relentlessly eastward.

At stake is honor and glory — $2,500 for each man in the winning canoe. The payoff for second and third is $2,000 and $1,500.

To win, a team must flail through sprints and timeless races in a manner similar to an automobile rally.

Hovering around the canoes like Indians around a wagon train will be a minimum of three safety boats at all times.

Just over the horizon will be the support group, a ragged convoy of at least 25 vehicles ranging from three-ton trucks to jeeps, station wagons, campers and trailers.

Project officer for this 3,300-mile ramble, which loosely retraces the route of the voyageurs, is Vic Chapman who was a punter for British Columbia Lions and Edmonton Eskimos before he got into canoeing.

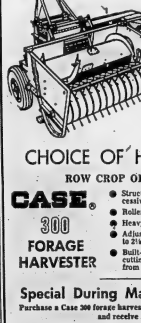
The canoes will go by train to Rocky Mountain House; the vehicles will be taken over from the air force in Edmonton.

"We have lined up 10 three-ton trucks, one for each team," Vic said.

"Those have benches in the back for the spare paddlers and one member of each team will be driver. Army personnel will instruct the paddlers in the handling of the trucks when we take them over."

There are four spare paddlers to each team and one team from each Canadian province except Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland. Both territories have entered teams.

The spares, who alternate, will ride the trucks to the overnight stopping-places and set up camps for their teammates. They will be accompanied along the roads by 15 army vehicles manned by 33 men — the communications unit.



Officials will travel in an assortment of rolling stock.

"We thought about trying to travel in canoes," Chapman says, "but we gave up on it— unless you know how to do it properly you can get into an unholy mess."

On stretches where the terrain cannot reach the canoes for an overnight stop— and there are 20 of these— canoes will be self-sufficient in the matter of food and shelter.

Much of the equipment will be carried in the trucks—a wise decision when you consider the paddlers are expected to consume a 30,000-mile to weigh 300 pounds each have come up 350 pounds. The reason given is that the manufacturers wanted to make the craft as safe and strong as possible.

It may be comforting in the white water, but what about that nine-mile portage?

Lacrosse Title To USA

TORONTO (CP)—The United States, representing the Mt. Washington Club of Baltimore, Md., defeated Canada and Australia during the Victoria Day weekend to win the first world field lacrosse championships held in 32 years.

The powerful U.S. team, the only one to emerge undefeated from the four - nation, round-robin series, clinched the title and the P. J. Laky Trophy here Monday with an impressive 8-11 victory over Australia, previously undefeated in the tournament.

The Americans trounced Canada 18-8 in St. Catharines Sunday while Australia downed Canada 18-10 here Saturday. England, not scheduled on the weekend, lost all three of its games last week.

Roller Skating Record Set By Four Teens

WALKERTON, Ont. (C)—A Canadian roller-skating record has been claimed by four Walkerton teen-agers who skated 40 hours and 44 minutes during the weekend in the Walkerton Arena.

The old mark was said to be 32 hours and 30 minutes, set in Toronto three years ago.

The two couples, who began skating Saturday midnight, cancelled the contest a draw Monday afternoon.

Alan Young, 18, and Dorelle Helwig, 15, will share the top prize money of $200 donated by the Walkerton Junior Chamber of Commerce with Dave Ziegler and Gwen Redford, both 18. Wellerton is 20 miles south of Owen Sound.

Does he take better care of your kids than you do?

He may.
He was concerned enough about the kids he drives to install a set of new Goodyear polysteers on his car.
And they're not even his kids.
This doesn't mean school pickup operators are rich. This man only paid about $30 a tire for his Goodyear polysteers. Yet they're among the safest tires you can buy at any price.
This is a new kind of tire. It's considered the most significant improvement in 20 years. The difference is in the costly, new polyester cord. This is an incredibly strong synthetic cord that has all the advantages of nylon and rayon combined, with none of the disadvantages.
It's another first from Goodyear.
The major car manufacturers have selected Goodyear polysteers as original equipment on their new cars. And safety isn't the only reason.
These polysteers are also longer wearing.
They're practically eliminated the problem of cuts and impact breaks.
They're smoother riding, and they're quieter running too.
They won't "flat spot" overnight. So, no morning thump.
They'll even improve your gas mileage.
Like all Goodyear tires, the new polysteers are fully covered by Goodyear's lifetime quality and road hazard guarantee.
Talk to your Goodyear man soon about polyester tires by Goodyear.
And next time you take your kids for a drive, take a look at your tires. If you think maybe the kids would be better off in the school pickup, you know what to do.

The new polyester tire by Goodyear. It could save you more than money.

LaRonde Packed on Weekend

Safety and Comfort Provided

Rescuers Trained to Help People Stranded on High Rides at Expo

MONTREAL (CP) — A specially-trained rescue squad is always ready to bring comfort and safety of anyone accidentally stranded high above the ground on any of numerous rides at La Ronde, the world's fair amusement centre.

The 40-man squad, believed by Expo 67 officials to be the only one of its kind in the world, is headed by Ron Lee, the rescue director.

Fred Bontinger, 30, one of three assistant rescue directors, said Monday night the squad began its training in mid-February and continues to hold refresher sessions. Most of the training is in rescue operations, explained that different rides call for different rescue techniques.

Ladders were used when a car or circuit threw out of operation a section of minitrail track, leaving about 30 passengers in two of the 10 minitrail trains stranded 30 feet above the ground or a week ago.

The Gyrotron breakdown and the removal of passengers from the minitrail were the only two major rescue operations to tax the squad since the opening of the fair.

The squad, divided into eight-man crews, consists of volunteers with experience in working in high places—linesmen on telephone poles or electricians experienced in first aid and tying knots.

Each of the major rides has a foreman or supervisor on duty at all times who is a trained rescue man. They report to the control room before going on duty and are equipped with telephone service from each ride in case of an emergency.

The squad was used when a car structures—one a pyramid 215 feet high and the other a smaller structure with the ride connecting the two about 120 feet above the ground, carries passengers four abreast to the top of the pyramid.

They encounter what appear to be colliding meteors and satellites and hear the sounds of space travel. Up to 3,000 passengers an hour travel at 200 feet a minute, completing the ride in six minutes.

The Gyrotron broke down before a series of catwalks in the structure had been completed. About 100 persons were stranded.

Rescue workers used bull horns to inform the passengers of the difficulty and brought coffee and blankets to those stranded outside on the bridge—a 120 feet above the ground—on meeting the two structures.

The actual rescue operation took four hours and involved moving the conveyor manually until all the passengers were removed from the 1,700 feet of track that are part of the ride.

Expo Spreads Welcome Mat For Israel's President Shazar

MONTREAL (CP)—Expo 67 today opened its welcome mat for President Zalman Shazar of Israel who came to the fair to attend his country's flag-raising ceremonies.

Visitors in Canada since Friday, the president and Mrs. Shazar were wined and dined at a white-tie reception in Montreal's city hall Monday night.

Their program for today calls for a welcome to the fair by Pierre Dupuy, commissioner-general, inspection of a guard of honor, raising of the Israeli flag, a 21-gun salute and Mr. Shazar's reply in Hebrew.

President Shazar is the ninth head of state to come to Expo since the fair opened April 27.

Meanwhile, the Israeli pavilion was polished up and declared closed to the public for the day because of the official functions.

The pavilion, with its cubist walls, geometric roof and landscaped garden tells the story of the Jewish nation.

Moving along a ramp encircling the two-level display, visitors see the Israel of religious antiquity in an exhibit dominated by the Dead Sea Scrolls.

Its exhibits illustrate the achievements of the 19-year-old nation and the difficulties ahead —water conservation, conquest of the desert and development of its industry.

The number of visitors at Expo exceeded 1,000,000 during the Saturday - through - Monday Victoria Day holiday period.

By 12 midnight Monday the turnstiles had counted 343,515 visitors, for the day; bringing the total number of visits during the fair's 25 public days to 6,385,552.

Actual attendence at the fair has been running 1,900,000 visits ahead of pre-opening statistical predictions. Today's estimate is called for 129,550 but it probably will be exceeded.

Saturday was the only day since the fair opened that attendance dropped below each of the Saturday's preceding. It was for 307,810 visitors but rain and wind plus chilly temperatures kept the number down to 299,092.

Montreal's bus and subway system poured thousands into the St. Lawrence River site Monday but officials of the public-owned Montreal Transportation Commission said the weekend came off without a major hitch.

But fair officials had to use their supplement the Expo Express which carries visitors free across 3½ miles of track linking Expo's three main sites. Loading platforms on the five express stations were packed and attendants held visitors back to prevent the crowds being pushed off the platforms in front of trains.

Thursday is the United States' national day at the fair when Postmaster - General Lawrence F. O'Brien will represent his country at the flag-raising ceremony.

Pilot Bales Out

LAHR, West Germany (C) —RCAF Sqdn. Ldr. M. R. McGregor of Maxville, Ont., escaped injury when he baled out of his Starfighter jet plane Sunday as it streaked along the runway of this Black Forest air base. McGregor, 40, normally based at Zweibrucken, was taking off on a routine test flight. He had his plane up to takeoff speed when the engine failed. He triggered his ejector seat and came down safely as the plane crashed into a barrier at the end of the runway.

Lone Sailor Hurts Arm

PLYMOUTH, England (AP) — Sir Francis Chichester, British sailor, has injured his arm, reported suffering from an injured elbow on the last leg of his 28,000-mile round-the-world voyage.

Chichester, 66, is getting daily radio messages from a doctor on how to deal with an abscess on his elbow.

A spokesman for his wife said Sunday: "He may be in pain, but we do not think his condition is serious. We don't think it will delay his arrival."

Other sources reported, however, that Chichester is suffering acute pain and being handicapped by his injury.

He is expected here next weekend.

Pasta Is Food Of South Italy

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

ROME — Just as many Europeans tend to equate all of America with the Wild West, the oil millionaire, and the gangster, so do Americans tend to take one small factor in a European country for the whole.

As a trivial, but symbolic, example, most Americans will tell you that the Italians love a lot of garlic in their food, and are addicted to pasta and rich spicy sauces. This is not at all true.

What is known in America as "Italian" cuisine is actually Neapolitan food, popular around Naples but not as prevalent elsewhere in Italy. Most of the fine meals I enjoyed from Rome north; pasta is widely used in the south because it is cheaper, and the south of Italy is still frightfully poor.

As for spices and hot sauces, these are considered much more "American" here than Italian. Generally, the Italian cooks, we ogerdu our spaghetti and then overlaced it with too much sauce, the taste is almost it 'al dente'' — that is, just hard enough to bite the teeth. They also are much fonder of butter than of garlic, and the latter is always discreetly used in good restaurants.

(As for cleanliness, the puritan baggage of most Americans, it is my distinct impression that Italian restaurants are far cleaner than French ones, as well as far more honest in their prices.)

In the better Italian restaurants — such as Giannini's in Milan — you actually enter through the kitchen and then go upstairs to the dining room. No kitchen could possibly be cleaner. And all the food is lightly cooked in butter, which is not always true in American restaurants.

The best food in Rome today is to be found at George's, a restaurant operated by an Englishman, which is immensely popular with Roman epicures. It has a dining accompaniment to the fact that the best food in London today is to be found in a restaurant operated by an Italian!

Although the Oska — and a hamburger joint of exact has taken hold here to some degree, eating is still a long and leisurely ritual. Despite Italy's increasing industrialization, most shops still close down around noon and don't reopen until 3 pm. The afternoon meal is big one, and dinner is usually at 9 pm., which consumes the rest of the evening.

Dining out in most of Europe is an event, not a rushed preamble to something else. Courses are chosen with deliberation, there is plenty of conversation, and hardly anyone ever gets drunk. You don't see people gulping down their cold martinis, gobbling up an overdone steak, and rushing off to the theatre, ballet, concert or conference with indigestion. That is just the American Way.

Nazi 'Mercy Killers' Applauded When Freed

FRANKFURT (Reuters) — Spectators applauded today when three doctors were acquitted on charges rising from thousands of "mercy killings" the Nazi murder officials in the mentally sick.

The doctors were charged with helping subordinates in the murder of thousands of persons under the Nazi euthanasia program. They pleaded they were misled into believing it was legal.

Dr. Aquilin Ulrich, 53, Dr. Heinrich Bunke, 52, and Dr. Klaus Endruweit, 53, are still practice and were permitted to remain free during the trial.

The prosecutor sought sentences of between four and eight years. Ulrich and Endruweit were alleged to have aided in the murder of 8,000 patients, Bunke with aiding in the murder of 9,500.

More than 100 witnesses were heard during the eight - month trial.

Judge Gerhard Zuebe said the whole euthanasia program had to be considered murder as there was no legal basis for it. But it could not be proved that the doctors knew they were acting illegally.

The judge said they were misled and convicted and the killings in 1940 and 1941 took place at a time when moral standards were defective. The doctors believed what they were told by their teachers.

The euthanasia program was instrumental in eliminating 300,000 mentally ill persons considered to be hampering the Nazi war effort.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch!

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids...and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Ask at your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Satisfaction or your money refunded.

Lone Sailor Hurts Arm

PLYMOUTH, England (AP) — Sir Francis Chichester, British sailor, has injured his arm, reported suffering from an injured elbow on the last leg of his 28,000-mile round-the-world voyage.

Chichester, 66, is getting daily radio messages from a doctor on how to deal with an abscess on his elbow.

A spokesman for his wife said Sunday: "He may be in pain, but we do not think his condition is serious. We don't think it will delay his arrival."

Other sources reported, however, that Chichester is suffering acute pain and being handicapped by his injury.

He is expected here next weekend.

Tyendinaga Reserve Indians Proud to Be Part of Canada

The Indians of Canada could use the white man's Centennial Year to good advantage — by realizing a proud heritage, and striving to overcome barriers stifling race relationships, a leading Mohawk Indian said here Sunday.

The message came from Elliott Moses, chairman of the Ontario Indian Advisory Board and member of the Six Nations Reserve, Brantford.

Mr. Moses' speech, which gently deplored misunderstandings between both races, was the highlight of events celebrating a latter-day part of Mohawk heritage — the Deseronto landings of refugee Indians from the American Revolution.

"We Indians, who are the first Canadians, have many things to be proud of . . even though we cannot look on the Centennial Year as our white friends do," said Mr. Moses.

"I think the longer we've been here, the prouder we should be of our heritage."

His audience was a mixed group of Indians and whites, ending the day's events with a luncheon at the council house on Tyendinaga reserve.

Earlier Sunday they had been participants or observers at re-enactment of the landings on the shores of the Bay of Quinte at Deseronto in 1784.

The landings and the reserve land grant were a significant part of modern Mohawk heritage — symbolic of the Indian's contribution to the white man's nation-building, Mr. Moses intimated.

"Because of noble service to the British people, these lands were given to them, not simply as a gift, but for services rendered — flesh and blood spilt to help make Canada what it is today."

"Our people," emphasized Mr. Moses, "had some small part in helping establish country that's been carrying on country that's been carrying now for 100 years."

In later years Indians have demonstrated "that their hearts are in the same place in defence of Canada," he said.

"I'm hoping that we will use this centennial year as a starting point to do more for ourselves than we have ever done in the past," added Mr. Moses.

He boosted self-government among Indians, but warned of clashing attitudes between Indians and whites.

Too often, the white man thought of the reserve as a world apart — particularly a poverty-stricken one.

This could also be the result of Indian propaganda, he admitted.

"It may be that the Indian-Eskimo Association may have been emphasizing that aspect too much and the average person has come to believe the majority of Indian people are poverty stricken," said Mr. Moses. "That's not true."

Tyendinaga Chief John Brant stressed the need for Indians and whites to mix together for community progress.

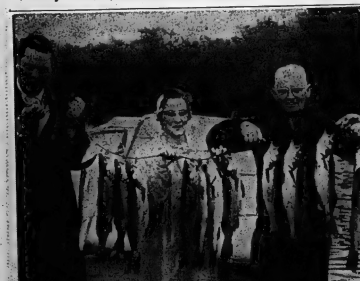
"We of the reserve are very willing for integration," he said. "With a little co-operation we can integrate quite a bit and get along fine."

However, while the Indian had certain privileges on the reserve, the reserve itself was only part of a complicated world.

"We have to change our way of life to a certain extent but yet remember our heritage," said the chief.

Earlier, the chief led a group of Mohawks in canoes onto the Bay of Quinte to symbolically re-enact the 1784 landings.

With him he carried the silver ceremonial service, presented the Mohawks by Queen Anne.



The silver pieces were then laid on an upturned canoe for a thanksgiving service at the cairn, marking the site of the landing.

The service, conducted in both English and Mohawk, is an annual rendition, dating from 1784 when the Indians, evicted from their grounds in the Mohawk Valley, gave thanks for a safe deliverance after fleeing to the Bay of Quinte area.

Woman Wins Fish Derby

PICTON (Staff) — The 6th annual Prince Edward fishing derby wound up Monday with a woman taking top place in the big event.

Winner of two of the major prizes was Mrs. Maxine Clarkson of Oxford, Mich., who took top place with the largest pickerel by a contestant residing outside the area. It weighed 8.5 pounds. She also took the largest catch with a total of 59.6 pounds of fish (all pickerel) and caught in West Lake. Her prizes were an outboard motor and fishing tackle.

Winner for the largest pickerel taken by an area resident was Frank Morton of Picton whose pickerel weighed 8.9 pounds. It also was caught in West Lake.

The largest northern pike registered was taken by Orest Obijnyk of Toronto who landed a beauty just under 10 pounds. It was taken in Pleasant Bay.

Despite nasty weather the derby had its largest registration of entrants — over 500 — and according to officials more fish were also brought in this year.

Present for the presentations at Hepburn's Marina were Warden of Prince Edward County, Robert Boyce; Bernard Hepburn, Reeve of Picton, who represented the mayor who was out of town; Donald Stanton, president of the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce and George Shipman, president of the Quinte Isle Tourist Association.

Fireworks Display Enjoyed

PICTON (Staff) — One of the largest crowds ever, attended last night's annual fireworks display at Neil McMaster's (near Mountain View Cheese Factory) on Highway 14. This yearly event has always drawn large crowds, in spite of a cold evening everyone seemed to enjoy themselves. Games and races were held, a square dance, music by the oldtimer's band and free hot dogs, drinks and novelties for the children. O.P.P. had traffic under control at the entrance to the property and cars were lined up, at one time, for a mile in either direction.

The fireworks display, as usual, was magnificent and the whole cost of the show is borne by Mr. McMasters who appears to enjoy seeing the kiddies having a good time. Clowns, music and the band provided a wonderful evening of entertainment for the throngs of people who attended.

Cut Ribbon to Officially Open New Athol Central School

PICTON (Staff — The official opening of Athol Township's new Central school took place Saturday evening with a packed auditorium in attendance. Guest speaker for the evening was Joseph G. Demera, B.A.; B.Paed. Principal of the Ontario School for the Deaf in Belleville.

Mr. Demera congratulated the school board, teachers and students on the new school. "I'm sure," he said, "that it must have taken much wisdom, time and hard work on the part of all." Mr. Demera reminisced on the past days of the country school house and the advantages of the new system which enabled rural areas to attract better teachers and more teachers. "A school such as this," he added, "provides a lot of pulling power for good teachers. Teachers too can contribute their individual specialties to all of the students in the school providing more effective teaching and better opportunities for the students."

Mr. Demera stressed the part of parents in education stating that many of the ideas children have of school and education are formulated by the parents even before they arrive at school age. He urged the parents to provide a stimulating influence on their children towards education.

Chairman of the Athol Township Area school board, Malcolm Dulmage ably acted as master of ceremonies for the occasion. Also present for the official ceremonies were Warden of Prince Edward County, Robert Boyce of Wellington; Norris Whitney M.P.P., Prince Edward — Lennox; and Public School Inspector, Hector Knight.

Presentation of the key for the new school was passed from Mr. H. Murray of Murray Construction Company to Mr. H. E. Trybora, who represented the firm of Architects. The key was then, in turn, passed to the chairman of the school board, Malcolm Dulmage and then to the Principal of the new school Mrs. Dorothy Eveleigh. Officiating at the ribbon cutting ceremony were Col. Sherman Young and Dr. H. Walmsley. Plaques and trophies were also presented to the school and the dedication was conducted by Rev. E. V. C. Lewis of Picton.

Calorie Count Is Tricky Business

Dear Dr. Molner: I read in your column that to gain one pound a person has to eat 3,500 calories more a day.

For forty ages (26) and weight I'm supposed to eat 1,900 calories a day to maintain my weight, but if I eat that much I gain a pound. I have to stay at 800 to 700 calories a day not to gain.

According to you I have to eat 1,400 calories a day to gain a pound. How come? — Mrs. M. L.

My first fib's show that I ever used that figure, besides which I've pointed out repeatedly that people aren't all the same in the way they handle their calories. Some naturally lean people require 3,000 calories a day to maintain weight. They use up a lot of calories. My others, who do not use up the calories in content activity, tension and metabolism, would take on weight eating that much.

Staying on 800 to 700 calories a day is mighty difficult, and being of a suspicious nature, I ask people to be ultra-sure of themselves. Do they count the cream and sugar in the coffee they drink? Take allowance to the property and cars were lined up, at one time, for a mile in either direction.

The fireworks display, as usual, was magnificent and the whole cost of the show is borne by Mr. McMasters who appears to enjoy seeing the kiddies having a good time. Clowns, music and the band provided a wonderful evening of entertainment for the throngs of people who attended.

Dear Dr. Molner: Do two people really have even a moderately accurate idea of how many calories they consume.

Calories count — but counting calories isn't an effective way for most people to reduce, I've found, because they don't know how to count them correctly — and can't unless they weigh everything they eat.

People who depend on counting calories usually wind up by deceiving themselves, although they can't deceive their bodies. The one sure way to control weight is to develop a habit of eating which is sufficient to maintain your weight.

Then you can reduce the integration may bring out vinegar odor.

Dear Dr. Molner: When a bottle of aspirin smells like vinegar, does that mean the aspirin is harmful? — Mrs. F. P.

Aspirin is acetyl-salicylic acid, and that "acetyl" part comes from acetic acid. Vinegar is dilute acetic acid. Therefore a vinegar odor can be noted in some breaks. The difference depends on the kind of binder used to make the aspirin powder into pill form. Many are virtually odorless.

However, as aspirin absorbs moisture over a long period, and the tablets disintegrate, they lose their value. This dishighballs harm a person if taken before dinner in the evening? — L. M. S.

Two highballs may merely relax one person, but make another person act silly. Two highballs can affect judgment, driving ability, balance. And "two highballs" can mean two mild drinks or two stiff ones. Hence it depends on how you

Brown Feels Press Attacks After Foreign Policy Gaffes

LONDON (CP) — George Brown appears to have been thrust into the role of King Midas in reverse—everything he touches turns to ash.

The ebullient foreign secretary, frequently lampooned by political cartoonists, now is the subject of a sharp British press attack amid Britain's ebbing world power and prestige.

Even the mass - circulation, Labor-supporting Sunday Mirror has joined in, its annoyance over his previous gaffes raised to front-page anger with an editorial accusing Brown of a "big mistake" in suddenly postponing his Soviet trip just minutes before his scheduled take-off last Friday.

Brown said he postponed the trip because of the Middle East crisis. He didn't want to lose touch with home base.

But British newspapers still are puzzled. Wouldn't it be better for him to be in Moscow where he could personally try to persuade Soviet leaders to lend a hand in preventing an Arab-Israeli war? The Sunday Mirror put it more bluntly:

"Is there really anything which Mr. Brown could do by remaining in London about the inflammatory situation between Egypt and Israel—or the row with China — that Mr. Wilson and other ministers could not do as well in his absence?"

More blunt is the headline in the Tory-supporting Sunday telegraph: "Can we afford George 'Brown?"

Brown had a great deal of personal support among the general British public which enjoyed stories of his convention-breaking antics, says Telegraph writer Peregrine Worsthorne. But the foreign secretary was dealing with shrewd diplomats abroad. They didn't enjoy buffoonery, his clowning and crude jokes. He should be shifted to some other cabinet post.

The cartoonists are having a field day with Brown's eccentricities. The government holds an important white-tie dinner; Brown turns up in black tie or lounge suit. The full dignity of the Royal Family is on display at a major Buckingham Palace reception and Brown is reported affectionately flirting and even hugging Prince Margaret.

Even the sympathetic Guardian has moved into the attack. With Brown having failed to turn up in Moscow, The Guardian cartoon shows him as a fully armed, world-minded soldier busily addressing Premier Kosygin over a walkie - talkie while patrolling an empty desert.

The attacks are increasing at a time when fate appears unkind to Britain's foreign policy. Brown is often described as the man who persuaded Prime Minister Wilson to hurry his bid for entry into the European Common Market. That bubbly momentum has been virtually crushed by President de Gaulle's cold response.

Brown pleaded with Egyptian President Abdel Gamal Nasser to call off his support of guerrilla attacks in Aden. The attacks increased in intensity. Anti-British demonstrations in China and Hong Kong, along with anti-British pressure in other parts of the world, have brought. The Sunday Telegraph comment that Brown is presiding over foreign policy at a period of unprecedented British weakness and humiliation.

"Wherever you look in the world, you see the country humiliated and attacked," added Quintin Hogg, Tory frontbencher in the Commons, in speech last week.

While Brown can undoubtedly still claim support from a mass of Socialists, many a left-winger also is looking for his scalp because of his Common Market drive.

Strongly opposed to any British tie-up with the European community, the left-wing Tribune has called for Brown's resignation because he was the prime instigator of the government's European policy.

Many opposed to the Common Market maintain Britain's entry into the economic community would put her under the thumb of de Gaulle; that Britain would become a "Little Europeland" abdicating her world role by crawling into a blanket of European protection.

Brown denies this. He has told the House of Commons as well as reporters that Common Market membership would not change Britain's relations with the United States. There would be no question of exchanging the Atlantic for the English Channel. There would be no question of withdrawing from a world role, though the nature of that role would have to be constantly assessed in the light of available funds and political aspirations.

Brown has made clear that on the Vietnam war, Britain still firmly supports the U.S. All kinds of British attempts had been launched to end hostilities but they failed because, says Brown, Hanoi simply refused to come to the negotiating table. In other words, the fault was in North Vietnam and nowhere else.

The British policy of continuing to link itself up with the U.S while attempting to open the European door, is likely to continue and undoubtedly will increase as Britain tries to grapple with the rush of world events that seem beyond her power to influence or control.

U.S. Supports Israel, Russia Backs Arabs

BEIRUT, Lebanon (CP) — Large-scale Egyptian land, sea and air operations to block Israeli shipping in the Gulf of Aqaba were reported today as the United States backed Israel and Russia supported the Arabs in the Middle East crisis.

Cairo's semi-official newspaper Al Ahram/ said blockade operations were launched Tuesday on orders of President Nasser. It said mines have been placed in the gulf and Egyptian planes and torpedo boats are patrolling the Red Sea at the mouth of the gulf.

"War with Israel might break out any moment," the paper said in banner headlines above a four-column picture of a big coastal gun it said was trained on the narrow Strait of Tiran, the entrance to the gulf.

Israeli Prime Minister Levi Eshkol renewed his government's pledge to defend the right of Israeli shipping to use the Jewish nation's water route to East Africa and the Far East. He told Parliament that "a fateful hour, not only for Israel, but for the whole world" is at hand.

Maariv, Israel's largest evening paper, said Nasser's threat to close the Straits of Tiran amounted to a declaration of war.

President Johnson made the U.S. position plain in a statement declaring American support for free passage through the Gulf of Aqaba.

Johnson said Egypt's threat to halt all Israeli ships and ships of any other nations carrying strategic cargo was "illegal and potentially disastrous to the cause of peace."

Two hours before Johnson spoke, the Soviet government lined up with the Arab states in a statement warning that aggression in the Middle East "would encounter not only the united strength of the Arab countries, but also resolute resistance on the part of the Soviet Union."

The latest confrontation developed after Israel threatened military reprisal for Arab commando raids from Syria. Syria and Egypt massed their forces on Israel's borders and Israel deployed its troops in response.

Shipping Barred

Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser has barred Israeli shipping from the Gulf of Aqaba and Israel promises to fight if the waterway between its port at Eilat and the Red Sea is blocked. Map shows relationship between the gulf and the Gaza Strip, where troops are massed on both sides of the Israel - Egypt border. (AP Photo)

British Warships Alerted

LONDON (CP)—British warships in the Mediterranean were put on a standby alert today because of the Middle East crisis.

A defence ministry spokesman said all British warships in the area "are being held in readiness against any eventuality."

He said, however, that for the moment no reinforcements were being sent to the Mediterranean from the Home Fleet.

Prime Minister Wilson today told a labor union meeting in Margate that Britain will assert the right of all British shipping to use the Strait of Tiran into the Gulf of Aqaba which is Israel's only outlet to the Red Sea. He indicated action should be taken through the United Nations.

UN Body Meets

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—The UN Security Council was called into emergency session today to consider the threat of war between the Arabs and Israel. But some diplomats at UN headquarters believed the Russians might try to stall off action.

Diplomats suggested that Soviet delegate Nikolai Fedorenko might challenge the right of Nationalist Chinese delegate Liu Chieh, the council president for May, to preside at the meeting on the ground that Communist China is entitled to the Chinese seat on the 15-nation council.

Liu called the council meeting at the request of Canada and Denmark, whose delegates in a joint letter cited "the extremely grave situation in the Middle East, which is threatening international peace and security."

France Wants Big Four Parley

PARIS Reuters — France today suggested a meeting of the Big Four — the United States, Russia, Britain and France — for action to keep the peace in the Middle East.

Informants in Cairo said more than 100,000 Egyptian troops are mobilized in the Sinai Desert, on Israel's southwest frontier, where the 3,400-man UN peace force had patrolled until Thant called it out at Nasser's demand.

At UN headquarters in New York, the Security Council was called into urgent session today to consider the war threat in the Middle East. Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban left Jerusalem by plane for Washington and New York, and foreign ministry officials in Jerusalem said he would probably take part in the opening stages of the council debate.

Canadian Ships Sail For East

OTTAWA (CP)—Three Royal Canadian Navy vessels will sail from Halifax today in the eastern Atlantic "as a precautionary measure" should they be required in the Middle East.

A defence department spokesman said Tuesday night the operational support ship Provider, the destroyer escort Kootenay the destroyer Saguenay were ordered to sea as "part of the contingency plan" for the 800-man Canadian contingent in the United Nations Emergency Force which is being withdrawn from the Gaza Strip.

Israeli Forces Poised

TEL AVIV (CP) — Israel's newly - mobilized military forces were poised for action today after Premier Levi Eshkol warned Tuesday night that any interference with shipping in the Gulf of Aqaba would amount to an act of aggression against his country.

Fire Toll May Be Over 300

BRUSSELS (Reuters) — Belgian police have failed so far to find any sign of arson behind Monday's massive department store fire here in which more than 300 were feared killed.

Asked whether rumored anti-American arson by pro-Chinese Communists was a suspected, Brussels Police Commissioner Andre-Isidore de Cryze said:

"So far there is no positive element entitling us to conclude that a criminal act was involved."

63 Killed During Truce

SAIGON (Reuters) — A 24-hour truce to celebrate Buddha's birthday ended at midnight Tuesday night with a total of 71 incidents — 32 of which involved casualties — the U.S. command reported today.

A spokesman said 13 Americans were killed and 60 were wounded during the truce, while American soldiers killed 51 guerrillas.

He said southern allied troops resumed offensive operations when the truce ended at midnight Tuesday night. A Viet Cong declared 48-hour truce ended seven hours later.

With the resumption of operations today, B-52 bombers swept over South Vietnam three times before dawn, hitting suspected guerrilla positions twice in the Central Highlands and once 12 miles west of Saigon.

Australian Rats Marching South

ADELAIDE (Reuters) — A 30-mile-wide swarm of rats arrowing across the rangelands of central Australia in search of food was said Tuesday to pose a threat to small towns in the path of the rodents.

The rats — common city rats gone wild over the years in the Australian Outback — were reported swarming south along the Birdsville Track-cattle-drive route in a border 50 miles wide and 150 miles deep.

The speed of their advance was three to five miles a day, but could increase to 10 miles daily as they multiplied and became hungrier, ranchers warned.

Australia has experienced rat and mice plagues before but the current swarm was believed the worst in history.

Manning Wins, PCs Elect Six To Become Alberta Opposition

EDMONTON (CP) — Premier Manning's "board of directors" remains in firm control of the corporation. But he will have to contend with a vigorous young minority group of stockholders.

The executive-style approach was one of the premier's favorite weapons in his plea to the Alberta electorate to give the Social Credit government a ninth term in office. And the voters responded Tuesday by presenting Mr. Manning with another handsome majority.

But they also confronted him with a new official Opposition of six young Progressive Conservatives, five of them under 30 and all newcomers to the legislature.

The final standing, compared with results of the last election:

	1967	1963
Social Credit	55	60
Prog. Cons.	6	—
Liberals	3	2
Independent	1	1
Coalition	—	1
NDP	—	1
Total	65	63

Redistribution, adding new seats in Edmonton and Calgary, accounted for the increased membership.

The victory was a personal triumph for the 58-year-old premier, the seventh under his leadership and an unprecedented ninth mandate for a party that has held office continuously since it came to power under the late William Aberhart in 1935.

But much glory belonged to 38-year-old Peter Lougheed, a Calgary lawyer who brought the Conservatives back from the political wilderness in two years as their leader.

Angry Farmers Gather in Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — Thousands of angry farmers from Quebec, Ontario and the Maritimes converge on Parliament Hill today in an ominous atmosphere.

Leaders of the protest demonstration have accused the government of trying to muzzle them. They warned Tuesday night that the big crowd could get difficult to control if the authorities persisted in their veto of a two-hour mass meeting on the Hill.

An unprecedented turnout ranging from 10,000 to 20,000 farmers was predicted. The marchers are demanding quick government action to boost net farm income.

All-man delegation is to submit a brief to Prime Minister Pearson and several cabinet ministers in the Parliament Buildings at 11:45 a.m.

Officials of the three main farm organizations in Quebec and Ontario, working closely together for the first time, urged their members to stage an orderly march and stay out of the Parliament Buildings.

His son, Mark, 19, said that when the craft took off his father received burns on his chest. The burns resemble a pattern, similar to a checker board. "One square has a number of dots in it while the next one is bare," the son said.

The father said he saw a door open on the craft, emiting a brilliant violet color. There were noises of air hissing and what sounded like human voices.

When the object took off it disappeared on the horizon within a minute.

"I examined the spot where the craft had settled down and I couldn't see any prints that might have been left by legs of any kind. All I saw was a bare spot, circular" in shape with all the leaves and grass removed by the heat, I presume."

"I Still Feel Sour Smell From Inside Me" Says Man Who Met Flying Saucers

WINNIPEG (CP) — Steve Michelak, a 50-year-old mechanic, insisted Tuesday he saw two strange objects drop from the sky and that he can "still feel a sort of foul smell coming from inside me" when he recalls the incident.

Mr. Michalak claims he saw the objects last Saturday near Falcon Lake, a resort area 75 miles east of here. One of them landed.

"I've lost 12 pounds in the last two days and I've been laughed at but I thought it was my duty to report what I had seen,' he said at his home.

The objects were described as being about 35 feet long, eight feet high with a three-foot protrusion on top. While they bore a surface resemblance to stainless steel, they gave off a glaring red light.

No Fatalities In OPP Area Over Holiday

District Ontario Provincial Police highway patrol officers heaved a sigh of relief yesterday with the end of a hectic three-day period of Victoria Day weekend traffic.

And with no fatalities and no serious accidents in the district, police officers had cause for the relief.

District 9 inspector A. McDougall said today there was not a single fatality in the four County districts of Hastings, Prince Edward, Lennox and Addington and Frontenac. Neither were there any serious accidents.

"We appreciate a good judgment and co-operation of drivers over the holiday", he said.

Manslaughter Charge Discharged

Dr. Robert A. Wyatt, charged with manslaughter in the death by abortion of Gertrude Tracey, a nurses' assistant, was discharged yesterday for lack of sufficient evidence.

Magistrate T. V. Wills said, "there is no adequate corroboration for the charge of manslaughter. The defendant will be discharged, not dismissed. There is a difference."

Moira School Students Donate $2,027 to Hospital

City and district teenagers came through today with the first citizen donation to Belleville General Hospital's construction project.

The big occasion was marked by a cheque — big in size and value — presented by the students of Moira Secondary School.

The cheque — four feet long — is for $2,027 and was presented to hospital administrators at a special ceremony in the school today.

It will be used to furnish two rooms set aside for teenagers in the hospital's new seven-storey addition, now nearing completion.

"It's a terrific effort — a fine example of what any people can do," enthused hospital administrator Philip Rickard.

The donation, a centennial project of Moira's student council was raised through pennies donated daily by students, subscriptions from teachers and school clubs and special events.

The daily penny-per-pupil project alone raised $1,000 in the final drive.

The only other contribution to the project to date came from within the hospital organization complex — its women's auxiliary.

"We don't regard this as merely a financial donation, but of greater importance is our attempt to make this city a better place in which to live," said student council president Harold Pascoe, who presented the cheque along with treasurer Linda Jones.

"It would be quite rewarding to us if other organizations realized this end and began similar projects of their own."

Other organizations now are working toward similar ends, Mr. Rickard revealed.

However, the task of furnishing the new project is of king-size proportions.

"There are seven storeys to be filled with 60 rooms on each floor," mused Mr. Rickard as he later viewed the cheque in his office — under the shadow of the new wing.

Others present at the school ceremony today included hospital board chairman Harleigh Hamilton, vice-chairman Rt. Rev. J. P. Sullivan, and property chairman John Buchan.

Hairdressers Seek Bylaw to Govern Trade

The Ontario Hairdressers' Association is to seek a city bylaw governing the trade in Belleville.

Robert Ayers, OHA executive director, said after an association meeting in Belleville last night that civic regulations would be sought to protect the public and members of the trade operating in the city.

During last night's meeting at the YMCA, Mr. Ayers claimed "every fly hairdressing salons not in the association carry insurance for client protection because of high rates".

During the meeting members were brought up to date on new trade aids and facilities and provincial regulations now in force.

Elected to head the Belleville OHA branch were James Grills, president; Peggy Ross, vice-president and Frank Mastervick, secretary - treasurer.

Attitude Counts With Bees

NELSON, B.C. (CP) — Businessman Ivan E. Johnson is a beemaster bugged by bumbling would-be beekeepers.

"A man's attitude toward his bees matters a great deal," said Mr. Lewis, a beekeeper for more than 30 years in the Nelson area.

He's so concerned about the relationship between man and bee his bees that he has decided to offer an adult education course on beekeeping.

Mr. Lewis said he took his beemaster's examinations from Mr. E. Schaerer of Slocan City, whom he described as a leading British Columbia authority on the subject.

He said he is convinced that a man's attitude toward his bees can have a great deal to do with his success or failure in a beekeeping venture, and that Mr. Schaerer's success was due in large measure to his communication with the little furry insects.

Rough, Hard Canoe Trip Enjoyed by 'Y' Members

The homage youth is not going soft and 16 Belleville area youngsters have proved it last Friday. The boys left the Belleville YMCA and headed for Buckhorn in the Kawartha Region taking with them canoes and camping equipment.

On Saturday they started paddling from Catchacoma on Catchacoma Lake into the wilderness of the Kawartha Forest. They entered Gold Lake and then Gold Lake before portaging to Cox Lake where they spent the night.

The boys took Murray Beyvon and Ron Dann, teachers at Quinte Secondary School and Glen Manthorne, Boys' and Men's Program Director at the "Y" along as leaders. They invited Bill Somas and Monte Sites as special guests of the expedition. The latter two are senior students at Trent School of Forestry.

On Sunday the adventurers entered Loucks Lake, Compost Lake, Cherry Lake and Triangle Lake. They spent another cold night. On Monday they returned to Catchacoma, finishing their trek uneventful with the forces of nature.

The canoe trip consisted of 25 miles of paddling, some one-mile portages and six long portages. Along the way the group managed to catch a few fish.

ANIMALS RAISE CASH

WINNIPEG (CP) — Assiniboine Park Zoo earned $13,762 last year by selling animals to foreign zoos. The largest order was from Berlin for several birds, a porcupine and 16 Richardson's ground squirrels, and two black bears sent to Lisbon. Most of the sales were in barter for animals Winnipeg may need in the future.

Soon Air Mattress May Be Just Air

LONDON (AP)—Turn on a heaterful of air, lie atop it and coolly go to sleep without bed or mattress. . . .

Such a way of sleeping is under study, says Leslie Julius, director of a design firm.

In a speech to the Royal Society of Arts he pictured a household in the air half the time, except when in motion.

"Control of human posture in bed consisting of air jets is being considered," he said. "The imagination boggles at the thought, but I, too, hold that it will be possible by the use of super-conductivity and electro-magnetic fields built into clothing to suspend humans without an upholding frame—thus giving them complete freedom to move their limbs or manoeuvre themselves as they feel fit without regard to weight.

"Will we then need chairs or cotsies?"

All this arises, he said, from strides in technology that envisage plastic bubble cities and underwater communities.

"This means that furniture as we know it now will largely disappear," Julius said.

Ameliasburg Plans For Park Opening

Ameliasburg's Centennial Committee met Monday evening to make further plans for the formal opening of the township's centennial park June 24. A large parade, a display of antiques, contests, playground equipment, canteen and swimming are planned. Special invitations will be sent to older residents of the township. Everyone having antiques for display or for the parade is asked to contact Bill Nightingale.

Riots Hit Hong Kong

Hong Kong, a small sore spot on the great underbelly of China, has been hit by riots among its Chinese population, apparently inspired by Communist China. The riots have raged through the Kowloon district, demonstrators chanting anti-British slogans and plastering walls with Communists posters. Hong Kong has been a British crown colony for more than 100 years, but strategists feel it could easily be overrun by the Chinese, who control major water supplies. However, Hong Kong is also a major outlet for Chinese trade with the free world.

Amalgamation of High School Areas Turned Down by Council

Belleville city council by a close six to five vote yesterday turned down the proposed amalgamation of the Centre Hastings Secondary School Area, and the Stirling-Rawdon Secondary School Area with the Bay of Quinte High School District.

The amalgamation, recommended by the Ontario Department of Education and already approved by Hastings county council, requires approval from the city of Belleville and the county of Prince Edward to become official.

Following yesterday's surprise vote, Mayor J. R. Ellis said he would seek to have the matter re-introduced into council.

Mr. Roy Dakauge, secretary of the Bay of Quinte District High School Board, said that the action of city council would rule out amalgamation of the school districts for this year.

He said that all three municipal bodies in the county of Hastings, Prince Edward County, and the city of Belleville had to approve before the amalgamation could proceed.

The responsibility for amalgamation this year was for two members of city council to change their mind and thus allow the matter to be re-introduced. This would have to be done before June 30.

The proposed amalgamation of the two high school areas in Centre Hastings with the Bay of Quinte district, has been the subject of much discussion in the past few months.

The Department of Education officials claim the moves would improve educational facilities for all three areas, but council wanted more assurance that the move would not cost the city picking up the tab for increased high school costs.

Alderman Donald Joss took the lead in the attack against the proposed amalgamation.

He agreed that one of the greatest challenges of people in public life was to bring quality of educational opportunity to all children.

But it was equally a necessity and a challenge to carry out the program in a practical and workable manner. He claimed the proposal before council did not do this.

He said the proposal was to integrate a high school area with an enrolment of about 4,000 students with an assessment of $137,000,000, with an area that has about 1,000 students and assessment of $9,000,000.

"We are asked to increase the school population by 25 per cent but increase the tax base by only seven per cent," he said.

He said it was easy to figure out that the move would mean increased taxes for the present Quinte District High School Area.

"The provincial government says it will increase grants for the first three years and then decrease them by one third for the following three years, but what they haven't told us is that there will be substantial debts on the Stirling, Madoc and Marmora high schools which must be repaid and will decrease the said grants."

"Neither," he said, "had the government told us that transportation costs would be increased through students being bussed to Belleville."

The alderman said achievement of educational opportunities for all students was a provincial responsibility.

"If the minister of education wishes to give credit for his new scheme and his new program, he must also take the responsibility of collecting the money to accomplish his goals," he said.

In reply Mayor Jack Ellis said the most of Alderman Joss' statements with respect to the proposed school amalgamation were incorrect.

He said that Mr. Joss' assessment figures were incorrect — the department used adjusted assessment figures, not figures for municipal taxation.

The mayor also discounted Alderman Joss' fears with respect to debentures debts on schools at Stirling, Madoc and Marmora. He said that costs of the above buildings were 85 per cent subsidized, so the share of the municipalities was small.

In any event the municipal Grey had agreed to accept the buildings and debentures if the high school board finds they are not necessary.

Alderman Jack Allin wondered whether the amalgamation would accelerate building requirements at Belleville. If this was the case Belleville would have to lease the debentures, he said.

Alderman Douglas Boyle said there was a whole new concept in education for the future and with it a need to re-educate the educators. Educational TV was coming and with it enormous costs. The alderman said he favored the amalgamation.

Alderman Dr. J. Russell Scott wondered if because of the great differences in assessment in the areas concerned, Belleville citizens might be shortchanged if the amalgamation went through.

Mayor Ellis replied that grants were based partly on assessment and partly on costs. He said the government had assured there would be no increase in costs for three years as a result of the amalgamation.

Alderman Enos David said he was 100 per cent for equal educational opportunity but disliked any increased costs should come from the provincial government, not from the citizens of Belleville.

"I would like assurance that the city taxpayer is protected from further tax escalation," he said. "They can't stand much more."

Alderman T. A. Carruthers and Kenneth Soden moved that the matter be tabled for two weeks to allow for more information but the motion was defeated.

Alderman Don Williams urged the amalgamation be approved immediately.

"If we don't pass the bylaw today education will suffer. If it is going to be passed let us pass it now, not when it is forced on us," he pleaded.

Mayor Ellis agreed that the provincial government should hear a greater share of education costs and said at a luncheon of the Mayors and Reeves Association resolutions committee he would later this year present a brief to the provincial cabinet asking that the government assume 50 per cent of the cost of education.

In reference to the proposed amalgamation of the three high school districts, the mayor said city children would also stand to benefit.

He said one of the first possibilities following amalgamation would be the construction of a special trades building — "something which we do not have now."

Supporting the motion for amalgamation were Mayor Ellis and Aldermen Boyle, Deacon, Scott and Williams. Opposing were Aldermen Allin, Carruthers, David, Joss, Keegan and Soden.

Bylaw to Implement Bill 105 Given Approval by Council

The Ontario government Bill 105 providing for municipal and school tax credits for elderly people came in for sharp criticism in city council yesterday but the majority feeling was that Belleville should go along.

A motion presented by Mayor Jack Ellis calling for preparation of a bylaw in accordance with Bill 105 was passed despite passionate pleas from at least two aldermen that it be turned down.

Alderman Arthur Keegan led the attack against the mayor's recommendation and Bill 105 claiming that the proposed tax credits for elderly people merely meant passing debts on to their children.

"The whole scheme stinks", he said. "I am sorry to see it on the council agenda."

Alderman Keegan said the bill discriminated against elderly people who did not own their own homes. "Such people," he said, "would see no relief in the form of reduced rents".

Mayor Jack Ellis said Bill 105 fell short of his own proposal of last year which called rebate of school taxes to elderly people, but said he had no quarrel with the government's proposals that the proposed tax credits were to be paid back.

He said proposed rents for the new senior citizens housing in Belleville was not keeping elderly people away. He said there were more than double the number of applications than there was space available.

But Alderman Donald Joss said Bill 105 was so insidious that the government doesn't even dare give it a name.

"The principal that we shall tax the people to the urge of poverty and then mortgage their property so they can pay taxes is not a new one, but as applied in this case it is more subtle than usual," he said.

Mr. Joss said that under the present system of taxation is obvious to all but a few that the cost of education must be a provincial responsibility and not be paid for by property taxes.

Under the present system elderly people and those on fixed incomes in many cases were being forced to sell their homes because they cannot meet taxes.

Now the government says "don't sell your homes — give them to the provincial government instead."

The alderman said he opposed the legislation, "I shall not be a party to such a gigantic swindle."

But Alderman Carruthers could see nothing wrong with the legislation. "The government is making the legislation available, it is not holding a gun to our heads."

Alderman Jack Allin termed the councillors' opposition to the legislation as simply politics.

"I deplore these political speeches," he said.

Council Approves Mill Rate

By a vote of 10-1 city council yesterday approved the 1967 tax rate set unofficially at a special budget meeting last Thursday.

The approved tax rate is 36 mills residential and 40.3 mills commercial — up approximately eight per cent from that of last year.

Alderman Enos David was the lone dissenter opposing this year's mill-rate increase.

He referred to municipal costs with respect hospital expansion, new schools, street and lighting reconstruction and other services and said he was greatly concerned about tax escalation.

He agreed that nothing could be done about the two mill increase in high school costs this year, or about capital debt charges, but claimed at least half a mill could have been dropped from the public works estimates.

Mayor Jack Ellis, noted the estimates had been gone over carefully last week and that council had accepted only an increase of one tenth of a mill over the budget requirements by the city manager.

The mayor re - iterated his statement of last week that increased wages made up for more than half of the tax increase in the general rate.

He said it was a credit to council that it had been able to hold the tax increase to the figure approved.

The big new deal was struck at a meeting of negotiators in session in Montreal between the company and officers of the United Cement Lime and Gypsum Workers International.

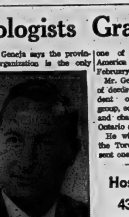
ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Larry Gushue, manager of the city tourist commission, says St. John's is losing business because of its lack of attractions. He says the city has only a third of the national average number of tourists for communities its size and blamed lack of development of local historic sites.

275 Technologists Graduate

More than 275 technologists will receive certification from the Association of Certified Survey Technicians and Technologists of Ontario at a June meeting in Toronto.

According to Steve Geneja, president of the group, the annual increase in qualified surveyors is not meeting the demand. The addition of these technologists will relieve the land surveyor from a portion of his detail work and help remedy the situation.



"Locally it takes from one to twelve months to have a survey completed. Through the up-grading of the technologist this time lag can be shortened."

"The aim of the association is to provide more and better trained technicians and technologists for the surveyor."

Mr. Geneja says the provincial organization is the only one of its kind in North America and was formed in February of this year.

Mr. Geneja, assistant registrar of deeds in Belleville, is president of the technologists group, editor of their magazine, and chairman of the eastern Ontario district.

He will act as chairman at the Toronto meeting and present one of the lectures.

Sidewalk Sales Approved

A three-day period each year for sidewalk sales by city merchants was approved yesterday by city council.

A year ago downtown merchants planned a sidewalk sale as a summer promotion but at the last minute it was discovered that such a sale was prohibited under a city bylaw.

Yesterday Mayor J. R. Ellis brought in a recommendation to amend the bylaw to allow sidewalk sales on the last three days of the third week in July.

Some councillor felt the bylaw should spell out how much of the sidewalk could be taken up by merchandize.

But Alderman Enos David pointed out merchants were not out to antagonize shoppers.

Under the bylaw sidewalk sales will be permissable anywhere in the city.

UN Force

UN Secretary-General U Thant's decision to withdraw the United Nations force from the Gaza Strip, at the behest of Egypt's President Nasser, says little for the authority of the world body.

For years the United Nations carried some weight at least. The troops sent to the Middle East to keep the peace between the Arab states and Israel have been there since 1956.

Since then other United Nations peace-keeping forces have served in the Congo and Cyprus. Now only the Cypriot force remains, ensuring there is no further outbreak of violence between Greeks and Turks in the Mediterranean island.

The UN force in the Gaza Strip actually will not pull out immediately. According to Egyptian sources, however, the troops will leave the country within a month.

This offers some hope, perhaps, that a clash between the Arab states and Israel will not be imminent. The UN presence, for even a limited period at this stage could deter aggression by either Egypt or Israel.

It is a moot point, however, whether any future decision of the United Nations will carry any authority. For instance, what will become of the recent General Assembly vote to set up a council of 11 member states to take over the administration of South-West Africa from South Africa and lead it to independence, if possible, by June next year?

If South Africa chooses to ignore the decision — and it likely will — is there anything the United Nations can do about it? Not much, if it buckles down as easily as it has done before Egypt's Nasser.

Hunger in India

The spring and summer months will be a desperate time for the states of Bihar and Uttar Pradesh, in India.

Thousands in this vast dust-bowl of Northeastern India are facing almost certain death by starvation. In Bihar, more than half the 52 million population live on four to six ounces of food a day and many supplement this with roots and bark.

From now until the monsoons bring rain in July and August, some 40 million people will need emergency supplies of food if they are to survive.

To help alleviate the situation CARE of Canada has established an emergency relief fund, to which it invites contributions. These should be sent to CARE of Canada, 1000 Yonge Street, Toronto 5, Ontario.

The Indian CARE team has been working in the area since October, at the request of the Government of India. Priority is being given to the needs of nursing and pregnant women, and to children under 14.

Meals for the drought victims are cooked and served each day at school sites, from commodities donated by the Canadian, United States and other governments. Funds are used for shipping of the food to India and for the purchase of supplementary foods.

The Indian central and state governments provide warehouse facilities, transportation within India, cooks and cooking fuel.

CARE'S special famine relief work is in addition to the organization's regular program in India. The latter undertaking involves feeding 8,500,000 schoolchildren in 12 states a warm meal every day.

Health Problem

In this world there have always been problems and taboos and "moments of truth" that people have had to face. But human nature all too often causes people to evade serious issues on the false premise that the problem may disappear of its own volition.

Unfortunately this is not always the case, as in the case of certain diseases. Venereal disease, which doctors say is a serious health problem in Canada, is in this category. It is on the increase despite the old taboos.

In face of this threat, Dr. Gordon Martin, special ist in neurology at the McGregor Clinic in Hamilton, is advocating legislation that would require applicants for marriage licences to prove they are free from venereal disease.

Urging the adoption of every possible measure to cure the disease, Dr. Martin told his audience: "If you've ever seen the effects of VD and, more important, how new-born children are affected by it you'd understand why."

Significantly, the clinic director places much of the responsibility for the decline in moral behavior on adults. Observing that one of the best preventives of the disease is education, Dr. Martin said: "How can you expect children to be moral if their parents aren't?

"It seems to me that we keep on talking about morals changing at the teenage level when in fact, they aren't really. They're changing at the adult level."

Company of Young ("Beat") Canadians Is on the Way Out

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Don't look now, but that gurgling sound you could be hearing just might be the Company of Young Canadians going down for the third time in the river of its own self-made ruin.

For the sorely-embarrassed Government desperately is finding around for a quiet way to sink the kooky Company.

Hoping you may be sure, that they're looking, so far, red-faced Administration can pretend that this queer corporation of caper-cutters never really existed and the whole thing was just a bad dream.

But it isn't going to be easy to scuttle this Company of citizens.

There — and unhappily not in invisible ink — in the Federal Estimates is a little item of $2,445,000 to keep the Company in business.

The Company's budget, inconveniently doubled from last year's $1,200,000 appears in the Privy Council's estimates which even more inconveniently sort of makes the Young Canadians the political wards of Prime Minister Pearson.

Back a half dozen or so "happenings" ago, their dismayed prime ministerial guardian expressed disappointment in the way they were carrying on — and carrying on is just the phrase for it — hoping out loud to the House of Commons that they would mend their manners, remembering that while indeed they were "young," they were also Canadians.

But they weren't listening. They have gone on doing the same sort of things that first made the PM wonder about the wisdom of adopting them into his administrative family and giving $1,200,000 of the taxpayers' trotsis to put their company in business — monkey business, as it so often has turned out.

Remembering, if you can stand the thought, that they've been given another $2,445,000, what did they do with that starting $1,200,000 that the RCMP raided Ottawa headquarters to discover?

Well, there is the Company's initial hi-jinks are scarcely new any more, to be brief, such things as:

1. Gave $4,000 of the taxpayers' money to the Student Union for Peace Action, a college peacenik "protest" group that staged a sit-down at the home of a key NATO base, picnics at the American Embassy doors here, and about a note against new UN Ambassador Adlai Stevenson, of all un-warlike people. (The Centennial Commission earlier had refused a grant to SUPA what is termed this "beatnik brand of political action.")

2. Reaped anti-American pro-Communist "protests" on the scene of the American Consulate in Toronto.

3. Circulated a Company "newsletter" written with some four-letter words from the lavatory wall lexicon.

4. Distributed another "newsletter" charging that the Canadian political status quo was the "impalement-for" of youth, hopefully to be replaced by new "power structures."

The Prime Minister didn't like it a bit, and said so when asked in Parliament what was going on in the Company's multi-colored - formed.

But that was only Chapter One in the Company's Continuing Chronicle of Calamity.

So what has the Company been doing since the Prime Minister more in sorrow than in anger lamented that this wasn't the sort of thing expected of it when it emerged, shining bright out of a professional poverty-fighter's do-gooding dream?

Item: The RCMP raided a booze-up at Inuvik, the Arctic town on the Mackenzie River delta. Present was a Company Canadian of the Company for giving liquor to an under-age Eskimo girl. There was a fine and then and a successful appeal based on the circumstance that the girl, the age of an Eskimo girl simply by looking at her? Now the Crown is appealing, but meanwhile the Company's representative has left town by special invitation of the Inuvik Indian-Eskimo Association.

But that was only Chapter One in the Company's Continuing Chronicle of Calamity.

So what has the Company been doing since the Prime Minister more in sorrow than in anger lamented that this wasn't the sort of thing expected of it when it emerged, shining bright out of a professional poverty-fighter's do-gooding dream?

Engineering School Has Industry Links

HALIFAX (CP) — Researchers at the Nova Scotia Technical College are keeping close to industry and the college president says it now is evident that we can contribute to the development of new industries."

Dr. G. W. Holbrooke said he likes to have his students work on real rather than theoretical problems and they are accomplishing this by working hand-in-hand with industry.

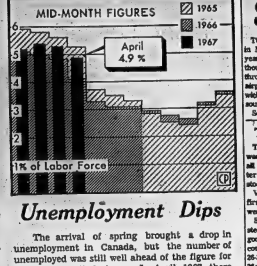
He said in 1966 two companies were formed here to manufacture electrical equipment, both as a result of research and development undertaken by the college.

The college, one of the largest engineering schools in Canada, will graduate about 130 engineers this year and also has a graduate enrolment of about 30.

Dr. Orest Cochkanoff, chairman of the college's research and development committee, said it is against this background of advanced undergraduate and graduate study that the research is carried on.

Herald engineering research is "almost synonomous with industrial research."

Research at the college comes under two broad categories. Sponsored research is carried out with the support of industry and various other bodies, while contract research is made on an agreement with an industry for a specific job.



The college is doing research to lessen the vibration in aircraft and, possible, in automobiles. Another study is being made in new applications for the province's mineral resources.

Research also is being made on ceramics, including their use in electronic components. The study originated when the Royal Canadian Navy became interested in the use of ceramics for submarine detection.

Concrete and timber is being studied to determine the best type of construction for local usage.

Summing up the problems in a research program, Dr. Holbrook said "one of the greatest is to make industry aware of what we are doing and what we can do."

He said the college hopes its programs will help attract engineering and scientific personnel to Nova Scotia industry.

Unemployment Dips

The arrival of spring brought a drop in unemployment in Canada, but the number of unemployed was still well ahead of the figure for the same month last year. In April, 1967, there were 365,000 jobless, or 4.9 per cent of the labor force. That was 35,000 less than in March, 1967, but 69,000 more than in April, 1966. Quebec recorded the biggest April decline — 22,000 unemployed persons found work.

Made in Canada Items Store's Stock in Trade

TORONTO (CP)—In business in Newfoundland for nearly 150 years, Bowring Bros. Ltd. thought travelers passing through Gander's international airport should not be confronted with foreign - made Canadian souvenirs.

So, spurred by patriotism and irritation, the firm opened a gift shop in the new airport building 10 years ago.

Among other things, Bowring decided Canadian items would be made in Canada or not stocked.

"It was against our business instincts to take on this sort of shop," says Frederick Ayre, Bowring's 30-year-old research and development director, describing how the firm got into the gift shop business.

"But to our amazement the store made money. This encouraged us to branch further afield."

Today there are nice such shops, seven in Ontario and Quebec. Bowring plans three more this year.

They are a radical departure from tradition for a firm which became known for its interests in ocean freighting, sealing and insurance.

Bowring began when an Exeter watchmaker, Benjamin Bowring, moved his business to St. John's from England in 1811.

He was soon in the transatlantic freighting business. In time the firm's head office, C. T. Bowring and Co., moved to London, although Bowring Bros. continued in Newfoundland as an autonomous run subsidiary.

Today Bowring sells insurance from much of the world, owns seven ocean-going vessels, is drifting for oil in Alberta, buys timber in Brazil and nets in India.

Its assets are estimated at about $122,000,000 and annual profits at $17,000,000.

Mr. Ayre says the success of the gift shops has started Bowring Bros. thinking of expanding its department stores—it has five in Newfoundland—as the Maritime provinces.

"We're also looking closely at 'Western Canada,'" he says. "You can't operate at the post-meter forever."

The shops lean toward handmade Canadian goods, including articles knitted by the Newfoundland Outport Nursing and Industrial Association, which provides income for fishermen's wives in the island's isolated ports.

Mr. Ayre says it usually takes about a year for a shop to start making money.

Pulp Mills Shut Down

VANCOUVER (CP)— Further curtailment of work in B.C. pulp mills loomed Tuesday following the weighed announcement that two mills will close down because of an oversupply of market pulp.

Crown Zellerbach Canada Ltd. is studying the possibility of curtailment in the near future at its wood fibre mill, President G. S. Bowell said.

A spokesman for MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. said it is possible the company will close down operations at the Harmac and Port Alberni mills on Vancouver Island.

Canadian Forest Products Ltd. will close its mill at Port Mellon for two weeks starting June 30, senior vice - president L. L. G. Bentley announced Friday.

B.C. Forest Products Ltd. also announced it has curtailed production by 10 per cent since April.

Russia and China Pass U.S. in Fishing Efforts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has dropped behind both the Soviet Union and China in a purely non-military race—commercial fishing.

Peru and Japan lead them all in fishing while Norway is pressing the United States for fifth place, Canada ranks eighth.

A committee of the U.S. National Academy of Sciences reporting that Russia had wrested third place from the United States, said Russia's fishery scientists have uncovered good fishing grounds in international waters of the Pacific, Atlantic and Antarctic and Russian fishermen are making fine hauls of fish which usually not hunted by Americans off both coasts.

A report said:

"Systematic observations by Russian fishery scientists off Alaska, the Pacific coast of the United States, and New England have brought about the establishment of Russian fisheries in those areas.

"Those fisheries are larger than those of the United States and are mostly on stocks not fished substantially by Americans."

Off the Pacific Coast, the Russians are hauling in Alaska pollock, perch and flounder-types that American fishermen usually don't fish for to any substantial degree in those particular waters.

Off the Atlantic Coast, the Russians are concentrating on hake, whiting and off - shore schools of herring.

The top 10 fishing countries are Peru, Japan, Russia, China, United States, Norway, India, Canada, Spain and Chile—with the latter country just nosing out the United Kingdom.

Canada Growth Leader

LONDON (CP)— Canada led the rest of the Commonwealth by a wide margin in trade growth during 1966, says a report by the Commonwealth secretariat.

The report shows trade within the Commonwealth fell last year for the first time in five years. Value of trade between the Commonwealth and the United States increased, largely as a result of expanded U.S.-Canada commerce.

The 36 - nation association uttered its normal trade pattern by collectively importing more from the United States than from within the Commonwealth itself. The Commonwealth system of tariff preferences is designed to encourage trade among members.

In the Commonwealth as a whole, both exports and imports to and from all parts of the world increased. But there was an unfavorable trade gap between total imports worth $45,879,000,000 and exports of $41,472,000,000.

Canada, with estimated 1966 exports worth $10,461,000,000 and imports of $9,961,000,000, accounted for more than half the total increase in Commonwealth exports and about 40 per cent of the total rise in imports.

Canada's exports increased in value by $1,497,000,000, compared with a rise in total Commonwealth exports of $3,185,000,000. Imports to Canada rose by $1,374,000,000 and total Commonwealth imports by $1,808,000,000.

Inside the Commonwealth, trade declined. Exports fell in value by 2.5 per cent and imports by 2.8 per cent in intra-Commonwealth trade.

For the first time, Commonwealth purchases from the United States—38 per cent of total Commonwealth imports—exceed purchases inside the Commonwealth, which made up 37 per cent of total imports. Five years ago, Commonwealth countries got 31 per cent of total imports from within the Commonwealth and 24 per cent from the United States.

Teen-ager Complains That Father Does Not Care

Dear Doris: This is a letter to fathers. I am a teen - age girl who has a father playing a double role, as my mother is gone. But I feel as though I didn't have a father. He is not selfish, he would give me almost everything. The 1 re thing I lack is his personal attention.

Thats, think hard, you men who do have daughters. How long is it since you really talked with your daughter? If she tells you something that happened to her, do you sit interested? Deep down, she is bringing you into her thoughts. She wants you to care.

My father thinks the world revolves around his precious son. I feel like crying when I am trying to say something that will interest him, and he interrupts and starts talking to my brothers. How would you feel if you worked hard in school (85 percent) and your brother fooled around (76 percent), and then on the day of your report card, your father doesn't say anything to you, but he praises your brother for getting 76 percent? That really hurts inside.

I know now how much I miss my mother. She praised me when I did good, she scolded me when I did wrong, she talked to me when I confided in her. I felt she cared.

My father never praises me, never scolds me, never shows any interest if I talk to him. I feel he doesn't care.

So think, fathers. Show Susie (when she asks you) that you think you know something about algebra even if you weren't a genius when you went to school. No matter how scatterbrained you think your daughter is, show her some interest in her boy friends.

It will pay off, believe me. —Neglected.

Dear Neglected: Well out, Girlie — if you shave Neglected's plight, clip, paste up and display her letter where careless fathers will read it.

DORIS CLARE

Dear Doris: I read in your column about not having the groom's parents' name on the wedding invitation. But please tell me what we could do with this problem.

The groom's parents (that's us) are helping out towards the wedding, while the bride's side are not doing anything. Where should the replies go?

—Mother of the Groom

Dear Mother: To parents of the groom. You are the hosts and need to know who is coming.

This is a different matter from having the groom's parents named either him on television, by way of identification, which is what the other letter was about.

Dear Doris: I am sending this poem as I saw a request for it in your column. Could you pass this on to the lady?

I could not understand anyone wanting it. It gives me the creeps. — Carm. S.

Dear Carm S.: Thank you for troubling to copy out "A Night With a Wolf". Some have said they enjoy it because it made shivers up and down their spines. And read it to the kiddies.

It takes all kinds.

(P.S. I find it delightful.)

Ask Doris for the information you need. If she doesn't know she'll find out from one of her consultants. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.

WHITE FOR SPRING AND SUMMER—Stockings are lengthening into the fashion picture as mini-skirts get shorter. This is the latest in fishnet stockings match the white patent shoes, which are perforated and have the new sling back style. (CP Photo)

Stockings Most Important Accessory with Mini Skirt

NEW YORK (CP)—Fashion accents for spring-into-summer include lots of color and fabric interest. With the mini - skirt even shorter, stockings are likely half the fashion picture. Consequently s t o c k i n g s are probably your most important accessory, with shoes a close second.

Here is the below - the - skirt fashion story:

Newest in texture for stockings is a waffle variation of the fishnet look in a knit all-stretch nylon. White is top color for right now, especially smart with the new crochet baby dresses or with the shock colors of the new African prints.

Other colors include beige, pink, celery, lilac and black. High point in Hanes's leg dreams is the neon colors in crepe legwear, says Leather Industries of America. Heels continue to be low, even for evening.

Color is the single most important factor. The brights are gay — purple, mango yellow, vivid red, mad pink and turquoise, for example. The soft shades are pale, such as rose, palest blue or green, ecru.

White is important and is also combined with either the brights or pales in leathers. Red, white and navy continues to be big.

The square toes cannot be overemphasized, says the National Shoe Institute. The toes may be flattened, softened or chopped off at a slant but must be square. Designers like the look of buckles and they too add to the square effect.

Even heels are squaring off. Says the Footwear Bureau of Canada: The s h a p e s are squarely rounded or roundly square. It also underscores the square - toed influence. "You can't get away from squares," says brown director Beth Hammond.

Color contrasts are interesting. Herbert Levine introduced an amusing new look in a soubise brown patent with two palsy velure inserts on the toe on which appear a decorative 7 and 11. Levine, incidentally, predicts that every will coat boots as the summer shade.

The open look continues important. Sometimes it's the whole mid-section of the shoe. Often, openings include crisscross straps or open lacing.

Two smart_pose by I. Miller are a white patent sling with perforated trim along the shoe edge and ankle straps, and a navy patent round toe with white leather for the edging, sling back straps and heel.

Mesh shoes are also back, in oxfords and even ankle boots. But in direct contrast is the closed pump, returning to popularity, especially in leather tent with stand - up square buckles.

For fabric casuals, J.B. F. Goodrich likes rounded toes, too. While la importance often combined with color, as in a white hopsacking with cocovelveteen trim.

Music Teachers List Officers

The annual meeting of the Belleville Branch, Ontario Registered Music Teachers' Association, was held at the home of Mrs. E. Hobbs, 34 Howard St., May 17. Twelve members heard a report of the highlights of the Peterborough ORMTA convention given by delegate Mrs. E. Boyce.

Mrs. Boyce told of the panel discussion on the topic: We are professionals — can we prove it?, given by four outstanding music teachers. The luncheon speaker was Dr. Tracey, classics professor from Trent University who spoke on the psychology of teaching. He stressed the importance of every child hearing music and asked the teachers to give pupils a sense of achievement whenever possible.

After a tour of Trent University ,the teachers were inspired by a demonstration lecture by Miss Carvalho of Toronto, whose subject was modern music for the junior grades. At the close of the convention, Mrs. F. Goulden of Ottawa, made an earnest plea for all teachers to be present at the Canadian Federation of Music Teachers' Association Convention to be held in Toronto July 3-7. Ontario will be host to every province in Canada.

New officers are: past president, Miss M. Woodruff; president, Mrs. G. H. Rennie; vice-president, Mrs. Helen D. Wall; secretary, Mrs. T. F. Townsend; assistant secretary, Mrs. E. Creamy Custard Filling for Tasty Dessert

By MARY MOORE

Yesterday I gave you the recipe for Choux Paste — the pastry used for making cream puffs, eclairs and bouchees.

I promised to tell you how to make it into a showy delicious dessert called croquembouche. The creamy custard filling below is for c r e a m puffs and eclairs too.

CROQUEMBOUCHE (rough translation) — "to munch or crunch in the mouth" — a spectacular dessert which is a pyramid of tiny cream puffs)

Using Choux Paste recipe given here yesterday shape one-inch mounds on ungreased cookie sheet, two inches apart and bake at 400 deg. Fahr. 20 min. Make 60 mounds by taking one ball from oven and standing it on top of another. Let them stand and collapse at all. Cool on cake racks, I had 55 of them.

CREAMY CUSTARD FILLING:

1¼ cups milk (1 cup plus 2 tbsp.)
¼ cup flour
6 tbsps. sugar
1-6 tsp. salt
4 tbsps. 18 per cent (table) cream
1 large egg
4 tbsps. 35 percent cream (whipping)
½ tsp. vanilla

Heat milk in double boiler. In a small bowl mix together thoroughly the flour, sugar, and salt, then stir in the 18 percent cream to a smooth paste. Stir into hot milk in double boiler until thick. Beat egg in a cup, stir a little hot mixture into it and return to double boiler mixture stirring for one minute. Remove from heat and cool. Just before assembling, whip (below) with the 32 percent cream until stiff, add vanilla and fold into cooled custard. This is a perfect filling for many pastries requiring cream or creamy custard filling.

Not more than one hour before serving time, assemble croquem bouche by setting puff balls with sauce - edged knife, ¼ way through, leaving a hinge. Fill with creamy custard filling using a rounded measuring teaspoonful. Close puff. In heavy frying pan caramelize 2 cups granulated sugar, stirring constantly until all is melted and a deep gold. Cake a 9" pie plate (or if you have it, a stainless steel serving plate) slowly pour a thin layer of caramel. It hardens at once. Keep remaining caramel soft over very low heat.

Have caramel base beside hot caramel in pan on stove. (Turn stove off now.) Carefully dip hinge sections of filled puffs into hot caramel and arrange in a t o u c h i n g circle with more caramel-dipped puffs. The caramel dipped puffs will stay put. Continue dipping and building up layers, each circle a little smaller than the one below until you have 5 or 6 layers, topped with one puff. Used all 55 of mine and all behaved well and stayed put. Do not refrigerate. Let stand at room temperature until dessert time. Serve from top, 4 or 5 to a serving, using two tongs or a serving spoon and fork. One or two may cling together but the caramel is so crisp it breaks readily and is lovely and crunchy compared to the creaminess of the puffs. Boring cooks will wort this miracle on the first try. Less experienced cooks should remember "practice m a k e s perfect".

NOTES: 1) Use Creamy Custard Filling for filling cream puffs, shifting ¼ way through with saw-edged knife. My Choux Paste recipe will make from 20 to 24 cream puff-sized puffs. 2) Use Creamy Custard Filling for filling eclairs, slitting with saw-edged knife and frosting with chocolate icing. 3) For hors d'oeuvres Bouchettes", cut tops from tiny puffs and fill with rich creamed lobster or chicken, or rich chicken or turkey salad.

High School Students Observe Centennial Day

CAMPBELLFORD — Campbellford held a centennial day Wednesday with the dedication of a new centennial archway to get the day's events under way.

The archway is built into the highway opposite the first new high school and bears a plaque with the names of former students who lost their lives in two wars. R. B. Ingalls, representing the centennial committee in Ottawa, and student Lorne McKeown unveiled the plaque. Russell Rowe, MPP addressed the group.

Following the dedication, students assembled near local 30 on the Trent River to watch a canoe race. In the afternoon a parade was held. Mr. and Mrs. Ken Weeks were drawn in a carriage and a second following carrying principal L. Caughill and Mrs. Caughill and Major and Mrs. G. H. Free. The C.D.H.S. band and school choirs marshalled and the junior and senior cheer leaders each entered floats. Floats depicting a pioneer scene and an Indian scene also appeared. The school queen, Cathy Burgin and two princesses, Sherrie Dunford and Carol McVety, rode in a convertible.

A lacrosse game, tea dance and recognition of the centennial court closed the day's events.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Even though you're right in the room, a toddler can move faster than you would think possible, and a dangling cord on a table percolator are new toys for him to grab. The results could be disastrous.

Children just learning to walk will reach for anything they see. They have no sense of judgment and are unaware of danger. It's up to the parents to keep the surroundings as safe and child-proof as possible.

Push the coffee pot to the back of the kitchen counter or the stove. If there is a cord don't let it dangle where a child can give it a tug and pull over a pot of scalding coffee.

Ann Landers Wife Goes Looking For Husband on Job

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband sells insurance. He is sociable and handsome and women have always been attracted to him. Many of his clients live in the suburbs. He collects from them on a regular basis, which he says is better than depending on them to mail in the premiums. I know many of his clients, in fact, most of them went to high school with, and are pleasant and friendly. He has told me they fix coffee.

Three times in the last month I have needed him for emergencies. Once I ran out of money and twice our child became ill. I was in my car and went to look for him. Twice I found him having coffee in one woman's house and the third time he was standing on the porch talking.

I know I didn't like the idea of my looking for him but then I don't like the idea of him being so friendly with his clients. If he is not doing anything wrong, why does he object so strenuously? — MRS. Z-30.

ANN LANDERS

DEAR Z: Your husband has a right to be resentful. Do you know what you do to him in the eyes of his clients when you track him down?

You make him look as if he can't trust their husbands always manage to find something to worry about. If they fail to turn up solid evidence their imaginations manufacture something just as good. Drop the bloodhound act before you create a real problem.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Four years I've been meaning to write to you as a joke, to see if I could fool you into believing my letter was legitimate. Now I am writing the real thing.

Two months ago my sister was killed in a car accident. Her husband, Mike, was driving and I was in the car too. We weren't even scratched.

The accident was not Mike's fault. Everyone knows that, but I can't help hating him just the same. My folks keep inviting Mike over because they feel sorry for him and they want to show him they don't hold him responsible, but I'm getting so I can't stand the sight of the guy.

I've tried to talk to my school counselor but I can't get the words out. I end up pretending to talk about something else. Can you help me? — THE PRETENDER.

DEAR PRETENDER: Writing to me was a giant step in the right direction. Now you must unburden yourself to your school counsellor. Take this column in as an icebreaker. Hand it to the counsellor and say, "This is my letter." The rest will come.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Recently, a girl wrote to say her date (who had spent $16) was very let-down because she gave him only a verbal thank you for the evening.

You said, "If a girl wants to show her appreciation for a pleasant evening, a nice friendly 'thank you' plus a Methodist handshake is adequate."

Please tell me, Ann Landers, what is a Methodist handshake? — IGNORANCE IN NEW YORK.

DEAR NEW YORK: A Methodist handshake is a mid-Victorian term, which means "Greetings, friend" — or "Goodbye, Buddy."

Horticulturists Meet in Stirling

STIRLING — Mrs. Floyd Armstrong was hostess for the May meeting of Stirling Horticultural Society Monday evening. The centennial year goal of 300 members has been exceeded, with 332 names on the membership role. Almey crab trees were won by 21 members in a draw.

J. R. Belshaw reported on the clean-up campaign in the village and plans were completed for the sale of plants May 27. Five delegates were appointed to attend the provincial convention in Guelph June 21 to 23.

Mrs. Armstrong read an article on use of fertilisers and demonstrated how to make nylon ties from old hosiery to mark flowers.

Night Watchman A Necessity in Ghana

ACCRA (CP)—A night watchman is a household necessity in Ghana.

Without him a family could awaken one morning and find itself without any possessions, including the blankets they went to bed with.

The culprit is known among whites and Africans as the "thief man."

"He's as slick a thief as you'll find anywhere," says Mrs. James Bond, wife of an army officer attached to the Canadian high commissioner's office.

Georgs Brown of Moose Jaw, Sask., principal of a technical trades training school, adds that even with a dog and a watchman the slick thieves manage limited success.

Brown keeps a club at his bedside when he retires "not because I fear physical harm, but it's something to make a noise with if we have an intruder."

"They come from down wind so a dog doesn't get their scent. They are uncanny the way they can slip by a watchman and I don't think there's a lock that one loop them out.

"To boot they have a lot of nerve and seem to enjoy overcoming obstacles. To the thief man there's nothing wrong with stealing as long as they aren't caught. The only thing they feel is wrong is getting nabbed."

The thief man provides European - "All whites are known as Europeans in Ghana," says Brown—with some of their lifestyle social news.

Mrs. Bond recalled one face-to-face meeting with a thief man.

"During the night I got up to get a drink of water. As I reached for a glass I saw a form outside working on the window. I must have watched him several minutes. I was too drowsy to realize what was happening. When he finally got the window open, I said to him:

"What do you think you are doing?"

"He almost dropped in his tracks. He was gone before it hit me what had happened."

She added that while shopping women must watch their purses. "If you carry it by the strap you'll end up holding nothing but that part of the purse. They're so slick they can cut the straps and be gone before you now something is wrong. They're usually smart enough to wait until you're laggled down with goods or intently studying items in a shop."

Most businesses employ several night watchmen, usually Moslems because of their fighting prowess. But it is not a foolproof system.

One department store lost its jewelry one night despite a police guard outside and several watchmen inside. To add insult the thief used clothing material from the store to make a rope and slid out a front window to a main street to make his escape.

Dressed in typical Moslem garb, Ali, a night watchman, makes his rounds at a technical trades training school in Accra. The school, operated by Canadians, employs five men on a full-time basis to guard against thieves. Most families employ similar help to combat night raids by culprits known to Africans and whites as "thief men." (CP Photo)

British Scientist Working On Infertility of Women

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — A British scientist working in awesome infertility in women says animals may ultimately provide the necessary hormones.

Dr. E. A. Barker of the University of Birmingham, a member of a British team doing research on the problem, made the prediction at Queen's University where he is on a six-month Commonwealth Research Scholarship.

Dr. Barker estimates that one in 10 married couples cannot have children because of a hormone secreted in the pituitary gland, a small gland at the base of the brain that plays an important part in the growth of the body.

The hormone is FSH—follicular stimulating hormone — and Dr. Barker is seeking ways to increase the effectiveness of available FSH in infertile women.

He and Dr. Barker and his associates have succeeded in developing a sugar, known as NANA, which when injected doubles the effectiveness of the FSH already present in a woman's body.

The only source of FSH at present is from the bodies of dead women. Some researchers have been working on the production of synthetic FSH but it presents problems of its own, the main one being multiple births.

Dr. Barker says he is developing a new source of FSH by extracting it from animals and then modifying its molecular structure for human use, but he figures three years' work is ahead before FSH from animal sources will be readily available.

Remarks That Teeners Get Tired of Hearing

BY HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Parental remarks that teen-agers get tired of hearing:

"When I was your age, I knew the value of a dollar."

"For heaven's sake, Arnold, can't you even stand up straight? Maybe we'll have to get a board and prop you up like a tomato plant."

"You're not going out of the house dressed like that, young lady, so you might as well take it off right now."

"Wait until your father gets home, young man. He'll hear about your behavior."

"From the size of this month's phone bill, Susan, I can only suspect you've been making long - distance calls to the man in the moon."

"When I was your age, I walked three miles to school and thought nothing of it."

"What kind of college do you think will accept you with grades like those?"

"When I was your age, I never spoke like that to my parents. Why, I wouldn't have dared!"

"All kids are spoiled today — every last one of them."

"Your teeth are coming along just fine, Susan. But I think we'll have to leave these braces on for another six months at least."

"If you want the privileges of a grownup, why don't you begin to act like a grownup?"

"The only reason I can figure why teen-agers spend so much time on the phone is that they don't mind talking to each other — but can't stand looking at each other."

"Don't you think it is high time, young man, that you started to make up your mind what you want to do with your life?"

"Haven't you any pride?" "If you're old enough to go to a dance, young lady, you're more than old enough to help your mother around the house."

"When I was your age . . . when I was your age . . . when I was your age . . ."

The May meeting of the Women's Church Year of St. Thomas' Church was held recently in the Parish Hall, common room.

The speaker for the evening was Mrs. K. K. Nair. Born in India, she received her masters degree from the University of Madras. She gave a most vivid account of her life in India, and further illustrated her talk with a display of antique and modern Indian jewellery.

Mrs. Nair also demonstrated the correct way of wearing the traditional Indian sari, and several beautiful saris were modelled by Mrs. Vye Symonds, Mrs. J. Clarke, and Mrs. M. Workman.

Mrs. Nair was thanked by Mrs. V. Symonds, and a social hour brought the meeting to a close.

Hemlines Will Remain Above Knees

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal couturiers Fleur Bonaventure trade centre was the setting Tuesday for a Canadian International Fashion Market.

The market, described by the Canadian Textiles Institute as the first in Canada, was sponsored by seven member companies of the institute and 100 Canadian apparel manufacturers participated.

"Wash-it wearables" were featured in the show. They were modelled for 1,500 registered buyers present by models who appeared on raised dashes located at various points in the ballroom instead of on the conventional runway.

The clothes, selected by co-ordinator Molly Wolfe emphasized versatility of Canadian fabrics, and quality of workmanship. They were chosen to be a representative cross section of what could be seen in the sales rooms.

The fall preview indicated that hemlines would remain above the knees for dresses, but dip to mid-knee for coats. Coat and dress ensembles and pant suits remain the mainstay of a co-ordinated wardrobe.

Tent silhouettes for day and short dresses with peek-a-boo pants were predicted for evening wear.

Fabrics that are easy to care for were the most popular.

Earthy brown and autumn leave colors were featured for fall, and for the evening the little white dress took over from the little black dress.

Army Aids Student Visitors

MONTREAL (CP) — About 500,000 students from various parts of Canada are expected to have visited Expo 67 by the end of May under a special group-visit program for students.

The Canadian Army is pitching in with beds and blankets for some of the non-Montrealers among the youthful contingents.

The special program, known as Expo 67 Rendez Vous, will continue until June 16. It resumes Sept. 11 until Oct. 20, with the focus during this second period on students from the United States.

One Expo administrator at the plan said Friday most students now arriving under the arrangements come from Ontario, Quebec province and the Maritimes.

The scheme is designed to enable students from elementary and high schools to visit the fair as inexpensively and profitably as possible.

Students from outside Montreal can be accommodated either in the dormitories of colleges and other institutions—at $1 or $3 a night—or in their own stations at $1.50.

Also scaled at $1.50 is accommodation in such places as the arena at Verdun, a Montreal suburb.

The army has been providing the beds and blankets in the $1.50 quarters. The students bring their own sheets, towels and soap.

Two food concessionaires sell box lunches at 70 cents each to the student groups once those arrive at the St. Lawrence River site.

The lunches consist of one sandwich, a serving of fruit, milk and juice, and pastry.

Expo offers to all qualified schools below the college level a special "education" admission ticket, selling for 75½ cents in orders of more than 1,000 and 75 cents for those less than 1,000. The regular one-day ticket—or "passport"—to Expo costs $2.50, for children $1.25.

Expo stipulates that the schools must treat the visits as part of the school curriculum.

Strike Up The Band!

Bandsmen from Canadian Forces Base, Trenton, keep spectators warmed up in chill twilight as they await big fireworks display sponsored by city's Parkdale community Monday night.

Shazar Says Shalom at Expo Admits Israel Under Cloud

MONTREAL (CP) — President Zalman Shazar of Israel said "Shalom"... — a greeting of peace—to the crowds at Expo 67 Tuesday but he recognized that his 19-year-old republic is under "a dark cloud."

The president stood in Place des Nations to watch his country's flag raised at the fair.

Then he turned to reply to the welcome from Pierre Dupuy, commissioner - general of the fair, by saying that faith is a better future in essence is the secret of the survival of the Jewish people in spite of all the adversity and suffering.

Mr. Shazar spoke in Hebrew and his speech was translated by Gershon Avner, Israeli ambassador to Canada.

While he made no direct reference to the growing troubles between Israel and the United Arab Republic, he said at the end of his speech that "we don't harbor fear, but courage . . . we never lost faith."

He said Israel is not helpless and has great longevity and announced for "the safety of our country."

Later President Shazar toured the Israeli and Judaism pavilions, then was greeted by children from the Jewish day schools of the Montreal region.

At one time Mr. Avner addressed a group of youths and told them that if war breaks out in the Middle East, Israeli citizens in Canada may be called home to fight.

President Shazar inspected the usual guard of honor from the Royal 22nd Regiment at Place des Nations but when he reached the pavilion of Judaism he was met by a guard of honor of boy scouts of all faiths.

His congratulated Canada for the fair and its theme Man and his World.

President Shazar was the first of a procession of world leaders coming to the fair to be greeted by warm weather.

By noon the temperature was 54 and climbed into the 60s during the day.

The warm weather brought out large crowds, following the more than 1,000,000 who visited the fair during the three - day Victoria Day weekend.

By 12 midnight Tuesday 220,879 had visited Expo for a cumulative attendance of 6,621,547 since the fair started. Tuesday's statistically-predicted attendance was 129,530.

Rail Shopcraft Union Opposes Long Contract

MONTREAL (CP) — Representatives of 25,000 railway shopcraft workers walked angrily out of arbitration hearings Tuesday saying they would seek legal advice about the board's competence.

At issue is a decision by the board chairman — retired justice W. D. Roach — that the arbitrators may establish the length of the contract to be imposed on the shopcrafts and Canada's railways.

Union officials said the terms of reference which established the board in March do not leave it free to determine the contract length.

The two-year agreement originally requested by the seven affiliated shopcraft unions is also possible under the terms, union spokesmen said.

"The board has no right to impose a contract of a different length upon us," one union source said after the closed hearing was over.

Venetian Gondoliers See Fair

MONTREAL (CP)—Expo had seven Venetian gondoliers on its miles of canals and waterways during the weekend but the Italians spent almost as much time photographing the tourists as they did in singing.

The seven, members of the vocalist Gondolieri Lagune, entertained surprised visitors during their two-day stay but they also spent considerable time cruising the canals in the Italian pavilion's motorized gondolas.

One girl, who brightened romantically when she saw the group in a gondola, changed mood fast with a second look.

"Hey!" she said. "They got an outboard motor."

Witness Says Ford Told Jokingly of Killing His Mother

TORONTO (CP)— A 17-year-old married woman testified Tuesday that Wayne Ford told her jokingly four years ago that he had killed his mother and put her in the lake.

Susan White, who was then Susan McDonald, said Ford was accompanied at the time by a school friend, Ronald Wall, who has testified that he helped Ford dump a crated body into Lake Couchiching during the Victoria Day weekend of 1963.

Mrs. White was testifying during Ford's trial on a charge of murdering his 55 - year - old widowed mother, Minnie Ford, who disappeared from her Toronto home just before the Victoria Day weekend in 1963.

The Crown contends that a body found in Lake Couchiching near the Ford family cottage last October is that of Mrs. Ford.

Another witness Tuesday, a policeman, said that when he visited Ford's home in Toronto just after that weekend, Ford, 16 at the time, had shown signs of desperation.

Toronto Detective - Sergeant Roderick Marsh said he visited the home to enquire about Mrs. Ford. Wall arrived while he was talking to Ford and "a sudden, startled, desperate look" was exchanged by the two youths, the detective said.

Police Corporal Alfred Gilbey of Orillia, on the south shore of Lake Couchiching, testified that he was called to a car accident in the area on the Sunday of the Victoria Day weekend.

He said Ford, the driver of a 1959 Cadillac which had smashed into a telephone pole, told him the car belonged to his mother.

Ford said his mother was visiting friends near Parry Sound and had given him permission to use the car and have friends at the cottage, Cpl. Gilbey testified.

The Crown maintains that Ford killed his mother after an argument over money or use of the Cadillac.

Joan Charbonneau, 20, of Orillia, who knew Ford at Lake Couchiching, said she met Ford and Wall on a road during the 1963 weekend.

Ford's hair was damp and he said he and Wall had been out on the lake in a boat and had lost the back end of the boat, two jackets and an anchor, she said.

Wall and another school friend of Ford's, Larry Metcalfe, have testified that they took a crated body out on the lake in a boat, that the rear of the boat broke apart and that the three ended up in the water.

The trial continues under Mr. Justice D. E. Morand and a Supreme Court jury.

A&P a lot of your neighbours have stopped baking pies!

Maybe it's because they discovered Jane Parker Pies...by thousands have.

But...you say, "No thanks, there is nothing like a good home-baked pie." We agree...they're great."

But would you believe it if we told you our Jane Parker Pies taste home-baked? Probably not...until you've tried one.

Then you'd discover the crust is short and flaky like your own.

You'd discover the fruit is the kind you'd use... the best...juicy, not stiff with starch.

And if you popped a Jane Parker Pie into the oven and warmed it before serving, you'd discover a pie you'd be proud to call your own.

Are Jane Parker Pies a good reason for shopping A&P? They're one of many.

Warm Reception for Cool Idea

Close to 300 spectators were on hand last night for a look at Trenton's $57,000 swimming pool. Use of the pool began today.

Swim Pool Rated Best Along Lake

TRENTON — The "finest, most imaginative centennial project in Eastern Ontario" . . . one which makes the town "the envy of every community along the lakefront east of Toronto," were words used to describe the Tri-Service Club swimming pool in the high school which was officially opened last night.

Douglas Whitley, finance chairman of the Trenton Board of Education, told 300 persons at the opening, it was a project of which they could be proud.

Once Mayor James MacDonald had cut the ribbon to the pool entrance and the spectators toured the pool area, the truth of Mr. Whitley's words became apparent. The walls of the pool are painted a pale turquoise and this is echoed by the pale turquoise of the pool lining.

Members of the three service clubs, Lions, Kiwanis and the instigators, Rotarians, were praised for their efforts. Also coming in for their share of accolades were the members of the special swimming pool committee.

But the main emphasis was placed on members of the public who underwrote the $57,000 cost.

The pool was handed over to E. M. Parker Jr., chairman of the school board, by the presidents of the three service clubs.

Following the opening, a fashion show of bathing costumes, past and present, was put on by students. A diving and life saving demonstration brought the evening's activity to a close.

The pool will now be used by students and public swimming starts tonight, under the direction of recreation director, William Workman. Regular classes in swimming and life saving will start in the fall.

Doorway to Pleasure

Trenton Mayor James MacDonald cuts the ribbon opening the community's new swimming pool.

Countries Seek Oil In Pacific

TOKYO (Reuters) — Japan, South Korea, Formosa and The Philippines have agreed to start an extensive search for off-shore oil.

Japan is to play a leading role in the venture, starting this year, by making available equipment and experts to the other three countries, and training their engineers.

The object is to find promising oil reserves on the Asian marine shelf such as the huge off-shore oil and natural gas deposits of the Gulf of Mexico, the Persian Gulf, around Australia and Alaska, and in the North Sea.

Western countries, including the United States, Britain, France and West Germany, have sent observers to meetings of the four Far Eastern nations sponsored by the United Nations Commission for Asia and the Far East.

West Germany has already offered to supply free a survey ship and technical experts.

British Aid Foreign Fishermen

BERWICK UPON TWEED, England (AP)—Foreign fishing craft are back near the British shore for the spring catch, and the British taxpayer will wind up paying part of the bill.

Fishermen from Russia, Poland, Germany and other countries like the North Sea inshore fishing grounds because they have a lot of herring and also because Britain supplies free medical services under its national health plan.

A Polish trawler with an injured man radioed for help last year. Within an hour a helicopter had lifted the man from his craft, 190 miles offshore, and put him in a lifeboat for transfer to a hospital. There was no charge, although the rescue and hospital care cost about $1,200.

British inshore and midwater trawlermen are concerned about the increasing number of what they call "marauding" trawlers. They assert some of these foreigners ignore international fishing regulations and usually end up ripping the nets of the Britons.

Russian Visitors Swarm to Expo Site; Take Over Entire Hotel for Accomodation

MOSCOW CP)—A small army of Russians has been headed for Canada in recent weeks to man the Soviet Union's $15,000,000 pavilion at the Montreal world's fair.

Anyone dropping into the Canadian Embassy can see stacks of Soviet passports waiting to be stamped with visas. More than 500 have already been issued for Russians going to Expo in some official capacity.

There's a certain amount of duplication — persons making several trips in supervisory roles require a visa each time— but it's expected about 600 Russians will end up going to Montreal as officials.

Besides its own pavilion, one of the largest at the fair, the Soviet Union is playing a prominent part in theme pavilions devoted to various aspects of man's scientific and creative activity.

To accommodate their big Expo mission the Russians have taken over an entire hotel on Montreal's Sherbrooke Street.

The big buildup for Expo in the Soviet press, which has been going on for several months, continues. Scarcely a day passes without mention of the fair in one of the big newspapers or magazines.

But while Russians' appetite for Expo may be whetted by the stories, a relatively small number will be able to see it.

At one time last year Soviet authorities were talking in terms of 2,000 or more Russian tourists going to Expo. Recently an official hinted that the cost of sending so many officials to Canada might cut down on the number of tourists.

The 2,000 figure may still prove to be right, however, since the Canadian embassy has received nearly 200 tourist visa applications in recent days.

Russians going abroad are not tourists in the ordinary sense of the word. They are carefully chosen on the basis of political reliability. And they always travel in groups, representing trade unions or other organizations.

The ordinary Soviet citizen could not hope to get a visa and the required foreign exchange to travel abroad by himself.

So far the government hasn't said who it will send to represent the U.S.S.R. at its national day Aug. 15. President Nikolai Podgorny has been invited by the Canadian government as head of state but the Kremlin could delegate someone else to go in his place.

Black Diamond Report

Export Trade Said Hampered by Outdated Farm Policies

Too many national farm policies are based on outdated theories, hindering world market sales, Black Diamond Cheese shareholders were told at their recent annual meeting.

Governments in many countries must gear their policies to modern business methods, company chairman Donald G. Joss warned as he presented his annual report.

Black Diamond net sales were up for the year — from $7,081,500 to $7,575,300. Earnings showed a slight increase — to $67,126 from $65,508.

Other salient statements in the report:

An increased export subsidy may be needed to support the traditionally - important British market;

Surplus has weakened possibilities of increased sales to the U.S.

Last year showed a noticeable decline in domestic cheese consumption.

In his survey of world market conditions, Mr. Joss warned that many farm policies are not valid today.

"In general, it's unfortunate that so many governmental agricultural policies, not only in Canada, but in other countries . . . are based on the outdated economic theories . . ."

Too often, he said, these theories relate value of goods to cost of production, taking no note of actual market demand.

"This makes it exceedingly difficult to forecast market conditions, because they are based as much on political decisions as market conditions.

"I would venture a guess . . . that we are gradually reaching a point of increasing production with decreasing demand on many dairy products again."

Mr. Joss said there was no argument "the farmer has not been sharing proportionally in the economic growth of the country and is caught in a cost-price squeeze."

To solve the problem, world governments "will have to bring many of their agriculture policies into line with the concept of the modern business farm, be it public or private.

"Farm policies predicated on the pioneer family-farm concept are no longer valid today, even though many are still in use," warned Mr. Joss.

Meantime, the 1967 m a rket outlook again is clouded by "more governmental activity and interference" in the dairy industry.

Farmers' demands for higher milk prices likely will result in further government subsidies, and a probable increase in fresh cheese prices up to 46 cents, the report states.

In 1967, this could further complicate reasons for a "noticeable decline" in domestic cheese consumption noted last year.

The United Kingdom, traditional big customer for Canadian cheddar, m,a i n t a i n e d a strong demand last year, because an export subsidy was maintained.

"If this export market is expected to be maintained and increased, an increased subsidy will have to be implemented," claimed Mr. Joss. "It is unlikely that the United Kingdom buyer will pay very much more for Canadian cheese, especially in view of the weakening world price on cheese generally."

Meantime, hopes for increased U.S. sales have proven premature, the chairman confessed.

Mr. Joss said an unfortunate situation had developed, whereby the market has been weakened by surplus.

"It is unlikely that an improvement in the export situation to that country will take place during the year."

Meantime, company policy has been actively pursued to eliminate slow-moving and unprofitable lines, and introduction of new products to match rapidly-changing demands of the Canadian consumer.

Net earnings of the company at $67,126 were slightly under one per cent of sales.

"As we pointed out last year, this is about one-half the industry average, and must be considerably improved," said Mr. Joss.

Production difficulties in mid-year led to excessive l o s s through spoilage.

Among the year's problems was the discovery that the claims of Canadian packaging suppliers for their material had not been borne out.

Black Diamond subsequently had to switch to American sources for its wrapping material.

Other financial statistics produced in the report, with comparisons for 1965 in brackets, included:

Net earnings per share, $7.46 ($7.28); cash dividends per share, $2 (unchanged); working capital, 311,600 (312,760) wages, salaries, employee benefits $341,400 ($485,100).

SPORTS SLICES

By Geo. H. Carver
Sports Editor

(ROME AP — Primo Carnera, former heavyweight champion of the world received a gold medal from an Italian sports organization in memory of his past victories in the ring. He was champion for a year from June, 1933.)

Several years ago when entering a wrestling dressing room in Memorial Arena I was surprised to see what I thought was a pair of violin cases placed sidebyside. Closer inspection revealed they were not fiddle receptacles but boots — and in the boots were feet.

Looking up at a 90-degree angle I saw one of the biggest men I have ever seen. He was swarthy with a crooked nose and battered features. He smiled when he saw me and hurled my right arm up to the elbow in a fist that was as big as a half-bushel basket.

He was Primo Carnera who earned a million dollars in the ring in the United States and was plucked almost clean by as mean a gaggle of vultures that ever picked a bone.

A few months after he amassed the million if he converted all his assets into one-dollar bills he could count the entire bundle in ten minutes.

The financial affairs of no man identified with pugilism ever has been subjected to such plundering as the calm, good-natured giant from Italy as his blind trust in men who used him merely to enrich themselves.

They figured if a battle grossed $20,000, their expenses totalled some $15,000. Then they would take their percentages and Carnera took home $1,250 instead of $12,000.

Their operating "expenses" included new automobiles for each and all. His first manager Leon See invested $100,000 of the Carnera money into real estate that wasn't worth one twentieth of that amount.

Carnera, disgusted, ended his contract with See who promptly enriched himself with selling stories exposing the trick methods used to exploit the fighter.

There is truth in the fact that Carnera, never a hitter, chalked up an imposing list of knockouts because the vultures influenced too many of the foemen to leap into a fake coma at the earliest feasible moment.

After all "expenses" had been deducted from the million dollars he should have had some $600,000. It is doubtful if he ever received more than $200,000. He had to pay his own expenses out of his cut through seven years. He had to stand plenty of treats to show he was a good fellow. He bought a home for his parents in Italy, gave them some of his money. He was a sucker for the "touch vultures."

He finally gave up his ring career after losing the title to Max Baer in 1934 and sailed for home a broken, bitter disillusioned man who would have to shake his head if someone offered him Fort Knox for $10,000.

Carnera ran away from home as a youngster and joined a circus in Italy. He did strong-man exhibitions and wrestled all comers besides loading baby elephants into box cars.

One night a foreman felt Primo was not lifting with sufficient speed. He kicked Carnera in the face breaking his nose. Primo chased him, failed to catch him and in his rage picked up a wagon shaft and battered everything in the vicinity into fragments.

The gendarmes chased him but he was away and running not stopping until he reached France. There he landed a job in a brickyard. One day a horse that did the hauling took sick so Primo decided to pinch-hit for Dobbin.

The hired help strung the tile on ropes and hung the ropes around Carnera's neck. They yelled "giddy-up" and Primo did what the horse used to do — hauled the tile to the exit gate.

Paul Journee, retired French heavyweight, spotted Carnera hauling the tile and was impressed by his size and tremendous strength. He tipped off See who soon had the huge Italian under contract.

His first big bouts were with Young Stribling. He fought him twice winning and losing on finish. Then came a gaggle of stumblebum victories and Carnera was ready for the sacrifice in the United States.

His top earning was $122,782 when he lost the title to Baer. He received $16,000 when he won the title from Jack Sharkey. In 1935 he was paid $66,000 for being knocked over by Joe Louis. He picked up money on the side as an "author" or for "testimonials."

Today he is 60, a broken, seriously-ill shadow of his former huge self.

But the warm hearted Italians had not forgotten. Hundreds cheered Carnera at a restaurant on the outskirts of Rome during the moving ceremony.

BOLTON — Gary Bowerman of Maple Downs Country Club, formerly of Belleville, and Bob Rose, North York, were runners-up in the Bolton Pro-Am Golf Tournament shooting a best-ball 64. Frank Whibley, Scarboro, and Bill Kozak, Don Valley, won it with a 63. Tom McAllistir and Tommy Woodal won the amateur title with a 66.

Absolute Authority

CAHA; Monarch Of All It Surveys!

SASKATOON (CP)—The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association has reworked its constitution, giving itself absolute authority to govern. It then ratified a new five-year agreement with the National Hockey League.

The constitutional amendments, unanimously endorsed Tuesday by delegates to the annual meeting, are designed primarily to keep amateur hockey disputes out of the courtroom.

Basically, they declare that the CAHA is a fully self-governing organization whose executive committee has absolute powers to interpret, define and establish all provisions of the CAHA constitution, bylaws, regulations and rules.

Appeals are limited to the executive committee. There is provision for an automatic indefinite suspension of any member or individual who appeals to the courts.

The suspension would be lifted only if the courts make a judicial finding that the CAHA or its executive committee acted in bad faith or had not complied with the rules of natural justice.

The amendments are based on recommendations by Winnipeg lawyer Martin Freedman, who was retained by the CAHA after an Alberta Supreme Court case last February.

Calgary Spurs went to court when the CAHA overruled the Alberta branch and declared two players ineligible to play for the Western Canada Senior Hockey League club.

Mr. Justice H. W. Riley ruled Dave Parenteau and Emory Thompson eligible, differing with the CAHA interpretation of its rules and termed the CAHA action "officious and not in harmony with its own constitution." An appeal was rejected.

The new NHL agreement will reshape amateur hockey operations by doing away with direct professional sponsorship. The two groups are to establish a joint development committee whose purpose will be to form a program to expand the number and calibre of amateur players in North America.

The NHL will finance a CAHA administrative fund, a player development fund and a draft claim fund. Preliminary amounts mentioned were $75,000 annually for administration, $250,000 for player development and $1,000 for each of the first 72 players taken in a draft of over-age junior players and $2,000 for each additional player.

The CAHA will distribute the draft money to clubs who helped develop the drafted player.

The pact will not permit a player to turn professional until he has completed his junior hockey. As of the 1968-69 season, the bandage limit will be 20 years on or before Dec. 31, and junior-age players will not be allowed to go to professional clubs on a five-game trial basis.

Blanks Mets 7-0

Drysdale; 2nd Shutout In Row!

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Don Drysdale, handed the role of stopper for Los Angeles Dodgers when Sandy Koufax retired, is responding to the challenge as if he were a left-hander with an arthritic elbow.

Drysdale hurled his second straight shutout and lowered his earned-run average to 1.43 Tuesday night with a 7-0 victory over New York Mets.

It was the best pitched game in the National League where San Francisco Giants shaded Philadelphia Phillies 5-4 in 11 innings, Houston Astros battered Pittsburgh Pirates 9-3, Atlanta Braves thumped St. Louis Cardinals 9-4, Cincinnati's game at Chicago was rained out.

The Dodgers scored four runs on one hit in the first inning with Met starter Chuck Estrada contributing four walks and a wild pitch to the rally which was climaxed by Al Ferras's bases - loaded double.

DON DRYSDALE
... big right-hander allowed just five hits and retired 12 straight Mets over one stretch

After that it was all Drysdale, it was his 39th career shutout, leaving him one short of the Dodgers' club record held by Koufax.

Drysdale's record is 4-3 now with his sizzling scoreless streak.

The shutout Tuesday gave him a string of 28 consecutive scoreless innings and he has allowed just three earned runs in the last 42 innings he has pitched.

The Giants beat the Phillies when Jesus Alou opened the 11th with a triple and rode home on Ollie Brown's sacrifice fly.

Brown's fourth home run and two throwing errors by Rich Allen had helped the Giants build a 4-2 lead but Don Lock's two-run single in the eighth following a single by Allen and a double by Johnny Callison tied it.

Tony Taylor homered for Philadelphia.

Houston's Chuck Harrison drove in four runs with a pair of doubles and Larry Dierker chalked up his fifth game as the Astros defeated Pittsburgh.

Dierker also had two hits and drove in a pair of runs with a double. He held the Pirates to six hits in the seven innings he worked.

The Astros bunched four hits and three walks for five runs off loser Billy O'Dell, 4-1, and Vern Law in the fifth inning with Harrison's second two - run double the key blow.

Cleto Boyer stroked three straight hits, scoring one run and driving in two others for the Braves against the Cardinals.

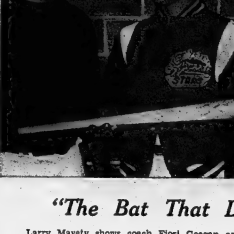
Six singles, two of them swinging bunts by shortstop Marty Martinez and pitcher Jay Ritchie, helped Atlanta to a four - run fourth inning that opened up a 9-4 lead for the Braves.

Lou Brock slammed a two-run homer for the Cardinals and Gary Oliver connected with the bases empty for Atlanta.

Rules Changes Made

SASKATOON (CP)—A handful of rule changes for the 1967-68 season were approved at the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association annual meeting Tuesday.

One amendment will increase the number of faceoff spots in the centre ice area to three by placing one red spot two feet in diameter five feet from each blueline in the centre of the rink.



Delegates decided a minor penalty should be assessed any player, including the goalkeeper, for using a stick which does not conform to specifications outlined in the CAHA rule book.

Starting next season when a match penalty has been assessed, the offending player's team shall receive a major penalty as well which must be served by a substitute player.

When a goalkeeper leaves his goal crease to join in a fight or altercation, not as peacemaker, or take part in another fight he shall receive a game misconduct penalty.

In the case of a delayed whistle on a possible penalty which is preceded by a goal the penalty will not be assessed.

Other changes will see play stopped immediately when the puck crosses the goal line on an icing call and a faceoff at centre ice when a referee or linesman errs in calling an icing infraction. The first icing rule previously applied only to junior hockey.

"The Bat That Did It"

Larry Mavety shows coach Fiori Goegan and winning pitcher Don Masters the bat he used to drive in the deciding run in Belleville Lombanks' 6-5 EOBA senior baseball victory over Brockville Beavers last night. Mavety smiles and why not? He had three hits with it in all.

Slip Past Brockville 6-5

Lombanks Win It In Ninth

By GARRY ALEXANDER
Staff Sportswriter

Larry Mavety stroked his third hit of the night, a wrong-field triple, in the bottom of the ninth inning to give Belleville Lombanks a 6-5 squeaker over Brockville Beavers here last night.

The win marked the return of senior baseball to this centre after several years absence. Lombanks travel to Little Britain for another EOBA tilt tonight and are at home to Kingston one week from tonight.

Cool, football weather made for a sparse crowd and contributed greatly to the total of ten errors in the contest.

Belleville fought from behind all night, down by one in the third, 4-2 in the sixth and 5-3 before scoring twice in the eighth to set up the winning marker.

Anselstine was grazed by an inside pitch with one out and Mavety slashed a sinking shot to right field, chasing home the game-winning run as outfielder Art Pearce missed in a diving attempt to block the ball.

Back in the eighth, Mavety's pop single to left ignited the tying rally. A wild pitch and an infield error got one home. A throwing miscue on Hill's sacrifice bunt and Boomhower's sacrifice fly tied it.

Don Masters, who hurled the last two innings in relief of Bill Latchford, chalked up the win, touched for one run on two walks and an error. He fanned three, including two in the ninth. Latchford gave up Brockville's five hits, two of them infield scratches, while striking out 13 and passing five.

Wayne Crowder, taking over from Duke Murphy in the fourth, took the loss. Crowder allowed four of Lombanks' seven hits, fanned eight and walked two. Murphy struck out two and walked two.

Walks, errors, a wild pitch and an infield hit put the Beavers two up in the top of the third but Latchford, Anselstine and Mavety singled in succession and an error plated another to tie it.

Forrest's base hit, a stolen base and a throwing error made it 3-2 in the fifth. Miller singled and rode home on Forrest's two-out double for a 4-2 count in the top of the sixth.

Boomhower singled with two down and took second when the ball was juggled by the Lombanks' sixth. Pinch-hitter McKibbon singled him in but Brockville scored again on the pair of free passes and another bobble in the eighth.

But Mavety and crew took it from there.

Backing Mavety's two singles and triple on the Lombank attack were Siu Muirhead, Pat Anselstine, Carl Boomhower and John McKibbon with a base hit each.

Jim Forrest, with a double and single, was best for Brockville. Keith Miller, Jack Coughlin and Brian McRobie split the others.

The Percival Case

McCredie; Given Stimulant Pills!

TORONTO (CP) — Shot-putter Nancy McCredie, who said she once skidded her former coach Lloyd Percival, testified in court Tuesday that Percival gave her pills which she believed to be Benzedrine, a stimulant.

Miss McCredie, a former member of the Don Mills Track Club, was testifying at a trial of libel action brought by Percival against five members of the central Ontario branch of the Amateur Athletic Union who have charged Percival with giving athletes stimulants and advise to improve their performances.

The athletes told a civil jury of four men and two women that Percival, former head coach and director of the Don Mills club, used to give her heart-shaped pills and tell her to take one an hour before competing.

She told the court that when Percival first gave her one of the pills, he said it was "just to relax you."

Asked how she regarded Percival at that time, Miss McCredie replied "I idolized him. I looked on him as my father. He predicted two Canadian records for me, and he was right. I trusted him fully. He was my coach. I was an athlete. I thought him the greatest coach in the world."

The defendants in the case are Fred Foot, George Denahan, Jack Brookfield, Doreen Davies and Jesse Lightwood who form the registration committee for Ontario of the AAU.

The trial is continuing before Mr. Justice Alexander Shartz.

Miss McCredie said she received pills from Percival only before big events and occasions he advised her not to let anyone see her taking them.

She said she received pills from Percival before the 1963 Pan-American Games in Brazil and the 1964 Olympics in Tokyo but did not use them on either occasion.

. . . SHATTERED

Miss McCredie said she did not tell Percival she was not taking the pills because she was afraid of him. She said that after the AAU began its investigation of Percival she received a message from him, delivered by high-jumper Susan Nigh, to keep her mouth shut or he would get her.

Miss Nigh gave her two pills on a plane flight to Toronto from Vancouver last year and said they had come from Percival, Miss McCredie said.

She testified she gave the pills to her parents and later produced them, at Foot's request, at an AAU meeting convened by the Ontario registration committee.

Miss McCredie denied being expelled from the Don Mills club and said she had confronted Percival about certain rumors, which he admitted.

"I thought my little old hero was going down the drain," she said.

Leaf Hurler Tosses First No-Hitter

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Right-hander Dave Vineyard of Toronto's Maple Leafs must feel a sense of satisfaction today after turning in the first no-hitter of the International League season — and against leading Rochester Red Wings.

For five years the lanky six-foot-three, 190-pounder toiled for Rochester and never came up with a no-hitter for the team, beat Toledo Mud Hens at Toledo July 28.

But the Wings still dealt him off at the end of the season, never expecting he would come back, as so many in league, besides do, to haunt them.

Vineyard's satisfaction must be a little dimmed, though, since he threw the 2-1 victory with only six Toronto fans on in the low 50-degree temperature to appreciate his effort.

In other games, Buffalo Bisons climbed closer to the leaders, in second place, with a pair of victories over Syracuse Chiefs, 1-0 and 4-2, and Richmond Braves clobbered Columbus Jets 8-3. Jacksonville at Toledo was postponed because of cold.

Combines Stop The Press

The Departmental Softball League schedule opened last night with the Combines using an eight - run fifth inning to whip The Intelligencer 9-1, All eight runs came after two were out.

Electric Motors and Combines meet in tonight's 8.30 game, All games are played at Prince Charles School.

Gary Reid pitched the victory while Ron Culbertson was the loser as errors helped mar the night pitching battle in the fifth. It was 1-1 score until the explosion with each club scoring once in the fourth.

Reid also led the Combines' attack with a double and single. Bill Ferguson had a home run, Bob Dafoe and Bill Mowatt a double each.

"Moe" Switzer paced The Intelligencer with a double and single while Merv Thompson hit a two - bagger.

The Intelligencer filed a protest with the league executive immediately following the game, claiming the use of an ineligible player by the Combines.

Green Gaels Win Over Mimico 23-6

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Oshawa Green Gaels and Toronto Township recorded victories Tuesday night in the Ontario Lacrosse Association Junior A series to remain tied for first place.

Oshawa, paced by Phil Clayton's five goals, defeated Mimico Mounties 23-6 and Toronto Township downed the winless St. Catharines Lakeides 14-8. Both winning clubs have four victories in five starts.

Huntsville Hawks stayed two points back of the league leaders by trouncing Hastings Legionnaires 20-6 in the only other game played.

Charlie Marlowe scored four goals and Jim Higgs added three for Oshawa. Peter Vincent, Larry Lloyd and Tom Vass scored two apiece.

Single Oshawa goals went to John Clayton, Mike Lewis, Wayne Davidson, Dwight Davies and Bill Leagley.

Bill Manly and Kevin Ellis scored two goals each for Mimico and Charlie Henderson and Fred Compeau added the others.

Orioles Blank Yankees Again

Rocky; Rolls Nats With 3-Run Homer

By DICK COUCH
Associated Press Sports Writer

Last week Rocky Colavito grimly stated half a dozen arguments for steady work in the Cleveland Indians' outfield.

Tuesday night the stubby slugger changed his thinking and came up with the best arguments of all — a three-run homer in the 10th inning that gave the Indians a 4-1 victory over Washington.

"I was thinking, 'Just let me get a base hit,'" the 35-year-old veteran said, "I had no idea of hitting a home run."

Elsewhere in the American League, Chicago White Sox edged Minnesota Twins 5-4 and moved into first place, one-half game ahead of Detroit Tigers, who bowed to Boston Red Sox 5-2. Baltimore Orioles nipped New York Yankees 1-0 and California Angels topped Kansas City Athletics 3-2.

Cleveland starter Gary Bell pitched 8 2-3 hitless innings and had a two - hit shutout until pinch hitter Cap Peterson slammed a one - out homer in the ninth.

Colavito stepped the deadlock after Frickly walked Chico Salmon and Chuck Hinton in the 10th.

Ron Hansen's three - run homer keyed a four-run rally in the sixth that lifted the White Sox past Minnesota, ending the Twins' winning string at four. Pete Ward also honored for the White Sox. Harmon Killebrew and Cesar Tovar connected for Minnesota.

Left-hander Dennis Bennett, who relied only from John Wyatt, checked the Tigers while Carl Yastrzemski's two - run homer and a bases - empty blast by Rico Petrocelli provided Boston's winning margin.

The Orioles shut out the Yankees for the second night in a row as Frank Bertaina and Eddie Watt collaborated on a four-hitter. Dave Johnson lashed a triple, off Mel Stottlemyre in the second inning and scored the game's only run on a single by Andy Etchebarren.

Californias spotted the Athletics a 1-0 lead when Jack Sanford balked a run across in the second inning. This charged ahead in the sixth on Jim Fregosi's solo homer and Jimmie Hall's two-run wallop.

Ellis, Picton Clash In Opener

Tonight's scheduled Quinte - KASA softball game, Kingston Lions Bus Service at Picton Elks Memorial, has been postponed because the floodlights at the Picton park are not ready for use.

Picton opens the season in Belleville tomorrow (Thursday) with an 8.30 game against Ellis Printers, at Alemite Park. It will be the first start for both clubs.

Germans Lead Bicycle Race

MONTREAL (CP)—The German team took over the lead Tuesday night in the Montreal International six - day bicycle race.

The Germans moved ahead of the Belgium A squad with a total of 85 sprint points. The Belgians, one lap off the pace, had 160 sprint points at 1:30 a.m. today.

Five other teams trailed the Germans by one lap, but the Belgium A team's higher sprint points total gave them second place.

Canada was last in the 10-team field, five laps behind the German team and with 30sprint points.

Cheesemen Win Opener

By ROBERT SNEFJELLA

The Commercial Softball League launched its 1967 season at the Alemite last night, with Black Diamond Cheese meeting last year's champions, Stewart Warner. The Cheesemen showed little respect for the "champs", though as they trounced them 10-4 in seven slightly rusty innings of softball.

More was displayed than just the ball game, however, as the opening ceremonies testified. Gell Chapman's Majorettes started the evening off, and following the Duke of Edinburgh Unit 201 A'NAF pipes and drums, performed for the audience. A demonstration team from the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment finished the show off by dismantling and assembling a jeep.

Before the start of the ball game, Mayor Jack Ellis threw the first pitch to Alderman Don Jones, with Stan Hagerman, president of Stewart Warner, at the bat.

In the game, cold temperatures made matters difficult for the pitchers involved, with a total of 13 walks being handed out. The batters were also busy, as they connected for 15 hits, six of them for extra bases.

The winners pushed across two runs in the second and added six more in the next two frames before Warner pitcher Doug Ellis was relieved. Ellis gave up six hits and walked 10 in five innings, while striking out four. Jim Reams allowed two hits and walked two in the remainder of the contest.

Black Diamond pitcher Bob Swan was steady on the mound, as he gave up seven hits and walked only two. He threw third strikes past seven.

Gene Francis led the winners with a triple and single. "Pee" Keller and Sam Aherne each stroked a pair of base hits, while singletons went to Ross Empey and Jack Francis.

Left-fielder Moe Hawkins tripled for Stewart Warner. Other hitters for the losers were Rod Turner, Doug Ellis, Garry Gow, Cliff Hinsman, Chuck Rowbotham and Rick Dalnard.

At Expo 67 —

Open Olympic House

MONTREAL (CP)— Olympic House, first international exhibition of the Olympic movement, was opened at Expo 67 Tuesday with officials emphasizing its international character.

The low concrete building filled with memento of past Olympics, is graced with the sculpture of Myron, the Discus Thrower, which stands at the entrance of the Olympic Stadium in Helsinki but was loaned to Olympic House for duration of the fair.

The building has plaques from all nations in past Olympics and occasionally Canadians can be spotted in the crowds, but there is not a name to be found.

"This is not a hall of fame," said Hesk W. Roppener, director of Olympic House and also executive director of the Canadian Olympic Association, at the opening ceremony.

"We have refrained from over-emphasizing Canadian participation and have tried to be as genuinely international as possible."

Roppener said Olympic House was built to become the shrine of the Olympic movement. In its spare, exterior lines it holds a 20th-century reminder of the Temple of Zeus at Olympia in Greece.

"Without the help of countless people in countless ways, we could not have come this far for less than $1,200,000," he said. Total cost of the project was not expected to exceed $500,000.

Faces Serious Charge

CALGARY (CP) — Fullback Lovell Coleman of Calgary Stampeders Tuesday elected jury trial when he appeared in court charged with using an instrument with intent to procure a miscarriage.

The 29 - year - old star with the Western Football Conference club since he joined it in 1960, was remanded to June 1 for preliminary hearing.

Coleman, married and father of a young son, was arrested Saturday and freed on $500 bail. He was charged after the accusation to hospital of a 19-year-old girl reported suffering from shock and loss of blood.

The football club said it knew nothing about the case.

Coleman was voted Canada's outstanding player in 1964, named to the All-Canadian and All-Western teams in 1962, 1964 and 1965 and voted Calgary's Athlete of the Year in 1965. He has signed a 1967 contract with the Stampeders.

Angel Derby In Air

MONTREAL (CP)— A group of 120 women flyers, ranging from girls in their 20s to grandmothers, checked their flight plans Tuesday night in preparation for the start today of the Angel Derby, the women's international air race between Montreal and Miami.

The women came to Expo for Tuesday for a round of receptions and briefings before their take-off on the 1,800-mile flight to Florida.

The planes, mostly single-engine models, will take off at one-minute intervals from Montreal International Airport, and will be clocked from the time their wheels leave the ground to the time they touch down again.

Could Be A Soccer Classic

LISBON (AP) — Thursday's European Cup of Champions final between Glasgow Celtic and Internazionale Milan could turn out to be a soccer classic.

If the teams play true to form it could be a duel between the all-out attacking methods of Celtic and the superbly-drilled defence of Inter.

"We play to score goals," Celtic manager Jock Stein said. "Inter plays to stop goals. That's the difference between us."

"Technically, they are superior to us. Also, they have more experience."

If the teams are even after 90 minutes, they will play an extra half-hour. If they are still tied, a replay will be staged in the same stadium Saturday.

Celtic are the first British team to reach the final of the big European tournament.

$6,880,000 Budget

Pan-Am Games; Costs Levelled

WINNIPEG (CP) — Morris Neaman and Ken Sarachan the men in charge of the new stadium, are doing their best to keep the cost of the 1967 Pan - American Games within a $6,880,000 budget.

"We are committed to the budget and are doing everything we can to hold this figure," said Neaman, finance board chairman for the Pan-American Games Society.

"The budget is so controlled as is humanly possible in an organization with 4,000 volunteers."

The money they're watching so carefully comes from the federal government — $2,250,-000; the Manitoba government — $2,147,826; and the City of Winnipeg — $777,107. The difference must come from earned revenue.

Neaman, honorary treasurer of the Manitoba Medical Service and president of Neaman Furs Ltd., has a strict rule for committee requests for funds. "They must be within the budget, reasonable and sensible."

It all started with careful allocations. The main items — $4,982,000 — was put aside for facilities including $2,800,-000 for Canada's first indoor Olympic-size swimming and diving pool, $900,000 for a track and field stadium, $400,-000 for a cycling track and $300,000 for more seats in Winnipeg Stadium.

"A public organization using public funds never got as much for its money as we got," Neaman said. "The beauty is that all the facilities will be left for the permanent use of the residents of Winnipeg."

After the July 22-Aug. 7 games, ownership of the track stadium reverts to the University of Manitoba, the swimming pool to the city of Winnipeg and the cycling velodrome to Winnipeg Enterprises Corporation, a city-run organization which operates Winnipeg Stadium and Winnipeg Arena.

Comptroller Strachan's neat records show $832,000 is earmarked for organization—the care and handling of more than 3,000 athletes and officials from 25 countries in North, Central and South America. Scheduled in this category include $337,000 for transportation and $267,000 for operation of the Pan-American Games village.

Under the heading finance, $42,000 is entered for administration, salaries, office rent and other miscellaneous expenses including $85,000 for ticket promotion.

The actual running of the 36 events in 23 sports is allotted $383,400. Most of this goes for equipment—$113,-400 for 45 yachts, $32,500 for gymnastics gear and $29,000 for rowing shells.

"We even know how many hammers we're buying to the penny," said Strachan, who has handled the books for Winnipeg Enterprises Corp. and the Winnipeg Football Club.

Promotion is the country cousin on the budget ladder, working with $231,000 to attract the all-important customer.

Ticket revenue to March 31 was $300,000 and Strachan has deposits on more than half the sports equipment, a salvage operation expected to bring in $200,000.
